Senate Kills House Cuts In Farm Measure

Byrd Set Back In Effort to Hold FSA Appropriation To $25,319,557

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The Senate yesterday wiped out House economy slashes in the big Agriculture appropriation bill as the Administration joined hands with the farm bloc under a "food for victory" slogan.

Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, was turned back, 48 to 16, in an effort to hold FSA appropriations to the $25,319,557 approved by the House.

The Senate raised the figure to $50,319,557 and then by a voice vote increased the authorization for rural rehabilitation loans from 70 to 125 million dollars.

Byrd Also Defeated Earlier

Earlier Byrd was defeated 43 to 25 in an effort to pare $3,200,000 from the Agriculture Department's 16 millon dollars allotment for travel. The Senate approved a $1,500,000 travel cut, against an eight million dollars slash asked by the House.

Restoration of FSA cash appropriations, and the 55 million dollars increase in rural loan authorizations followed supplemental estimates sent to the Appropriations Committee by the President several days ago with a plea that the added funds be voted to encourage war production of food.

In the face of certain defeat, Byrd went ahead with his economy fight "for the record." He was joined by Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, who charged "wasteful and extravagant" FSA spending and hurled at C. B. Baldwin, head of the agency, the cry of "Communist."

Pepper Defends Baldwin

"I think it (FSA) is the worst setup we have in the Government," McKellar told the Senate. "I want to be perfectly frank. I think Mr. Baldwin is a Communist. I do not think he is in favor of our American institutions."

Baldwin was defended by Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida and Alabama's two Democratic Senators Hill and Bankhead denied the charge of Communist "in justice to Mr. Baldwin." They said they were familiar with his views "and there was nothing to give basis for such a charge.

McKellar said Baldwin "is doing the poorest job of almost any job performed by anyone connected

Eastern Air Lines Cuts Trips to N. Y. To Eight Daily

Daily roundtrip plane schedules between New York and Washington on Eastern Air Lines will be reduced from 29 flights to eight flights starting tomorrow, Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, E. A. L. president, announced yesterday.

This curtailment of "merry go round" schedules, Rickenbacker said, resulted from "the Army need for cargo and transport planes, and the desire to cooperate in the war effort to the fullest extent." Other airlines meanwhile announced no change in schedules.

Shedules to southern points include:

Four flights daily to Miami with connections to Havana, Puerto Rico, and both coasts of South America, via Pan American Airways System.

Four flights daily to Atlanta with two continuing to the southwest, one to San Antonio, and one to Brownsville, Tex., via Houston, with connections to Mexico, Central and South America via Pan American Airways.

Rep. 'Pat' Boland Dies at Scranton

Representative Patrick J. Boland Pennsylvana, Democratic whip of the House under three Speakers, died yesterday in his home at Scranton, Pa.

The House recessed for the day and the Senate drew up a resolution of sorrow. Funeral services were set for Thursday morning.

B Card Holders Who Save Gas Can Use Excess for Pleasure

Price Administrator Leon Henderson ruled yesterday that legitimate holders of B gasoline ration cards who save gas by doubling up with other drivers or by other economies can use the fuel "for any purpose they desire." The "any purpose," of course, would include pleasure driving.

OPA officials explained, however, that use of gas for pleasure virtually eliminates the possibility of getting extra rations if the motorist should use up his quota before the temporary rationing period ends July 1. Applications for supplementary rations by B card holders will get careful scrutiny from the local boards, it was emphasized.

The OPA also ruled that Government employes with official travel orders directing them to use their cars are entitled to gasoline without a ration coupon. Filling station attendants were told to honor these orders if:

1. They are on official form.
2. If the orders specifically direct the employe to use his motor car for the trip.

Heads of some Government agencies, however, apparently believing the OPA ruling on gas for holders of travel orders provides a loophole for extra gas, moved to tighten the rules on issuing travel orders. Several bureaus have started to require written consent for the use of cars to plug the suspected loophole.

In addition, Federal officials of at least two war agencies who hold the unlimited X gas ration cards have been told to surrender them and inquiries about high-allowance card holders in other agencies have been started. For details see Federal Diary on page 17.

The words "legitimate B card holders" were emphasized. Henderson said that rationing boards through the 17-State Eastern rationing area would check on X (unlimited) and B-3 (57 gallons for seven weeks) cards to see if they had been issued to "chiselers."

Stabilized Pay To Be Put Up To President

Freezing Reported Studied With Revision Only After Hearings

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt may soon be called on to issue a new directive on wage stabilization, possibly including a national freezing of pay, adjustable only after hearings before the War Labor Board and a new series of regional sub-boards, it was reported yesterday.

The proposal to submit to the White House the whole problem of stabilization, inactivated since the President's message to Congress three weeks ago, was made yesterday at an interdepartmental meeting on the subject, called by War Labor Board Chairman William H. Davis.

A. F. L. Pact Reported

Later last night the American Federation of Labor building trades and the Department of Labor were reported by the Associated Press to have reached an agreement to stabilize for the duration of the war wages of several hundred thousand workers employed in the war plant and housing expansion program. Details were withheld temporarily.

The pact was said to be intended to supplement a statement of labor policy agreed upon last summer by the A. F. L.'s building trades department and the Federal agencies engaged in defense construction.

General Agreement Reached

No concrete determinations were arrived at the Davis-called meeting, except agreement that a further Presidential designation was necessary to establish one agency in a coordinating position over the whole program. The general objective of the meeting, it was said, was to reach as broad an agreement possible among the several departments involved, and to present it to the White House for official approval and additional powers to carry through.

Four agencies are possible candidates to head up the job—War Labor Board, the labor production division of the War Production

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

The figure of Ralph Townsend—Japanese agent, pro-Axis writer and former United States consular officer—stalked darkly yesterday through disclosures of the operations of the Japanese propaganda agency, Jikyoku Iinkai.

Two men accused of conspiring with Townsend and five Japanese to violate the Foreign Agents Act were on trial, before Justice T. Alan Goldsborough. Townsend pleaded guilty weeks ago to the charges, in the same indictment, that he himself violated the act.

Love for the Axis

Placed in evidence against his alleged fellow conspirators—Frederick Vincent Williams and David Warren Ryder—were copies of booklets in which Townsend expounded a propaganda text designed in Tokyo and relayed by the Mikado's consuls general in San Francisco.

The story of the booklets was told by Mrs. Dorothy Lorenz Bender, a tall, demure brunette who works for the Alex Dulfer Printing Co. in San Francisco. She identified the Townsend booklets as they were produced by Special Prosecutor Arthur B. Caldwell.

There was "The High Cost of Hate." Mailed out in America were 60,000 copies, which suggested in suave detail the big cost of hating the Axis and its partners.

"No Enemies in Asia"

There was "There Is No Half Way Neutrality," of which 30,000 copies protested that the proper course of the United States was 100 per cent neutrality—which meant, in Townsend's language, letting Japan do what she pleased.

And there was "America Has No Enemies in Asia," of which 60,000 copies damned the Chinese cause for 48 pages and argued that the choice for cordial relations with Japan "is ours."

These and similar productions cost the Japanese government $175,000, which was given out from the

Mrs. Shopper Finds Dollars Go Farther as Ceilings Are in Effect

Washington shoppers starting on their Monday morning rounds found that local stores offered a variety of opportunities for stretching their quarters, dimes and pennies under the Government's new price ceiling order, which went into effect yesterday.

The Office of Price Administration's aim was to control virtually all food and clothing prices, returning them to the highest March level.

Every store had to change the marked prices on a variety of scattered foodstuffs, ranging from meats to canned goods.

Exceptions to the ceiling rule are perishable foods, including poultry, eggs, mutton, lamb, seafood, game, fresh fruits and vegetables, flour, dried prunes and beans.

Drug stores had the lion's share of work in reposting prices, since most of their commodities are subject to constant change and hence differed considerably from March figures.

Prices on cod liver oil, rubbing alcohol, mineral oil, epsom salts, insecticides, toothpaste, aspirin and other such articles were reduced by several cents in most cases, making a marked saving for part of Mrs. Housewife's dollar.

District department stores reported few changes in their lists of merchandise, and early morning

London, May 18.—R. A. F. planes pounced on the crack German cruiser Prinz Eugen last night while it was trying to slip back to Germany for repairs and, in a blazing air-naval battle off the southern tip of Norway, sent two, and possibly three, more torpedoes into its battered hull, wreathing it in flames and smoke, the air ministry announced tonight.

Four German destroyers escorting the sleek, 10,000-ton cruiser were raked by machine gun and cannon fire from British fighter planes, and five Messerschmitt-109 fighters were shot down in the battle, fought just north of the area where British and German navies slugged it out in the Battle of Jutland in the World War.

The British lost nine planes.

Escaping From Trondheim

The Eugen was homeward bound from Trondheim, 600 miles up the Norwegian coast, where it had been anchored for three months, crippled as a result of two previous British attacks.

Beaufort torpedo-carrying planes drove the blows home on the Eugen and accompanying fighter planes attacked the destroyers, to divert their fire from the Beauforts.

Returning fliers said one of the destroyers was left "covered with a pall of smoke," indicating that it was damaged.

Spotted Preparing to Leave

The air ministry did not say whether the Eugen continued on to Germany or sneaked into a nearby Norwegian port but, in either case, it was believed it would take the Germans many months to put her back into action. It also weakened the forces Germany has concentrated in Trondheim to repel a possible invasion of Norway or to operate against the "lend-lease" supply line to Russia across the Arctic.

CHAPTER XVI

Camp Hood, Tex., May 18.—In demonstrations of tactics by the Tank Destroyer Command here, tanks and tank destroyers work together as enemies. Contrary to expectation, these demonstrations are not set up so the destroyers have everything their own way. The tanks are urged to think up new tactics themselves, to do everything in their power to win, to make the destroyers develop new methods of meeting them. Thus, as students are trained, tank destroyer doctrine is growing at the same time in a continuous process of learning and building.

So saturated with the doctrine of aggressiveness are these designers of a new mode of warfare that they have gone far beyond dependence on their guns and their mounts. They are developing themselves into tank hunters.

ANDREWS

They have officers with them, helping to build up their courses, who have trained with the British, who have been through the commando schools. There is no treatise on fighting tanks that they have not worn threadbare in their search for something they can use.

With all this emphasis on the offensive, the tank destroyers have by no means abandoned what they call "static defense." That means construction of all sorts of formidable obstacles to delay and impede tanks and stop them long enough to get a shot into their vitals. Among these things are antitank ditches and fields of logs planted upright across avenues of approach, which they call "asparagus beds," and mines and other like expedients, most of them borrowed from the engineers.

But for the job of destruction, which is their mission, they rely on high velocity guns.

These weapons work very well, but the tank destroyers are not satisfied. They imply that they never will be satisfied; that they will seek better and handier and deadlier weapons always. And they have some on the way now which tanks will find even more to be feared than those they now have.

The tank destroyers are even developing the use of little cub

Japs Driven From Bank Of Salween

250 Miles to South Reinforced Foe Attacks From 3 Directions

By the Associated Press

Chungking, May 18.—The west bank of the broad, turbulent and mountain-walled Salween River barring the eastward advance of the Japanese up the Burma Road has been cleared of the enemy and his columns have been wiped out or driven back to Lungling, the Chinese announced today.

Some 250 miles to the south, however, extremely heavy fighting was reported in progress as reinforced Japanese attacked from three directions in an apparent effort to drive up from Thailand between the mighty Salween and Mekong to flank the Salween defenses.

The Japanese reverse along the Salween was announced after fierce artillery fire had been exchanged for days across the formidable barrier which the Japanese did not dare attempt crossing.

Instead, Chinese reinforcements were flung across the stream, and in a bitter struggle the main Japanese forces were thrust back all the way to Lungling, 20 miles from the river, and remnants which clung to positions at Mailaopu and Hung-

100-Mile Wide Arc Cut in Enemy Line; 'Chutists Wiped Out

By the Associated Press

Moscow (Tuesday), May 19.—Marshal Semeon Timoshenko's armies of the south, beating down and rolling over the teamed attacks of German tankists and parachutists of the sort that had run wild in France, were reported early today to be still advancing on a 100-mile arc about Kharkov in the Ukraine.

"During May 18," said the Soviet command's midnight communique, "in the Kharkov direction our troops conducted offensive operations and advanced."

Less official information earlier had indicated that Timoshenko's left was nearing Krasnograd, in an area about 60 miles southwest of Kharkov, and that his right was moving up on that Ukrainian metropolis itself.

On the Kerch Peninsula in the Crimea, the midnight bulletin reported only a continuation of "stubborn battles in the region of the town of Kerch," thus not repeating an earlier statement that some parts of Kerch itself were in Russian hands.

Nazis Admit Fight Continues

The German high command conceded a "desperate" Soviet resistance on the Kerch Peninsula, but claimed that the defenders there were "facing annihilation."

Before Kharkov, said Russian dispatches, the bloodiest and most violent of German counterthrusts—where tanks pulling armored trailers of infantrymen charged the Soviet line headlong and parachutists were dropped in single groups numbering as high as 120—had everywhere failed to check Timoshenko's progress.

Every Soviet account indicated that the German command was hurling every weapon of its explosive armory into the supreme defensive effort.

Of the Kharkov front, an afternoon announcement from Berlin asserted that 324 Russian tanks had been destroyed since May 12. A number of successful German counterattacks, one of which was said to have relieved an encircled German base, were likewise claimed.

In London, a British military commentator, summing up the general situation, stated that Timoshenko's left wing already rested on Krasnograd, and that the Russian advance

Our Biggest Troop Convoy Outfoxed Subs

'Pushed Periscopes Down' All the Way; Didn't Lose a Ship

By John A. Moroso 3d

A Northern Ireland Port, May 18. I have just crossed the Atlantic with a huge American convoy that outfoxed enemy submarines all the way.

We had to "push the periscopes down" almost all the way of our 2400-mile voyage of daring and skill.

The destroyers and planes delivered thunderous depth-charge attacks.

In convoy work the job is to get the troopships through. You don't have time to investigate attacks or run the enemy down. You blast him when you think he is near and keep sailing.

No Doubt Some Were Sunk

The vicious explosions left no doubt in our minds that some more strangers would have breakfast in hell. I was 5 miles away but our ship shivered sharply from the blasts.

We were near enough to the target to believe the submarine could not have escaped.

No torpedo was fired at us. Neither were we bombed by planes although our eager gunners prayed for an attack as they crouched by their guns night and day.

This eagerness was one of the cheering things during the voyage. Our Yankee kids have the utmost confidence in their ability to knock down planes.

Largest Yet

So thousands and thousands of cheering Yankee soldiers—mechanized men of America's new world-girdling army—have arrived here after their dangerous and fog-ridden journey.

With these jaunty lads came millions of dollars worth of battle tools—ready for instant use.

The value of our convoy and its ultimate effect on the war are like the operational details of our trip—military secrets. But I am allowed to say that it was the largest yet to arrive here.

The soldiers of this war are better equipped and prepared than the

Hilo, Hawaii, May 18 (AP).—Mauna Loa volcano, on Hawaii Island, after two weeks of its greatest activity since 1881, has finally quieted after its lava flow was stopped by aerial bombing. The Army lifted its censorship on the eruption tonight.

The city of Hilo feared its greatest danger from the volcano in 61 years as a huge wall of lava, flowing 2 miles a day, was diverted just before it reached the Hilo water supply and shifted southward 18 miles from the center of the city. The huge mass came to a stop shortly thereafter.

The eruption began April 26 from a fissure ripped in the side of the 13,675-foot volcano 9300 feet above its base.

In a brilliant display several 600-foot fountains spewed a great stream which later turned into a slower moving wall of lava 60 feet high. This wall ate into the forest a few miles from the Hilo water supply.

On May 2 warplanes dropped bombs at the edge of the flow. The bombing, following a procedure taken in the 1935 eruption, finally dammed the flow, which eventually stopped entirely on May 13.

The glare reflected against the clouds provided a magnificent sight to the blacked-out island.

Troops Start Immediately On 'Invasion' Maneuvers

Number 'Thousands Upon Thousands,' With Armored Units Included

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Powerful American armed forces, equipped with tanks and prepared for offensive action, have landed in the British Isles, it was officially announced last night.

Arrival of the troops was disclosed in a terse War Department communique which gave no details beyond a statement that their number is "substantially larger" than the prior forces sent to Britain.

Dispatches from North Ireland, where the soldiers were landed, made no secret of the fact that the force was very large, and gave rise to immediate speculation here that an offensive against Germany may be in the offing.

"Thousands Upon Thousands"

News stories from an unidentified North Ireland port, cleared by military censor, said that the force included "thousands upon thousands" of troops.

They were escorted across the Atlantic by the United States Navy in what was called the "largest convoy of the war." Not a ship or life was lost en route, it was said.

Coupled with other disclosures of the weekend, last night's news must have sharpened Hitler's fear of a "second front" being opened against him in the west.

There was the revelation in Sunday's Post that the United States would cut down the building of new arms plants and divert raw materials allocated for their construction to the fabrication of weapons in existing factories.

Invasion Date Moved Up?

This was taken to mean that we are already turning out vast quantities of weapons and are moving up the date for an Allied offensive.

A White House announcement about the same time declared that construction of cargo ships—previously described as the chief limiting factor in carrying the war to the enemy—is now up to schedule.

The news dispatches telling of the arrival of the force in North Ireland said that it had taken days for the transports to be unloaded, and that already some of the troops are engaged in "invasion training."

Our Third Contingent

Two prior contingents of American Army forces have landed in North Ireland. On January 26, it was announced that troops under Maj. Gen. Russell P. (Scrappy) Hartle, who comes from nearby Maryland, were in Ulster. On March 4, another announcement said they had been reinforced.

Another Marylander, Maj. Gen. James E. Chaney, is in command of Life Described Inside the Axis

Free from the watchful eyes of the German Gestapo and the Italian police after five months of internment, three Associated Press foreign correspondents today give readers of The Washington Post some of the first accounts of wartime conditions in Germany and Italy to be written outside of Axis censorship.

Louis P. Lochner tells of wartime sacrifices facing the German people. Richard G. Massock says the Italians have had their fill of war and tells of disturbances in Italy and fighting in Yugoslavia. Ernest G. Fischer writes of the troubles of German farmers, who have been told to increase production although they are already three weeks behind schedule on their 1942 crops.

Nazis' Measure of Sweat and Tears Exceeds Britons,' Freed Writer Says

Leaders' Demands On German People Grow Ever Harder

By Louis P. Lochner
Associated Press Staff Writer

Lisbon, May 18.—At the same time that Nazi propagandists poke fun at Winston Churchill's consistent reminders to the British people that he has nothing to offer them but "blood, sweat and tears," Hitler, Goering, Goebbels and their satellites are calling upon their German conationals for greater sacrifice even than those demanded by the British prime minister of all Britons.

In season and out of season, Nazi spellbinders are telling the German nation that more economic sacrifices, greater labor, increased exertion, more stoppages of industries regarded as nonessential, and the loss of more blood, more lives and more limbs are in store.

This year started out with Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering's appeal to the nation culminating in: "The future can be mastered only by a people which, with iron determination, is ready to make every sacrifice, willing to fight without fear of death and labor with the utmost exertion. We are ready to face the new year even though it demand greater sacrifices of everyone than hitherto."

Goebbels Chimes In

Sixteen days later Propaganda Minister Minister Paul Goebbels warned that hard times were ahead and exhorted the nation to ever greater exertion. "More important than the question of when the war is to end is that of how it will end," he said. "If we win it everything is won . . . if we were to lose it everything and more would be lost, namely our very national life itself."

There followed Hitler's Sportpalast speech January 30 on the ninth anniversary of the Nazi seizure of power in Germany. Again sacrifice was the theme. "German fellow citizens at home! Work! Create munitions, manufacture weapons, then create more munitions, manufacture more weapons!"

From time to time, the idea of sacrifice gave way to an appeal for patience if the war is longer than expected. Thus Goebbels told Austrian Nazis, "Good things need time for ripening and developing. That is true, too, of new Europe. One must not assume that a world empire built up through three centuries topples within three months. But one blow after another will strike the British Empire so long until one day it will fall to the ground."

On German Memorial Day, Hitler reverted to the idea of universal sacrifice by all Germans: "There can be but one slogan, namely, continue this fight unceasingly until security is vouchsafed for lasting peace, in other words, until the enemies of this peace have been annihilated." He predicted demolition of the Russian forces this summer.

Economic Bludgeon

On March 17, Economics Minister Walther Funk told stockholders at a meeting of the eRichsbank that if the German people did not produce sufficiently the Reichsmark would slip. Faith in the Fuehrer and final victory, as well as German productive capacity, were the best guarantees of stability of the German exchange, he said.

No German leader realizes better the necessity of hard work in the ensuing months than Goering, executor of the German economic plan. In an appeal to farmers March 19 he said, "This year demands even greater achievements than last . . . I know your greatest and most pressing worry is the securing of sufficient help. So long as German farmers, farmers' sons and agricultural workers are at the front in great numbers you must get along as best you can with prisoners of war and foreigners as stop gaps whom, by daily instruction, you develop into useful aides."

About the same time it was announced that farm hands during the planting season must work on Sundays. It was specifically stated that although other workers would have May Day off, farm hands must work as usual.

Goebbels, in a speech March 24, once again warned that hard times are ahead: "Let victory at any price be our slogan. . . . One essential problem tackled in recent weeks is the purposeful rational disposition of the labor capacity of our people. It has become generally clear that the third year of war demands a severer conduct of the war leadership than was necessary in the initial stages. In cases where rigorous prosecution is essential, relentless, radical measures must be undertaken."

Goebbels, as one of Hitler's confidants, then already knew that the Fuehrer would demand from the Reichstag a month later the extraordinary powers of absolutism to dismiss any official, military or civilian.

Offers a Distant Future

In several speeches that month, Goebbels stressed the inevitability of even greater sacrifice and even hinted that the present generation might never enjoy the fruits of its efforts. Quoting Frederick the Great, he said this Prussian statesman once claimed that he who would shape the world cannot himself enjoy that world.

"Our time is one," Goebbels shouted, "which demands being shaped and which, therefore, forbids that one enjoy it."

With utterances like these dinned into their ears the German people were hardly surprised, though shocked nevertheless when the full truth of the situation burst upon them, to have Hitler declare before the Reichstag April 26:

"Let nobody in these times claim vested rights. Everybody must realize today that duty [illegible] exists. It doesn't interest me whether during this emergency every civil servant gets a vacation or not.

"I won't stand for anybody's insisting on vacations.

Fascist Heroics Rouse Italians To Bitter Mirth, Writer Says

By Richard G. Massock
Associated Press Staff Writer

Lisbon, Portugal, May 18.—Those of us who have lived among the Italians regard them as peace-loving people who have had enough of wars.

In the opinion of seasoned observers, newspaper propaganda against the "Anglo-Saxon-Judo-democratic plutocracy" and "High Priest Roosevelt" has failed to stir any noticeable bitterness against the United States.

Fascism makes much of Black Shirt participation in war.

Troops of the Fascist militia figure prominently in news reports of actions on various fronts.

Premier Mussolini has called to the leadership of the party as its secretary a 27-year-old crippled veteran of the war in Spain, Aldo Vidussoni.

This young man interrupted the study of law for service in the legions and was sent to Spain. He is still studying for his degree.

Such a Black Shirt hero has not been able to inspire the Italians with fighting spirit.

They prefer home to the battlefields of Russia or North Africa.

That may be why Mussolini answered Hitler's repeated request for troops with only a few hundred thousand.

The Italians themselves have a new conundrum:

"What is the difference between the Japanese and Italian armies?

"It is—the Japanese have taken Manila, the Italians have taken Mai Nulla (nothing)."

Most of the Italian fighting is in fact in the conquered Balkans.

Serbs and Montenegrins are waging constant guerilla warfare in the mountains occupied by the Italian army or on the eastern shores of the Adriatic.

Official figures for April show the Italians lost 426 men killed and 508 wounded there compared with 65 dead and 446 wounded in Russia and 186 killed and 110 wounded in North Africa.

The Axis, as a matter of fact, has been gradually replacing the armies in the Balkans with Bulgarian troops.

In Italy itself, on the one-time Yugoslav frontier, there seems to have been some trouble.

At Fiume, at any rate, 140 persons, including 18 women, were tried on charges of membership in an armed frontier "Communist" band which had attacked Italian troops. Some were shot and others were sent to prison.

The prefect of Trieste on April 25 ordered curfew from 9 p. m. to 5 a. m. in more than a half dozen townships in his zone. The only reason given was "to safeguard the public order."

The well-known Comedian Angelo Cecchelin was arrested in Trieste charged with telling "anti-National, anti-Fascist" jokes on the stage.

He was credited with the quip: Now that Italy has lost East Africa to the British the via emperor in Rome is to be renamed via Mussolini. Via means both street and "away" with something.

Only a few days ago an Italian colonel was killed by a shot through the neck from ambush as his car passed near Ljubljana (in Slovenia, across the old Yugoslav border from Italy.)

Observers in Rome estimate that a Serb army of 80,000 men is still waging war against the Axis invaders in what was Yugoslavia.

Produce or Else!

Goering Demands Bigger Crop; Farmers Short of Everything

By Ernest G. Fischer
Associated Press Staff Writer

Lisbon, May 18.—German farmers, who are at least three weeks behind schedule on their 1942 crops, have been ordered to increase the production of vegetables, vegetable fats and potatoes. At the same time, Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering told growers that the 1941 acreages in grain and sugar beets must be maintained.

Unfavorable weather, insufficient fertilizer, the shortage of man power and horsepower, and tardiness in the delivery of seeds are obstacles delaying this program.

Although Nazi propagandists claimed that the Reich produces approximately 600,000 tons of butter yearly, ranking second only to the United States, Germany has suffered from a shortage of fats since before the war.

The war with Russia has cut off the overland route to the Orient by which Germany had obtained whale blubber from Japan and soybeans from Manchukuo. Whaling has failed to solve the problem because of the long perilous voyage to the whaling waters.

Of 185 margarine plants in Germany, 136 are closed because of the lack of raw materials.

The demand for vegetables has increased because of low rations in meat, butter and eggs. Per capita vegetable consumption for the five years before the war averaged 105 pounds per year, but in 1941 consumption per capital was 165 pounds, according to German statistics.

Truck growers increased their vegetable acreage 45 per cent in the first two years of war. In 1942 a further increase of 25 per cent was decreed. At the same time farmers were ordered to plant at least 15 per cent of cultivated land in potatoes, reducing the planting for feedstuffs and brewery grain.

Goering called last winter the "longest, worst and most stubborn in more than a hundred years" and acknowledged that spring farm work was "later than usual."

In addition to the extreme temperatures and late thaw, fertilizer deliveries were delayed during the winter because transportation facilities were tied up with war traffic.

German farm experts said that the phosphorous fertilizer available was only 33 per cent of the amount used in 1933 and that nitrogen supplies were only 76 per cent of the amount distributed in 1938-1939.

The most serious difficulty, however, appears to be the shortage of labor and German sources estimated that at least 600,000 laborers were needed. Already one million of the 2,100,000 foreign workers in Germany are employed on farms and in forestry projects. In addition, 800,000 prisoners of war are used in agriculture.

Farm labor is not at its full efficiency because, according to German figures, 53 per cent of the workers in farming and forestry are women, many of whom work in the fields only part time.

Various means have been employed to recruit farm labor. One of Goering's decrees compels residents of country towns, including the wives of soldiers who have been living on government benefits, to go into the fields.

Public schools are subject to suspension at any time and anywhere, with pupils over 10 years old subject to conscription for farm work wherever the situation demands it.

Labor recruiting offices have been opened in the occupied territories, especially in Latvia, Lithuania, Estonia and Ruthenia.

Farmers are also burdened by the loss of horses which were requisitioned for military use. Goering told the farmers that "requisitioning of horses for the armed forces can only be compensated by the use of the tractor." He promised the farmers that manufacturers had been given additional raw materials for the protection of better farming equipment.

Goering also promised that gasoline rations for farmers would be increased when more tractors became available. In the meantime some farmers are using teams made up of one horse and one ox.

War Sidelights

Hitler Sends 50,000 Men Into Norway

London, May 18 (AP).—Adolf Hitler has sent 50,000 combat troops into Norway since March despite the demands of the Russian front and has persuaded Vichy to send almost half a million tons of goods—largely war materials—as well as troops to Dakar, French West Africa, British sources declared today.

They said signs that the Nazis feared an Allied thrust into northern Norway were evident also from a German army order that traffic on all roads leading north from the port of Narvik to Tromsoe be limited to military transport, and from the dispatch of several Austraian mountain regiments to the area between Narvik and Kirkenes.

Large numbers of German air force ground crews have been sent into northern Norway to operate new airdromes from which the Nazi planes are harassing convoys taking United States and British goods to Russia, it was said.

Shipping reports said more than 100 cargo ships have left Marseille for Dakar since January. One entire tank brigade was reported to have gone to Dakar as a unit.

Fly for Glory Only

London, May 18 (AP).—Squadron Leaders Paddy Finucane and Keith Truscott had a weekend windfall of £1000 ($4000)—but it won't do them any good.

John Wren, Melbourne sportsman, asked the two fliers to share the gift as a token "of personal appreciation and gratitude for amazing gallantry" against the German air force.

But regulations prohibit acceptance of money for services in performance of duty.

That didn't bother Finucane's flying. He went out yesterday and bagged his thirty-second German plane.

Wren now intends to give the money to the pilots' mothers.

Tiger Ace Dies Practicing for Final Foray

By Karl Eskelund
United Press Staff Writer

Kumming, China, May 16 (Delayed).—Tom Jones, a farm boy who became a Flying Tiger and made good in a big way, said yesterday he was going home any time now.

"Just one more strafing, and then for home," he said happily—home to the State of Washington, to the wife he married just before he came to China nearly a year ago, to their baby he had never seen. Maybe to study law at Harvard.

Tom Jones was killed today. His shark-nosed plane of the American Volunteer Group crashed while he was practicing near the A. V. G. field.

Good News for Japs

It was good news for the Japanese. He was dead set on getting an even dozen of their planes before he called it a day. He almost did, and well might have reached his goal in that last fling at them before going home.

I first saw Tom Jones at an A. V. G. base in southwest China. He was under the weather with malaria he picked up on a tiger hunt in Burma. Even then he had set his goal:

"I'll get my dozen Japs before I go home."

Tom Jones was restless in the hospital. Long before he was well he wanted to fly. Once he did, stealing out of the hospital and joining in a strafing mission.

Brig. Gen. Claire L. Chennault, chief of the Fying Tigers, heard about it and talked strenly, but not too sternly, to him and sent him back to the hospital.

By April Tom Jones was flying again, this time with official sanction. In his first dogfight he shot down two Japanese planes. Later he told me:

"I was as scared as hell, but I enjoyed that fight."

Two more in his next dogfight, and Tom Jones was working up to the dozen he never quite got.

Conceived Hanoi Raid

Then in May he cooked up the wild-eyed scheme of raiding Hanoi. Tom Jones knew a Hanoi raid would be one of the most dangerous missions ever undertaken by th Flying Tigers, who dote on dangerous missions. The odds were against his returning from such a 400-mile flight into enemy territory.

But when Tom Jones asked for volunteers, more than half a dozen of his buddies said all right, they'd tag along. His squadron leader was one of them.

By May 8 he and his pals were ready. But just before they were to leave, Chennault asked Tom Jones to take a flight to the Salween River Gorge and strafe a Japanese column which was trying to cross the river and attack Kunming.

The bombing and strafing of the Japanese was one of the most successful attacks by the A. V. G. The column was all but wiped out. Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek was so pleased that he asked for the names of the four pilots who for the moment had removed the threat to Kunming.

That job done, Tom Jones and his volunteers set out last Tuesday for Hanoi. They sped 500 miles over mountainous enemy territory and through thunderstorms in their Curtiss P-40's. At Hanoi their bombs and bullets smashed at least 15 grounded planes.

"I enjoyed that one, too," Tom Jones said when he got back. "But boy, was I scared."

Japs Thought P-T Boats Were 'Monsters'

By Francis J. Connor
(Washington Bureau of the Chicago Sun)

Lieut. John D. Bulkeley, the Navy's master of the small and swift motor torpedo boats which performed so effectively in the Philippines, from merciless attacks to errands of mercy, revealed yesterday how the enemy sized up the elusive little ships:

"America has a new secret weapon. It looks like a monster, makes a lot of noise and has large flapping wings. It fires torpedoes in all directions."

This, Bulkeley recounted, was the description given the PT boats in a Tokyo broadcast picked up by short wave in the Philippines after the dwarf craft had a very successful evening in Subic Bay.

He confessed that he was amazed himself that the noisy motor boats could approach the enemy without being detected sooner than they were.

Mistaken For Planes

"Undoubtedly they mistook us for airplanes in many instances," he observed.

Because of their speed and maneuverability, Bulkeley believes the little 70-footers to be "bomb-proof," especially at night. They probably will be hit by shells sometimes, he says, but they haven't yet in numerous clashes with warships and shore batteries.

While enemy fire "straddled" the PT boat squadrons in their forays in the Subic Bay, Bulkeley explained the boats avoided damage by steering directly for the point where the last enemy shells struck the water. The Japanese fire, he said, was attuned to a 45 knot speed. Actually the PT boats would travel 25 knots or less.

Another revelation made by the PT boat expert is that the little craft handle well in as much as a 20-foot running sea. Much larger vessels are tossed around in such weather.

Here for Training

Bulkley, who has been decorated six times for successes in surface raids against Japanese shipping in the Philippines, was in Washington yesterday with a shade of irony coloring his visit. He was awaiting formal orders to report at the Navy's training school for torpedo boat officers at Newport, Rhode Island.

Bulkeley welcomed the training there, he said, because before December 7 the Navy's torpedo boat crews had fired only two practice torpedoes. After that they were all "war shots."

Minus practice, however, Squadron 3, of which Bulkeley was senior officer in the Philippines, netted the following results, he narrated:

A Japanese light cruiser known sunk, as well as an auxiliary cruiser and a small aircraft tender. Tanks set afire on another cruiser and numerous Jap landing barges shot up and occupants slain. Four enemy dive-bombers shot down by machine gun fire. Jap shore installations shelled and put out of action. Enemy coastal camps treated likewise with heavy Japanese casualties. Torpedo boat traps destroyed as rapidly as the Japanese could construct them.

Bulkeley was senior officer aboard the torpedo boat which took Gen. Douglas MacArthur and his party—on a 20-foot sea at 30 knots—to the safety of Australia. He later performed the same service for President Quezon of the Philippines. He said that on each trip the boat was "crowded," but not as much as it was on one other occasion.

This, he said, was when the S. S. Corregidor struck a mine and went down off Corregidor Island. At that time Bulkeley said, he piloted a PT boat 5 miles out to sea to bring back 196 survivors. These were in addition, to the normal eight-man crew and two officers of the motor torpedo boat. The rescue was effected over a Navy "contact" minefield, with the explosives barely 6 feet under water.

Bulkeley revealed that every man and officer in the squadron has been decorated once by General MacArthur, some of the men received awards twice and a majority of the officers were honored three or four times.

Australians Warn U. S. About Complacency in Southwest Pacific

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters, Australia, May 18.—Emphasizing anew Australia's grave peril, Commonwealth leaders today pictured the Allied victory in the Coral Sea as only a delaying action against a Japanese foe already reassembling a more powerful invasion force for another thrust in this direction.

Prime Minister John Curtin himself declared that "although I have no fear of the results," Australians might soon be meeting "the shock of war upon their own soil."

Addressing the Royal Empire Society at Sydney, Curtin at the same time said he had never been able to understand the controversy stirred by his appeal for aid to President Roosevelt after the fall of Malaya and Singapore.

"I Make no Apology"

"I make no apology," he said, "nor recant one word of the statements I made to the United States to regard this Pacific zone of war as being one of vital importance not only to us but to the security of the United States."

Curtin added that while he retained "the most serious devotion to the British Empire," he had been forced to "appeal directly to the United States because of the circumstances in which Britain was placed."

Meanwhile, Allied bombers struck again today at Japanese shipping off Koepang, Timor Island, scoring direct hits and probably destroying two transports, General MacArthur's headquarters said.

Port Moresby Raided

One heavy Japanese bomber was shot down and probably three others were destroyed, and three fighter planes damaged when 34 heavy bombers and 15 fighter planes attacked Port Moresby in New Guinea. Minor damage was caused to the runways at Port Moresby and one Allied plane was reported missing, the communique said.

In one of the most outspoken comments on the invasion threat to Australia, Sir Keith Murdoch, a leading Commonwealth editor, wrote in the Melbourne Herald that the Allies were unduly optimistic over the situation in the southwest Pacific and urged that Curtin impress upon Washington the need for more ships and planes.

"President Roosevelt's statement in his April 28 broadcast that 'there is good reason to believe the Japanese southward advance has been checked" is only symptomatic of the optimism that has obstinately colored Washington thinking about the western Pacific," he said.

"We must get into the minds of Washington authorities that planes and ships in much greater quantities are needed and we must induce Prime Minister Churchill to press in Washington for a larger share of American production for the British Empire.' '

In a similar vein, the Sydney Morning Herald described the Coral Sea triumph as only giving the Allies a breathing spell.

"Given a little more of the fortune of war, we might have turned the repulse of the Japanese into a rout," the Herald said. "As it is we have to face the fact that a powerful and tenacious enemy was only thwarted in his plans to isolate and attack this country and he is back among theislands from which he sailed, replacing his warship losses and preparing to come again.

"The Allies must be ready with enough in time to shatter the thrust."

The grave view expressed by the Australian leaders was pointed up by Axis accounts of Allied and Japanese naval activity in waters adjacent to the Coral Sea. The Tokyo radio said Sunday that Japanese planes had spotted a strong American force, including two aircraft carriers escorted by cruisers and destroyers moving westward some 500 miles east of the Solomon Islands. Other Axis reports attributed to Shanghai told of a powerful Japanese fleet moving toward Australia.

Young Rightists Stage Anti-British Rally in Vichy

Vichy, May 18 (AP).—Forty-two youthful extreme Rightists shouting "English murderers!" "Down with the Anglophiles!" and other anti-British slogans were permitted by the French police tonight to demonstrate under the balcony of the apartment where aged Chief of State Marshal Petain was sleeping.

Under the guidance of two older men, the noisy band, led by cheer leaders, marched down the Rue de Marechal Petain after attending a "keep the empire" meeting at Vichy's casino. This was the first anti-British demonstration in this capital, although the French Legion, the country's only sanctioned political party, had organized anti-British outbursts in various parts of unoccupied France since the British occupation of Madagascar.

Anti-Laval Demonstration

New York, May 18 (AP).—A crowd of more than 1000 persons parading in Lyon, unoccupied France, shouted anti-Laval and anti-Axis slogans tonight, reliable advices from Europe said.

U. S. to Build 800 Freight Ships in 1942

By the Associated Press

A grim report that "the losses of American flag vessels are already greater than for the entire period of the last war" was brightened somewhat yesterday by an official assurance that new merchant ships would be coming down the ways at the rate of three a day this fall.

The good news and bad in the battle of ship construction against the blast of submarine torpedoes was released as the House Appropriations Committee approved a 210 million dollar increase in the Government's fund for writing insurance of merchant ships, their crews and cargoes.

With a description of shipping as "the great problem in the conduct of this war" the committee informed Congress that "at the rate losses are occurring, the fund is estimated to be liable for a little more than a ship a day."

The other side of the story came in a transcript of Rear Admiral Emory S. Land's testimony before the committee. Declaring that he was counting on construction of 800 new merchantmen this year, Land, chief of the war shipping administration, reported that 36 ships were delivered in April and that he "confidently" expected delivery this month of "50-plus."

"That, gentlemen," declared Land, "is the world's record, in anybody's country, and for all time."

He expressed hope that ship deliveries would be up to two a day by June, and added "we confidently expect to be up to three a day, or better, two or three months later than that, and continue on."

"Next year," he said, "if we get our steel, we will meet the 15-million ton mark (the goal set by President Roosevelt) and, in my judgment, based on facts, we have enough capacity in shipyards, men and everything connected thereto, given the steel, to do between 15 and 20 million tons next year.

"If we get the steel, we will do it. That, in a nutshell, is the situation. The shipbuilding program is on schedule, despite all the commentaries to the contrary."

In urging swift approval of the pending appropriation, he furnished Congress information that the submarine attacks had taken a toll of "close to a thousand" lives among the hardy, death-defying men who man the merchant fleet.

The 210-million-dollar appropriation will augment one of 40 million dollars which was passed prior to this country's entry in the war. Under it, the Administration will be able to write insurance on this country's merchantmen, and those of foreign nations carrying Government cargoes. A total of $872,880,633 of the insurance has been written thus far.

Transportation Regarded As Chief Problem Now

Chairman Truman (Democrat), Missouri, asserting that military production had reached a point where it no longer need be regarded as the No. 1 problem, said yesterday he planned to call together the Senate Defense Investigating Committee to formulate a new policy designed to produce constructive suggestions toward winning the war.

"We are getting the planes, tanks and other equipment in unprecedented volume," he declared. "There are still some kinks in the machinery and I think there are still some people in the war production setup who are not working entirely unselfishly for the public interest, but the major part of that problem has been licked." The committee has been especially critical in the past of the activities of some dollar a year men.

Truman said he regarded transportation as the chief problem to be dealt with immediately, citing recent official statements that war goods were piling up at some ports and even backing up at factories because shipping was lacking and interior transportation ,was overtaxed.

Domestic transportation difficulties could be traced primarily to the shortage of rubber, he said, adding that he had little hope for any speedy alleviation of this lack. The Nation could not expect to get substantial quantities of synthetic rubber much before the middle of 1944, he predicted.

Historic Agreement Provides Also for Military Highways

By Michael Chinigo
International News Service Staff Writer

The United States yesterday entered into a 14-point military agreement with the Republic of Panama to create an impregnable defense zone around the Panama Canal for the war's duration.

To facilitate America's undertaking, Panama has placed a number of strategic areas at the disposal of American armed forces for use as coast artillery and antiaircraft stations, auxiliary airfields, bombing ranges and airplane detector posts.

State Department officials accompanied announcement of this most important of all inter-American wartime cooperation pacts with the disclosure that the Panamanian government long ago agreed to occupation of these areas by United States forces.

Must Be Ratified

By yesterday's accord, which becomes legally operative as soon as it is ratified by Panama's national executive power and national assembly, the sister American republic granted to the United States:

1. The right to use the waters adjacent to defense areas and install all equipment deemed necessary for the effective protection of the canal.

2. The use of all Panamanian naval and military airports.

3. The right to exclude all suspicious individuals, regardless of nationality, from the defense areas under its military control.

The United States, for its part, undertakes to evacuate the new Panamanian bases one year after "the definitive treaty of peace which brings about the cessation of the present war."

Should a "state of international insecurity" still exist despite the cessation of hostilities, however, the American Government specifically reserves for itself the right to enter into new consultations directed toward the continued use of the defense bases to protect the vital sea link between the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans.

To Build Highways

Of immediate importance is America's undertaking to complete construction, at its own expense, of a number of Panamanian highways considered essential to the over-all Canal Zone defenses and necessary to insure swift maneuverability of American forces in case of emergency.

In direct return for the leasing of Panamanian bases, most important of which is the Rio Hato Airfield situated some 80 miles southwest of the canal, the United States granted Panama a number of concessions long desired by the sister republic.

They include withdrawal of the American-controlled Panama Railroad Co. from real estate operations in the cities of Panama and Colon; turning over to Panama City of certain lot holdings of the railroad company; delivery to the Panamanian government of the waterworks and sewage systems lying wholly within territory under Panama's jurisdiction, and liquidation of Panama's indebtedness arising from the construction of the strategic Rio Hatto-Chorrea Highway.

Identification of the strategic areas involved was withheld for reasons of military secrecy.

The State Department commented that "the agreement is another significant landmark in the history of the relations between the United States and Panama and constitutes an important contribution to the security of the canal and the defense of the hemisphere."

Evading the Censor

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Moscow, May 18.—The Russians revealed today the text of an order issued to the troops of the Twenty-ninth German Infantry Division in which the soldiers were urged not to send live lice home in envelopes.

"Recently there have been many instances of envelopes mailed at field posts containing live lice to show to families," the order said. "The senders do not realize the danger with which this threatens their relatives. Among the lice may be infection carriers. The danger of spreading typhus by lice must be continually explained to the troops. A mutual comradely education must prevent the country from being subjected to such acts."

The Soviet guess is that the German soldiers are not just joking when they send lice home, but are trying to evade field censorship to describe front conditions.

Giant Bomber Crashes, Crew Of Nine Killed

By the Associated Press

Barksdale Field, La., May 18.—Barksdale field suffered its worst accident today when a four-motored bomber crashed near the field, killing the crew of nine.

The plane struck a tree and exploded near the south border of the reservation.

Army authorities announced the names of the victims as: Second Lieut. Herbert W. Frawley, 23, pilot, Fort Monmouth, N. J.; Second Lieut. James R. Everhart, 26, copilot, Uniontown, Pa.; Lieut. Augustus H. Tate, navigator, Greenwood, Miss.; Sergt. Mansfield Crabtree, 27, bombardier, Meadowview, Va.; Sergt. Louis J. Helper, 22, engineer, Valley View, Pa.; Corpl. Stanley C. Senate Group Will Consider Women's Reserve for Navy

The Senate Naval Affairs Committee will consider this morning a measure to establish a Women's Auxiliary Reserve as a branch of the Naval Reserve to release Navy officers and men for duty at sea by admitting women to shore jobs.

Like their British sisters, however, women who enlisted in the reserve would be "never at sea."

The bill up for consideration by the Senate committee is different in detail from that passed by the House to admit women into the Navy for noncombatant jobs on an equal footing with enlisted men.

Senator Walsh, chairman of the committee, has introduced a substitute measure which would place the reserve in the same relationship to the Navy as the new Women's Army Auxiliary Corps is to the Army, with a few exceptions.

Members of the Naval Reserve, under the Walsh bill, would not be eligible for regular Navy pensions, but would be eligible for compensation benefits under the United States Employes Benefit Act, as are the WAAC's.

Regular Navy ranks could be attained by the women, provided not more than one person be graded as a lieutenant commander, not more than 35 as lieutenants, and that the the number of junior grade lieutenants not exceed more than 35 per cent of the total number of women officers.

Scheduled to be heard on the measure this morning are Rear Admiral Randall Jacobs, Navy personnel officer, and Jean Walsh of the Kappa Alpha Kappa Sorority.

As in the Maas bill, members of the auxiliary need be only 20 years of age and no top age limit is set. Uniforms would not be provided, as they will be for the WAAC's, but the Reservists would be given a uniform allowance not to exceed $200.

Witness Describes Holdup Killing Of Taxi Driver

Testimony describing how a taxicab driver cried, "It's a holdup," and then toppled to the street with a fatal bullet wound was given a District Court jury yesterday as Johnny Rathbun, 20-year-old soldier in the uniform of an Air Corps private, went on trial on charge of first degree murder.

L. Joseph Barrier, drugstore employe, said he was walking near the scene of the shooting at Eleventh and East Capitol Streets February 23 when he heard the outcry from the victim, Conrad L. Steele, 36, of 411½ Fifth Street Northeast.

Barrier testified he saw a soldier running away, but said he could not definitely state whether it was Rathbun.

Unrest Sends Gestapo Chief To Holland

By the Associated Press

London, May 18.—Heinrich Himmler, chief of the German Gestapo, has arrived in Holland to cope with rising anti-Nazi resistance, the news agency Aneta said today.

Himmler reached the Netherlands after a visit of his Gestapo lieutenant, Reinhard Heydrich, who now is in charge of the police in occupied France. Field Marshal Gerd von Rundstedt, commander of the German occupation troops in northern France, also was said to have visited Holland recently.

The visit of Himmler followed a new outburst of anti-German activity which resulted in the execution of 96 alleged leaders of a secret anti-Nazi society and the arrest of more than 2000 Dutch army officers and the seizure of 460 prominent Netherlanders as hostages.

The arrival of the Gestapo chief also was linked to rumors that the Germans intended to set up a puppet government in Holland headed by Anton A. Mussert, leader of the Dutch ..azi Party.

A Netherlands government-in-exile spokesman broadcast to Holland tonight a warning of the likelihood of such a regime. He urged the Dutch to offer all possible resistance, but not to engage in reckless acts that would lead to wholesale executions.

Red Cross to Boost Aid to Russia

The American Red Cross has sent more than $3,500,000 worth of drugs, medical supplies and clothing to Russia in recent months for victims of warfare, Chairman Norman H. Davis reported yesterday.

This amount will be approximately doubled within a short time, he said.

Half a million garments for men, women and children valued at $1,200,000 were included, a quantity of which was produced by volunteers in Red Cross chapters, and other heavy garments were purchased, Davis said.

Army Air Corps Needs Experienced Athletic Tutors

The Army Air Corps needs six men to serve as athletic instructors, local Army recruiters said yesterday. These men must have bachelor's degrees in physical education, comparable practical experience or both.

However, most immediate need is for applicants who are skilled in heavy construction work—but these applicants, who may be regarded as specialists, should apply not later than today at the recruiting station at the Greyhound Bus Terminal, 1100 New York Avenue Northwest.

Opposition Slight as R.A.F. Pounds France

By the United Press

London, May 18.—R. A. F. planes, apparently meeting little if any opposition from the Germans, made a series of sweeps over northern France and the Channel today, battering the German occupied coastal area and leaving a small enemy vessel sinking, the Air Ministry announced tonight.

Fighter planes and Hurricane fighter-bombers made the attacks and the fact that all returned safely indicated that the Germans were not out in force.

A Vichy dispatch said R. A. F. raids on northern France and the Low Countries reached a new intensity during the weekend with five main raids directed against power stations, railroad junctions and mainline railroads.

Canadian Bombers Aid

Vichy reports said that "apparently Canadian bomber squadrons participated in the attacks for the first time." Major damage was reported at Boulogne and other invasion ports along the Channel while the important railroad junction of St. Valery-Sur-Somme on the coast near Abbeville was attacked twice.

The bombings occurred, it was said, while mayors from the northern France region were in Vichy asking Pierre Laval to send relief to their battered areas. They were reported to have told authorities that the raids were increasing in intensity and becoming more frequest.

Watchers along the Channel coast reported that today's raids appeared to be directed against the areas around Calais and Boulogne.

(The Berlin radio claimed that two British bombers were shot down during "nuisance raids" at several points on the German coast early Monday morning.

(German light bombers hit several large buildings at Folkstone and the pier head and nearby buildings at Hastings in raiding the English southeast coast Sunday, it added.)

of the Eugen, are believed still at Trondheim.

R. A. F. reconnaissance planes spotted the Eugen "exercising" in Trondheim Fjord on Saturday, repaired temporarily for the dash home, and when she left, Beaufort torpedo planes, Beau and Blenheim fighters and Hudson bombers went out to get her.

The attack was made off Lister Lighthouse, on the southern tip of Norway, during the dim light of early evening.

R. A. F. fliers reported that torpedoes skipped over the water in all directions and that two of them, and probably a third, found the main target.

"Our planes dropped their fish one after another as if they were giving a show," said one flier. After the first attack, the Eugen swung out of formation and offered the British an even better target.

One New Zealand pilot of a Beaufort said:

"I went in with five Messerschmitts on my tail, but I was astonished, and relieved, to find they did not attack me. Our covering Beau fighters must have frightened them off. Flak poured up from the Eugen and the destroyers, but I went in low and let go my my torpedo. As I swung around to make a getaway I saw a column of smoke leap up from the stern. It was a great pillar of black, dirty smoke which rose above the superstructure. Fifteen seconds later there was another large explosion."

One flier had his second whack at the ship. He was Flight Lieut. E. G. Pett, who was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross for his part in the attack last February 11 on the Eugen and the battleships Gneisenau and Scharnhorst when they dashed through the English Channel from Brest.

He roared down between two destroyers and unleashed a torpedo at the Eugen but said he was unable to see the result.

Berlins' Version

(Berlin broadcast a high command acknowledgment that the Eugen was attacked but said that the R. A. F. was "unsuccessful" and that 29 British planes "more than half of the formation"—were shot down.)

The air ministry, discussing Berlin's claims, said the German need to report the destruction of 29 British planes gives "some indication of the effectiveness of yesterday's attack."

all American forces in the British Isles. His headquarters are in London. Presumably, the new A. E. F. will be under his direction also.

Lending credence to reports that an invasion of the European continent may be in view has been the arrival of large forces of Canadian troops in the British Isles in recent months, including the advance units of an armored division.

The American troops landing from the latest convoy were mainly from the Midwest and North Central States. Many of them wore the latest type steel helmets, the Associated Press reported, indicating that the rest of their equipment was of the most modern type.

The foreign dispatches said that medium and light tanks of the newest design, the latest artillery off assembly lines, mobile antitank guns, "jeeps" and armored cars—all in sizable numbers—were unloaded from the transports.

There have been no previous reports of American armored forces forces being sent to Britain.

The Army disclosed the arrival of the reinforcements in North Ireland, in curt fashion.

"The War Department today announced the arrival in the British Isles of additional United States Army troops," it said, "The number is substantially larger than previous contingents and includes tank units."

Rice Yahner, Associated Press correspondent at A. E. F. headquarters in North Ireland, described the troops just landed as "fit and eager for a scrap." He added that "scores of them, despite their youth, already have served in the Far East."

The soldiers were greeted by British "Tommies" as they came off the boat and immediately headed for a canteen which served coffee, pork and beans and sandwiches.

First man off was Private Marvin O'Neal of Philip, S. Dak., and Irishmen on hand welcomed him as one of them. Gen. Hartle shook hands with the soldier as he came ashore.

The arrival of the contingent brought about a farther-son reunion. Maj. Earl F. Minier, who came over with the first group in January, discovered his son, Private (First Class) Gene F. Minier, waiting in the embarkation station.

The I. N. S. reported that young Minier was so startled he stepped out of ranks, declaring: "Dad, you've got to pay that bet now. I told you I'd get over here."

He then recovered himself and hastily got back into ranks, the dispatch said, whereupon his commanding officer excused him for a real get-together with his father.

One soldier came down the gangplank on crutches. He was 20-year-old Sergt. Galen Quinn of Sturgis, S. D., who had fractured his ankle in America, but begged to be taken along anyway.

The news accounts described the troop landing as "smooth and swift" and carried out virtually without orders. A British major present was quoted by the United Press as describing it as "the finest troop movement I ever saw."

Reds Push On Despite Nazi Tank Blows

thus was continuing on a 100-mile arc, the northern end of which was at the Town of Volchansk, 30 miles northeast of Kharkov.

This advance, he added, involved double the scope of operations as of a few days ago and by reason of this and German counterattacks had been slowed down in some places. Nowhere, however, had it been halted, he said.

Of the Crimea, he declared the Nazis now were in substantially complete command of the Kerch Peninsula, the Russians holding only isolated positions. There, he said, German casualties had been very high.

Timoshenko's march on Kharkov appeared on the basis of Russian field reports to be proceeding over the most reckless German opposition of the war.

Hurl In Hordes of Tanks

The military correspondent of the official Communist newspaper Pravda thus illustrated:

"The Germans now attempt by every means to stem our offensive. They send into action ever greater numbers of tanks. In one comparatively narrow sector, they sent 150 tanks with armored trailers carrying troops in order to break through to one of their surrounded garrisons.

"These tanks wedged into our lines but were stopped and about half of them were destroyed. The Fascist failed to reach the surrounded garrison. Our units effectively repulsed enemy tank counterattacks, systematically grinding down his materiel.

"One of our guards units beat off a whole series of tank attacks. At first, the Germans sent out 18 tanks followed by infantry. Six of these were destroyed by antitank guns and antitank rifles. The rest turned back. During the day the Fascists counterattacked 15 times, putting into action more and more tanks each time with the only result that they lost 43 machines without gaining any success.

"German aviation is very active but is unable to attain superiority. The Fascists attempted to land parachutist detachments. Several instances of landing parachute parties 120, 50 and 30 strong, were recorded. Two of these parties were annihilated in the air before they reached ground."

Soviet sources also declared that German reserves only recently brought up from Western Europe were becoming numerous among Nazi captives.

Nazis Far Outnumbered

Moscow (Tuesday), May 19 (U.P.).—The Russian assault army estimated at one million men has a superiority on the Kharkov front of five or six to one—a regiment for every German battalion—according to a United Press dispatch today from Stockholm, quoting Swedish correspondents in Berlin.

The Russians are using artillery up to 21 centimeters—8 inches—and are attacking in wave after wave, creating the most critical situation at some points, the Swedish Berlin correspondents reported.

"The Russians are using the heaviest tanks and have shattered the German lines, but the Germans withdrew to isolated strongholds, from which they emerged later—although relentlessly pounded by the Russian air force—and, together with German giant tanks, counterattacked and drove the Russians back," one Swedish dispatch said. "Thus," it said, "the first Russian attempt to pierce the Kharkov defenses was frustrated." However, it said, even German front dispatches admit that the Russians never have thrown so many tanks into one sector.

(The Stockholm Aftonbladet's Berlin correspondent said the Germans claimed to have captured 68,000 prisoners on the Kerch Peninsula.)

Kerch Drive "Not Offensive"

Berlin (from German broadcasts), May 18 (AP).—German military spokesmen said today that the operations on the Kerch Peninsula were aimed only at "rounding out" their positions and declined to describe the action as the beginning of a German offensive. They said the attack on Russian positions was being conducted with "complete success."

Foe Claims Karelian Success

Helsinki, May 18 (AP).—The high command said today that with the support of dive bombers, German and Finnish troops captured several Soviet positions in the Louhi sector of northern Karelia. Russian counter attacks were reported repulsed.

British Hero Will Take Post Here

ADMIRAL CUNNINGHAM

Cunningham, Matapan Hero, Heads British Navy Staff Here

Admiral Sir Andrew Browne Cunningham, hero of the British Mediterranean fleet's victory at Cape Matapan and the attacks on Taranto, Genoa and Bengasi, is coming to Washington as head of the British Admiralty delegation in the United States, it was announced yesterday.

He will replace here Admiral Sir Charles J. C. Little, who becomes commander in chief of the Portsmouth naval base, while Rear Admiral Sir Henry H. Harwood succeeds Cunningham as head of the Mediterranean fleet.

Harwood commanded the squadron of three cruisers which whipped the German pocket battleship Graf Spee off Uruguay December 13, 1939.

The notable shift in command was considered especially significant in view of growing talk of a United Nations offensive against the Axis and President Roosevelt's recent revelation that American naval forces already are operating in the Mediterranean.

Admiral Cunningham brings to Washington first-hand experience in direction of some of the outstanding naval engagements of the current war.

It was he who blasted Mussolini's dream of "mare nostrum" in the great sea battle off Cape Matapan on March 28, 1940, when three Italian cruisers and two destroyers were sunk in a titanic night battle.

It was he, also, who, with his brother, Gen. Alan Cunningham almost at his side, drove Axis sea forces from Mediterranean waters while the general-brother was sweeping the enemy land forces along the Libya desert.

The admiral again showed his mastery of naval tactics in the lightning raid by the fleet air arm on Taranto, in southern Italy on November 11, 1940, and in the naval bombardments of Genoa and Bangasi.

"We are going to have some fun. All guns will be in action."

This, the British Press Service recalled last night, was Admiral Cunningham's laconic message to his men just before they sailed into battle at Matapan. It also recalled that at one point in his career he had been found hard at work below decks when there were not enough men available to coal a ship.

Harwood, who was knighted for his work as commander of the three British cruisers which dogged the German pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee to her death at Montevideo, Uruguay, in December, 1939, was given the acting rank of admiral. He had been assistant chief of the naval staff.

Harwood, regarded by the British as a master naval tactician, thus has risen ot a peak command in less than three years. He was only a captain when he directed the British cruisers Achilles, Ajax and Exeter in the battle from which Admiral Graf Spee fled to Montevideo and later was sunk by her own crew.

WE believe the traveling public realizes that in time of war the armed forces have first call on the transportation facilities of this country. Troops move by train. There's no faster, smoother, better way to transport an army.

But it takes a large number of passenger cars to do the job. Both Pullmans and Coaches. So fewer cars are available for civilian travel.

Warfare, however, no longer belongs strictly to the fighting man. Business men must keep production going top speed. That means a greatly increased volume of traffic.

So the railroads face the problem of providing comfortable accommodations for business people from fewer cars. To the best of its ability, Pennsylvania Railroad will provide for everyone. But should you occasionally be inconvenienced—as, for example, be obliged to take an "upper" instead of a private room or a "lower"—we ask that you accept it with patience and understanding. Capital Leaders Mourn Boland

Democratic Whip Under 3 Speakers Dies at Scranton, Pa.

REPRESENTATIVE BOLAND

President Roosevelt, his leaders and both Houses of Congress yesterday paid final tribute to Representative Patrick J. Boland, Democratic whip of the House under three Speakers.

Boland, who was "Pat" or "Paddy" to official Washington, died of a heart attack yesterday at his Scranton, Pa., home, where he had completed a primary election campaign for his seventh term in Congress.

A House, whose votes on all major issues Boland had clocked with amazing accuracy for nearly eight years, recessed after Speaker Rayburn called his passing "a blow to the country he lived in, served and loved." The Senate joined the House in a resolution of sorrow and both Houses appointed a committee to attend the funeral Thursday morning from his Scranton family home. Requiem mass will be said in St. Peter's Cathedral, and interment will be in Cathedral Cemetery, Scranton.

Boland left Washington apparently in good health last week and delivered a radio address Sunday night. He was stricken about 4:30 a. m. yesterday and died in a few minutes.

Speaker Rayburn, who told the House he "never knew a greater majority whip," carried the word of his passing to the President at yesterday's legislative conference.

"It was a very distressing piece of news for the President," said Stephen T. Early, White House secretary. "He was very fond of Pat."

To attend the funeral, the House appointed Chairman Robert L. Doughton of the House Ways and Means Committee, on which Boland served; Representative Treadway, ranking Republican member; Representatives Barnes of Illinois and Dingell of Michigan (Democrats) and the entire Pennsylvania delegation. The Senate appointed Senator Guffey (Democrat), and Senator Davis (Republican), both of Pennsylvania.

Boland, who was 62, began work as a carpenter in his native city of Scranton and became a prominent contractor before he was elected to Congress from a predominantly Republican district in 1930. He was nominated by the Democratic, Republican and Labor parties. When he came to Washington he was invited to both Democratic and Republican House caucuses. Boland chose the Democratic and his decision helped to swing the narrow party margin by which John Garner of Texas was elected Speaker in 1931.

During nearly a dozen years in Congress, Pennsylvania, long a Republican influence in Congress, was to ascend for the first time to a Democratic leadership role. In his third term Boland was chosen whip, third topmost House post. In 1940 he was a prominent contender for majority leader, but yielded to Representative McCormack of Massachusetts. Weary of the gruelling whip's job, after yeoman service, he renounced it, only to swing into his old job again on McCormack's insistence.

It was Boland who developed the House whip organization for the first time to a high state of perfection. On short notice he could determine the voting temper of the House by contacting key members of his whip committee, who in turn tapped the men from their section.

His reputation for correctly predicting in advance how the House would go was put to a supreme test on extension of the Selective Service Act. For hours a roll call was delayed while Boland checked and rechecked his contacts. Finally he signaled "Go," but he warned that the vote would be close. It was. The count was 203 to 202.

He was one of the first Congressmen singled out for defeat by the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin when the Coughlin movement was at its height. In a spectacular campaign, Father Coughlin entered his district and spoke against him in 1936 because he opposed the Frazier-Lemke farm moratorium bill. Boland won, hands down.

His death was not only a sharp loss to the House leadership organization, but deprived the Administration of his needed help on the Ways and Means Committee at a time when the war tea bill faced crucial votes. Despite his death, it was probable he would be renominated in the Pennsylvania primaries today. That would leave selection of a candidate successor for the general election in November to the executive committee of the Democratic State committee.

As the House mourned his passing, Majority Leader McCormack told the hushed chamber that his death was precipitated by his arduous tasks and "from a legislative angle he is a casualty of the present conflict."

Speaker Rayburn, who rarely leaves the rostrum, stepped into the well to say: "God never made a truer man than Pat Boland."

R. B. Stevens, Tariff Board Head, Dies

Raymond B. Stevens, 68, chairman of the United States Tariff Commission, died yesterday in Indianapolis, Ind., after a long illness. Funeral services will be held in Landaff, N. H., at a date yet to be announced.

Born in Binghamton, N. Y., in 1874, Mr. Steens began his long and distinguished public career in 1899 when he was admitted to the New Hampshire bar after being graduated from Harvard Law School and Harvard College.

Before entering service with the Federal Government in 1912 as a Representative in Congress from New Hampshire, Mr. Stevens was a member of the New Hampshire Legislature.

In 1915 Mr. Stevens was appointed counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, where he remained for two years. At the time of his appointment to the commission he was married to Everesta Spink.

He left the Trade Commission in 1917 and was named vice chairman of the United States Shipping Board by President Wilson. While there, Mr. Stevens also served on the Allied Maritime Transport Council as the American representative.

Mr. Stevens returned to New Hampshire in 1920 to serve in that State's Legislature until 1923.

Adviser to Siam

In 1926 he went to Siam where he acted as adviser on foreign affairs to the Royal Siamese government until 1935. While in Siam he was also a member of the Supreme Court and a member of the Railroad Commission of that country.

When he returned to this country in 1935 he served on the Federal Trade Commission for a short time before being named to the United States Tariff Commission. He was designated chairman of that commission in 1937.

He leaves his wife and a son, David Stevens, a student at the Harvard Law School.

WPB to Order Simplification Of Men's Pajamas

The War Production Board, which has taken the cuffs off men's trousers and eliminated frills from women's undergarments, last night moved in on men's sleeping habits.

It was announced that a WPB order will be issued soon restricting the amount of cloth which can be used in men's pajamas and ordering simplified styles.

Major points on which all have agreed to act include the following:

1. Resctricting pajama styles to possibly only three—a collarless middie or slipover coat, a collarless "surplice" coat and a collarless "sleepcoat," the latter of which was described as a "sort of nightgown."

2. Restricting pajamas to fabrics containing specific thread counts.

3. Simplification of styles including the elimination of collars and lapels, cuffs, pockets, sashes on coats, piping and lining in cotton garments. "Trousers and coats would be shortened," the announcement said.

Maj. Kelly Makes Ralph Goldsmith And H. C. Bangs Honorary Inspectors

BADGES FOR BOYS CLUB LEADERS—Maj. Edward Kelly (right), chief of police presents an honorary police badge to Ralph Goldsmith, chairman of the recent Police Boys Club drive, at a luncheon given yesterday in Goldsmith's honor at the Ambassador Hotel. H. Clifford Bangs (left), president of the board of directors of the Police Boys Club, was also given a badge. He holds a composite photo, given as a surprise to Goldsmith, showing the drive chairman with boys of the club

In recognition of his service as chairman of the 1942 campaign committee of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club, Ralph L. Goldsmith yesterday was presented with an honorary badge as an inspector of the police department by Maj. Edward J. Kelly.

The presentation was made at a luncheon given by Morris Cafritz, former president of the club, for the board of directors at the Ambassador Hotel.

Cafritz presented Goldsmith with a composite picture of members of the five clubs maintained by the organization as a token from the more than 15,000 boys who participate in its activities.

Major Kelly also presented a similar badge to H. Clifford Bangs, recently elected president of the club.

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, in a talk commending Goldsmith for his service in helping raise more than $80,000 for the club fund, declared that the activities of the boys' clubs are made doubly essential by the war crisis. He said that at no time, either in war or in peace, can a Nation afford to neglect the training of its youth in citizenship.

Price Ceilings Go Into Effect

shoppers found clerks still in the process of stamping "ceiling price" on tags and posters, whether there had been any change.

"There has been no appreciable difference as yet," one store executive said. "Whereas we were selling woolen and spring apparel in March, now we are concentrating on cottons and other summer fabrics. Probably we will notice the effect of the price ceiling more in the fall, when woolens and winter garments go on sale again."

A vice president of another big store said that compliance with the OPA regulation was "mostly a matter of follow-up and detail work."

"Changes in prices so far have been in reduction by a few cents on such items as men's clothing and hose, but for the most part these changes are so widely scattered that we will have to wait for invoices for any real checking," he said.

Meanwhile it was pointed out that the price of a bottle of beer or a glass of milk sold by a restaurant, soda fountain or bar is controlled by the universal price ceiling, but that of a cocktail, ice cream soda or a cup of coffee isn't.

This in effect was the ruling of Price Administrator Leon Henderson in announcing that any beverage mixed and consumed on the premises was not subject to price control. However, he warned:

"The mere dropping of ice into a drink is not preparation."

"The regulation exempts food or beverages prepared and sold for consumption on the premises by restaurants, hotels, etc. The word 'prepared' means that something must be done besides cooling or icing, opening and pouring a beverage. The price of a glass, bottle or other container of a beverage not mixed on the premises is therefore controlled."

He listed as among the beverages whose price need not be held to the March level cocktails, highballs, ice cream sodas, chocolate malted milks, coffees, teas, cocoa and chocolate.

Gas Saved Can Be Used for Pleasure

in any block could easily be counted, the President and congressional leaders in conference took first steps toward an investigation of the possibility of building pipelines to feed gasoline into the thirsty tanks of Eastern cars.

The investigation, it was promised, would be immediate. The location of any pipelines would be a decision which could only follow a survey by such Government agencies as the Interior Department, the War Production Board and possibly the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, Senator Barkley (Democrat) of Kentucky said after the talks with the President yesterday.

Speaker Rayburn believed that within four months after a congressional authorization, a barge and pipeline system could be established for the East's relief. Pipeline construction, he thought, was the "quickest way of getting some oil to the East Coast."

The conferees discussed the possibility of using idle pipelines, of taking them up and putting them where they now are critically needed, Senator Barkley said. Probably two lines, he asserted, might be connected with Texas or Oklahoma fields and Florida or the Ohio River or with any other Eastern point "where we can get transportation into the Northeast section."

About nine months would be required to construct a Southwest-to-Northeast pipeline, it was estimated. Petroleum Coordinator Ickes' advocacy of a pipeline from Texas has been frowned on by the War Production Board because of the great amount of precious steel which would be required. Senator Barkley said he did not know how much the pipeline would cost.

Florida Canal Recommended

Discussing the acute gasoline problem with the President were Vice President Wallace, Speaker Rayburn, House Majority Leader MacCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts, and Senator Barkley. In this weekly conference, the gasoline question was uppermost, Barkley stated.

Maj. Gen. Eugene Raybold, chief, Army Engineer Corps, yesterday recommended construction of a pipeline and canal across Florida. The work, he said, should begin as quickly as possible as a help to the war effort.

He told the ouse Rivers and Harbors Committee that a 185-mile long, 24-inch pipeline costing 10 million dollars and capable of moving 250,000 barrels of oil a day from Carrabelle to Jacksonville, Fla., could be completed within six months if materials could be obtained "reasonably promptly."

Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, suggested that the Eastern States' gasoline shortage could be relieved by using railroad tank cars to carry the fuel only part of the way from the producing areas. He informed the Senate that pipeline facilities were available to move gasoline and oil at least as far east as Chicago and St. Louis and suggested that tank cars be used only from those points to the East instead of from points "a thousand miles west of Chicago and St. Louis, as I am informed is being done."

The Kansas Senator said he favored every necessary sacrifice to win the war but failed to see "the sense in sacrifice for the sake of sacrifice as suggested by those who would impose rigid and drastic gasoline restrictions in territory where there are surplus supplies of gasoline."

Here, where density of traffic fell off more visibly than ever to the observers yesterday, the numbers of gasoline ration cards issued were announced as follows:

A cards, 34,14.7.
B-1 cards, 14,377.
B-2 cards, 19,805.
B-3 cards, 53,442.
X cards, 15,606.
Boats, 70.
Total to date, 137,447.

Many Exchanging Cards

The rationing boards, swamped yesterday by motorists and among them many wanting to exchange X and B-3 cards for others of lesser allowance, believed that practically all motorists here have registered, that few, if any, put their cars away because of the rationing.

Meanwhile, it was reminded that the automobile industry has for some time advocated a check-up on automobile carburetors as one way of getting the most mileage from gasoline. Sometimes, it was pointed out yesterday, a simple adjustment will help.

The Public Roads Administration yesterday completed its check of Sunday traffic at specific points, as follows:

Wisconsin Avenue, near the Maryland line, 52 percent less than a Sun-cent less; Memorial Bridge, 29 per cent less; Memirial Bridge, 29 per cent less; Bladensburg Road, 25 per cent less; Twelfth and Thirteenth Streets Northeast, 25 per cent less; the downtown areas, 11 per cent less.

D.A.R. Plants an 'Elm' Of Uncertain Ancestry

Raleigh, N. C., May 18 (AP).—Some years ago Daughters of the American Revolution planted on North Carolina's Capitol Square, with elaborate ceremony, a little tree purported to be an offspring of the "Continental Elm," at Cambridge, Mass. ,under which George Washington took command of the Continental Army.

The good ladies even kept a box of earth taken from around the roots of the parent tree for use in christening the "Elm" when it grew up.

The little "Elm" has grown up—but it's blooming, and State Forester J. S. Holmes identified the blooms as cherry blossoms.

FWA May Drop All Nonwar Public Projects

By the Associated Press

Reexamination of the 1400 projects in the Federal Works Agency's public works program with the view of sidetracking for the duration all those not indispensable to the war has been ordered by Brig. Gen. Philip B. Fleming, FWA administrator.

Fleming said yesterday the action meant many projects approved prior to Pearl Harbor might be abandoned. Designs and specifications for others may be revised to eliminate proposed use of critical materials.

"The constantly growing shortage of all kinds of materials due to our war production program requires a drastic curtailment of every form of construction," Fleming said. "This means that unless a project is directly tied in to the actual production of ships, tanks, airplanes, guns, armament and other necessities of the armed services, it will be rescinded."

The administrator said projects including schools and hospitals would be analyzed from the standpoint of their direct relation to war production, the extent to which existing facilities were being utilized and what efforts had been made by local communities to meet demands for increased space without new construction. Where construction of new schools and hospitals is found essential, he said, temporary structures, probably of one-story frame, may be erected.

Fleming said Col. William N. Carey, chief engineer of the Federal Works Agency, began a week ago an exhaustive study through regional organizations of all pending war public works projects.

Winter on Sun

World Now Cooler, Says Smithsonian

By Stephen J. McDonough
Wide World Science Writer

The world is growing cooler.

Dr. Charles G. Abbot, secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, and two of his fellow workers, L. B. Aldrich nad W. H. Hoover, declared yesterday that the sun, from which the earth derives all its heat and on which all life depends, is approaching another winter in its output of heat.

The cycle of heat and cold, which appears to vary through a 23-year period, is due to reach its coolest point in about 1945.

Thus, they declare, the summers of the next three years are due to be cooler and the winters will be colder with heavier snowfall. They suggested that last winter, which in Russia was the severest winter in many years and which turned the tide of the German advance, may be a foretaste of the weather to come.

The Smithsonian secretary and his colleagues have just published the sixth volume of a series on observations of the heat of the sun during the last 20 years. The studies were conducted at three of the most remote and hottest places on the earth's surface.

From day to day and sometimes from hour to hour, scientists sent out on the institution's expeditions have measured the sun's heat with instruments capable of detecting a variation of a millionth of a degee change in temperature. They made their observations through deep tunnels hewn out of the solid rock where the earth's temperature remains constant and does not affect the solar measurements.

CAMOUFLAGED WITH TREE BRANCHES, a tank killer unit made up of fast trucks mounting 37-mm. antitank guns awaits the signal to roll into action. Arrow indicates one of the guns airplanes for distant observation.

In the offensive spirit, then America's tank destroyers are making ready to answer with fire and steel the armored monster which overran Poland and France and bored so deeply into Russia. They will fight with guns mounted on vehicles which can take them into action with no time lost unlimbering and going into position; they will fight with traps and obstacles and mines and grenades and crowbars and airplanes. They have translated the aggressive spirit of America into their single-minded purpose of killing tanks.

For training, they have found an ideal spot out here on the wide rolling plains of Texas. Tank destroyer soldiers, fresh from the cramped confines of Fort Meade, are overjoyed at the tremendous reaches over which they can maneuver their fast-moving formations. Tank soldiers, just out of the stump-infested flats of Camp Polk, are delighted that they can run their 28-ton juggernauts in the wide sweeping movements they love, through fields and woods, in cover and out, without let or hindrance.

Ideal Training Spot

Nature has given the tank destroyers a wealth of help out here in Texas, all of which they have accepted and put to use. North of their immense cantonment, for instance, there is a range of hills dominated by Sugar Loaf Mountain, which they will use as a backstop for 7 miles of target ranges. From positions directly in front of the cantonment they will fire against the backstops with all the weapons they've got and shells that ricochet or are fired over them will land in a broad dead space, an impact area in which no one will be admitted.

Out in the maneuver area, which must be vast enough to permit the full development of a type of fighting which ranges over whole townships, nature has provided almost every sort of terrain through which tank destroyers will ever meet tanks. Cowhouse Creek, a deep and swift stream, cuts diagonally through the reservation between formidable banks, offering an opportunity for endless problems in stream crossing. Several low mountain ranges, with abrupt wooded sides, frown beetle-browed over the grassy plains and here and there a lone mountain offers an obstacle which must be passed, a place of concealment for one's self or one from which an enemy may spring in furious attack.

These same hills, dominating countless acres of open land, offer a score of natural amphitheaters from which students may watch demonstrations from beginning to end and take in every nuance of doctrine and tactics. If the Army had ordered a location made to its purpose in tank destroyer training it could have done no better.

Recreation a Problem

Recreation for the permanent troops stationed here will be something of a problem; the students will be too busy to be concerned with recreation. There are several small towns within reach of camp, towns such as Gatesville and Belton and, within walking distance, Killeen. And Temple can be reached easily enough for weekends.

These towns are small and utterly unprepared for the overwhelming numbers of soldiers soon to be superimposed on their populations. But they are doing what they can, in the Texas spirit of hospitality bred of wide distances and onerous travel. The Army has taken steps to prevent an influx of boomtown rackets in Killeen and is doing its best to help people hereabouts make ready to take care of soldiers' needs.

There will be no problem of morale here. You know that at once when you see formations trying to march through gummy mud and loudly enjoying their predicament. You are certain of it when you talk with them and learn how pleased they are to be in a place where, for the first time, they can put into practice the things they have learned in theory. And, above all, they are dealing in offensive warfare here, warfare which takes the fight to the enemy and drops it in his lap and makes it too hot for him to hold.

A lot of what it takes to win battles will be bred here at Camp Hood, where the same spirit already has got the Tank Destroyer School going 3½ months before its time.

Stanley Marcus To Leave WPB

H. Stanley Marcus, who drafted the War Production Board's order prescribing women's wartime styles, is resigning to return to his business, the Neiman-Marcus Co. of Dallas, Tex.

WPB's announcement said that the illness of Marcus' father and "the fact that two of his brothers are now in the Army and a third will soon be" made it necessary for him to resume management of the firm. He plans to leave about June 1, but has agreed to serve until a successor is on the job.

Marcus joined WPB on January 14 as an apparel consultant and later became chief of the clothing section.

Jap Propaganda Cash Is Traced

consulate general, along with orders for the conduct of the propaganda machine.

The booklets did not show any sign that Japanese money and Japanese organization were behind them. "America Has No Enemies," for example, was signed simply by Townsend, who said in a foreword that "in publishing this I am not affiliated with any organization."

Ryder paid for the printing work, said Mrs. Bender, "always in cash," although he frequently had the billheads made out to Jikyoku Iinkai or to his codefendant, Williams.

Mrs. Bender identified thick sheaves of mailing lists, to which these booklets were sent—besides being mailed to thousands of persons whose names were placed on envelopes by the Japanese consulate.

These lists—which made available in all hundreds of thousands of names—resembled in some respects those of two other publications in which Townsend pleaded the Japanese case—Scribner's Commentator and the Herald of Lake Geneva, Wis.

Like the Scribner's lists, those of Jikyoku Iinkai showed the names of Congressmen and former Congressmen whose franks were used by the propaganda machine of George Sylvester Viereck, the jailed German agent. There were the names of Representatives Clare E. Hoffman, Hamilton iFsh, Jacob Thorkelson; of Senators Gerald Nye, Ernest Lundeen, Robert R. Reynolds and Rush Holt. There were Brig. Gen. George Van Horn Moseley, Charles A. Lindberg, Gerald B. Winrod and Frederich Ernest Auhagen (another German agent, now in prison). There also were Army officers and Army units, and Navy officers.

Japs Paid Well

Writing the Japanese propaganda paid well. Lieut. Edward C. Crimmins, now of the Army Air Force Intelligence, testified that he was paid $500 for one pamphlet several years ago. Fran Osborn, a San Francisco printing salesman, testified that this money came from the Japanese consulate. Ryder did considerable editing, said Osborn, to bring Crimmins' work into line with what Jikyoku and Iinkai wanted.

Toward midafternoon, Justice Goldsborough dismissed the jurors and asked counsel to explain where Crimmins fitted into the picture. Special Prosecutor Albert E. Arent did so and the court nodded understandingly. A Bret Harte scholar, the justice quoted a comment:

"For ways that are dark," he murmured softly, "and for tricks that are vain . . . you can't beat the heathen Chinee."

At least, it sounded like he said "Chinee."

Japs, Driven From West Bank of Salween, Launch Drive Farther South

mushu were wiped out. (These places, not shown on available maps in New York, apparently were where the Japanese reached the river.)

Paoshan No Longer Menaced

As a result, said the Chinese, Paoshan, 55 miles beyond the Salween by the winding Burma Road and the next Japanese objective in that theater, is no longer menaced by the northward movement from Lungling.

In the south, where the Japanese were attempting to drive up between the Mekong and Salween, the Chinese communique told of greatly intensified fighting three and four days ago around Mong Hai and Mong Lin, 30 and 45 miles south and southeast, respectively, of Kengtung, itself 60 miles inside the Thailand frontier.

Each time, the Chinese said, they threw back the Japanese, but the Japanese were reported to have been reinforced, and the battle was said to be continuing.

Apparently, too, the Japanese were pushing columns in from the two sides, along the Mekong to the east and across the Salween from the west.

The communique told of a successful Chinese counterattack at Mongpailiao along the Mekong, and of battles still raging at Kongkum and Taikao along the Salween.

These are all in the Shan states region of eastern Burma.

Chinese Set up New Bases

Far from abandoning Burma, Chinese military quarters said their forces were establishing new bases in the hills of eastern and northern Burma from which to continually menace the Japanese flank and conduct guerilla warfare against his bases and communications.

The presence of these forces was calculated to have a powerful effect upon a Japanese invasion of India or China.

(On the west Burma front, the opening phase of the battle for India appeared near as British imperial forces withdrew to less than 20 miles from the rugged frontier provincial border of Assam. The Japanese said their advance patrols were within four miles of the frontier.

(The weary, diminished forces of Gen. Sir Harold Alexander were being replaced by fresh troops from the command of Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell in India, however, and the Japanese were coming within range of stronger air forces of the Allies.

(The Allied air force hammered the Chindwin River crossing town of Kalewa in Burma, where the Japanese were said to have landed from river boats, smashing up waterfront warehouses, barges and river boats.)

Japs Fear U. S. Planes

In Eastern China, where the Japanese pursued an offensive in the coastal Province of Chekiang, presumably with the idea of seizing points which might serve as United States air bases for the bombing of Tokyo or Formosa, the fighting was intensified as the Japanese reinforced their columns and the Chinese attacked and inflicted heavy losses everywhere.

However, the Japanese were able to advance from Siaoshan to the vicinity of Chuki, in their push south of the Chientang River. One hard-fought action took place at Fenghwa, birthplace of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

Late Chinese dispatches tonight said the Chinese in surprise thrust in northern Chekiang fought their way into Haining, only 78 miles southwest of Shanghai, and inflicted considerable losses on the Japanese before withdrawing safely.

Jersey Bank Withdrawal Records Asked

By the Associated Press

Records of withdrawals for a 10-30 day period just before the closing of the New Jersey Title Guarantee & Trust Co. of Jersey City were called for yesterday by the Senate Judiciary Subcommittee, investigating the qualifications of Thomas F. Meaney for the Federal District Court bench in New Jersey.

Meaney formerly was State banking department counsel in charge of the affairs of the defunct institution.

Governor Edison, at the same time, actively entered the fight against Meaney's confirmation by sending the full committee a letter saying President Roosevelt's nominee was a "pawn" of Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City, a power in State Democratic politics for longer than 25 years.

Senator Smathers (Democrat), of New Jersey, chairman of the subcommittee controlling the nomination, said the withdrawal records would be furnished by Leo Crowley, chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the bank's biggest single creditor.

John R. Longo of Jersey City, outspoken Hague critic, testified at a public hearing on Meaney's qualifications last week that Meaney had been named banking department counsel because a Hague "puppet" was needed to cover up withdrawals by favored depositors just before the bank was closed.

"If there is any question of an unusual amount of withdrawals," Smathers said in an interview, "we might call the bank president (Walter Gardner of Jersey City) to testify."

The subcommittee conferred yesterday with Francis Brown, Crowley's general counsel, but Smathers said Brown did not have the necessary records. Crowley will confer with the committee later in the week, the Senator said.

Edison's statement regarding Meaney was sent to Smathers as well as the full Judiciary Committee, and Smathers immediately invited the Governor to appear before the subcommittee.

"There is no disposition to shut this thing off," Smathers said. "We want to hear anybody who has anything to say. This business of staying home and sending telegrams and protests only muddies the water."

He said the subcommittee would "show every courtesy in the world" to Edison, and that the Governor would be given a "reasonable time" to accept his invitation. He indicated a "reasonable time" would expire next Monday, the day the full committee again meets.

Edison told the committee in his letter that Meaney represented "an attitude toward the judicial office which is to me repulsive; and is and ever will be, I hope, repulsive to all Americans."

Ballot Today to End Bitter Campaign Of Davis, Martin

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, May 18.—Rival candidates for Governor put their claims to a decision of Pennsylvania's war-minded voters tonight after a "gloves-off" Republican primary fight and a sharp three-cornered Democratic contest.

All factions forecast a light vote in tomorrow's State-wide balloting. Party leaders agreed the average voter is more interested in the war than politics, and gasoline rationing complicates the job of getting voters to the polls.

United States Senator James J. Davis and Maj. Gen. Edward Martin mixed personalities freely in a rough-and-tumble scrap for the Republican gubernatorial nomination.

The Democratic candidates, Judge Ralph H. Smith, Auditor General F. Clair Ross and Luther A. Harr, bituminous coal consumers' counsel, remembering the party-splitting fight in 1938, avoided personal feuding.

Also at stake are nominations for lieutenant governor, secretary of internal affairs, one justice of the Supreme Court, one judge of the Superior Court, 32 district Congressmen and one Congressman-at-large, 208 State representatives—the entire membership—25 State senators, representing half of the membership. candidate.

A note of sadness was injected into the primary by the unexpected death today of Representative Patrick J. Boland of Scranton, Democratic Whip of the House, who was a candidate for reelection. Election officials said that in event of his nomination tomorrow the State committee would name a candidate.

Dies Committee Member Assails Freeing Browder

New York, May 18 (AP).—Representative J. Parnell Thomas (Republican), New Jersey, a member of the Dies Committee on Un-American Activities, asserted today in a telegram to President Roosevelt that the freeing of Earl Browder, former American Communist leader, was proof that "the New Deal is garroted by Communists."

Terming the President's action in commuting Browder's sentence on a passport fraud conviction "most deplorable," Thomas said he would recommend that the next meeting of the Dies Committee "make the New Deal-Communist marriage our first order of business."

Thomas said that he appreciated fully the importance of Soviet Russia in the war but that he was determined "not to betray the gallant heroes of our far-flung battle fronts by losing the war at home."

"Count Me In" Makes It Two in a Row for C. U.

Lester Cowan Signs for Broadway Option; Jean Gabin's French Films in Brisk Demand; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

NOW IT CAN BE TOLD.

So immediate was the success of "Count Me In," the topical musical revue, presented last week by the Speech and Drama Department of Catholic University, that an option on the New York rights to the piece was signed yesterday by Lester Cowan on behalf of a syndicate of Broadway's foremost producers. The New York rights, of course, embrace "big time" production and bookings throughout the United States.

VICTOR MOORE

While the producers primarily interested are not divulged, Father Gilbert V. Hartke's announcement makes known that the tuneful frolic was viewed last week by Lee Shubert, John Wildberg, Cheryl Crawford, Michael Myerberg, A. L. Jones, Kurt Weill and others prominent in the professional and governmental fields, including Melvyn Douglas of the ODC, and Archibald MacLeish of OFF.

Since "Count Me In" was a complete sellout the last half of its eight-day run and turned away hundreds over the weekend, and because numerous others of the theater's big shots are eager to give it their personal appraisal, the Walter Kerr-Leo Brady-Ann Ronell hit will be reopened for three performances next Saturday, Sunday and Monday nights, at 8:30 o'clock, in the University Theater. It is expected then that Gilbert Miller, George Abbott and other first-flight producers will be on hand to see it.

And another thing. Feelers are already out for a top musical comedy star to appear in the Broadway production, when, as and if that happy consummation comes off, as now seems assured. Topping the list of those under consideration is Victor Moore. In case he is available, what is now the second male lead will be expanded to William Gaxton's costellar dimensions in order that the famous team of Moore and Gaxton, celebrated in so many topnotch musicals, may be kept intact.

In case this doesn't materialize, there are still Charles Butterworth, Charles Winninger and Hugh Herbert—all interested—to fall back on. It is being grapevined around that Mr. Butterworth will be dropping in over the weekend to give the piece a look.

All this comes about, of course, as a result of the deep impression made on the Broadway brass hats by the Speech and Drama Department's success with "Brighton Rock" and "Art and Prudence." Gilbert Miller is said still to be deeply interested in the future of the former and "Mike" Myerberg already holds the Broadway rights to the latter. For all of which Father Hartke and his associates are to be congratulated. It not only is the culmination of unceasing creative effort over a period of five years or so, reflecting enormous credit upon C. U., but has served to establish the college theater as a national source of stage material worthy of production under the most distinguished auspices. That is by way of being a considerable achievement.

Afterthoughts on an Important Event

Enlarging upon yesterday's hasty, midnight report of the opening of Steve Cochran's Olney Theater, it should be added that in process of complete remodeling the theater itself has been vastly improved from the standpoint of audience comfort and convenience. Comfortable rest rooms have been provided at the front of the house, the colonnaded entrance serves as a spacious foyer and the enclosed side promenades both will be equipped with refreshment stands, although only one was in operation Sunday night. As has been previously stated here, the adjoining Olney Restaurant is a capacious and perfectly appointed refectory, already engaged in the serving of delicious foods. Many finishing touches remain to be added, but even as it stands as of today, the Olney plant takes rank as the foremost professional summer theater community in the South. With such attractions as Eddie Dowling and Nedda Harrigan, in Kaufman and Hart's "George Washington Slept Here," it offers Washingtonians—and Baltimoreans, too—a rare hot-weather amusement bargain.

With "Moon Tide," his first Hollywood production, not yet in national circulation, Jean Gabin's more recent French pictures are getting a run for their money—and yours—in and around the Capital. With "Daybreak" current on the screen at the Pix, the Hiser Theater, out in Bethesda, Md., announces that beginning Sunday it will present "Port of Shadows" ("Le Quai de Brumes") for the first time in this area. A winner of six international film awards, "Port of Shadows" is one of the last great pictures completed in France before the Nazi invasion. In the leading feminine role is Michele Morgan, another recent Hollywood importation, soon to be seen at RKO-Keith's with Paul Henreid in the long-deferred "Joan of Paris."

If you have been worrying about the Boxoffice Blue Ribbon Award for April, it went to Walt Disney's "Fantasia" as a general release at popular prices.

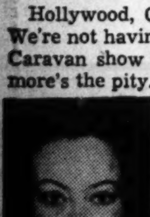
At Last, the Caravan Is Resting!

Hollywood, Calif., May 18. We're not having that Victory Caravan show here after all, more's the pity. I don't think there's a citizen here who wouldn't give an eyetooth to see it, but we've had so many benefits lately, collecting funds for everything. Then, too, unless we used the Hollywood Bowl—and it's too cold for that—there isn't a hall here big enough to house it.



JOAN CRAWFORD

There's no trouble brewing between Joan Crawford and Metro. She's not only going to do "Reunion," but has asked for Philip Dorn as her leading man, which will undoubtedly make him a star. After that she'd do "Oh, Bury Me!"—play by Patricia Coleman, bought from under the nose of Katie Hepburn. Sure, she wanted it!

Along with the much-talked-of shortage of men here, there seems to be a definite increase in the number of pictures which are using men primarily. "Wake Island," "Remember Pearl Harbor," and "Thunderbirds" are good examples of features in which there are practically no women. I don't know what the solution to this problem will be, but producers had better get busy and figure a way out.

I hear Garbo's picture, "Two-Faced Woman," is causing riots in Sweden. They think she's playing a fallen woman and they don't like it.

Martha O'Driscoll's brother, Bill, is playing Marine in "Wake Island."

The silver dress Priscilla Lane wears in "Silver Queen" will be melted down after picture's finished and value turned into war bonds. Harry Sherman, the old meanie, won't tell me how much it's worth. But to wear it, Priscilla dons a corset for the first time—to get her waistline down to 17 inches.

Caroll Bernstein wants a mere $28,000 for the title, "Melancholy Baby," because Buddy De Sylva wants it as a title for a picture.

Freddie Brisson went into the Beaux Arts Gallery and asked Artist Thomas Lincoln to paint a life-sized portrait of Roz Russell from his favorite photographer.

Incidentally, Lincoln has presented his painting of General MacArthur to Gen. Ralph Cousins, who says it's the most lifelike thing he ever saw. Cousin's, by the way, has the handsomest dress uniforms you've ever laid your peepers on, but he hasn't taken them out of the moth balls in California.

While Hedy Lamarr and her mother were taking their constitutional, they were approached by four soldiers, one of them with a camera, who said, "Would you mind taking a snapshot of us all together?" Then he handed the camera to Hedy's mother and said, "Won't you take us with your daughter? Our mothers know we're in Hollywood, and consequently think we know all the movie stars—and this will prove it to them!"

Lela Rogers is writing a book called "Ginger Rogers and the Riddle of the Scarlet Cloak." Book, to be published thsi fall, will deal with a hotel telephone operator named Ginger Rogers, who rounds up a gang of saboteurs and spies. Publishers wanted Ginger to write it, but she didn't have time—insisted that no one could do it like her mother.

It was a generous impulse that prompted the National Theater to save one of the best comedies of the year for the final attraction of one of the most successful seasons in its history.

That would be the highly-vaunted and long-awaited carnival of gentle murder known by the whimsical title of "Arsenic and Old Lace," which for two weeks will kill its customers with laughter. It fulfills the most extravagant boasts of the skill with which it distils hilarity from homicide.

A problem might suggest itself to some minds as to whether Joseph Kesselring has dedicated his fantastic farce to murder or insanity. They go hand in hand throughout the three acts and four scenes. Assuredly he has dedicated it to delirious amusement derived from most extraordinary sources.

The play opens deceptively enough with two sweet old ladies sedately entertaining the Rev. Dr. Harper in the Victorian living room of their peaceful Brooklyn home, where their father had pursued quaint practices in medicine and amassed a fortune that remains undiminished in their possession. They are discussing the uses of sweet charity, as most eloquently exemplified in the tender solicitude of the Misses Abby and Martha Brewster, themselves. A nephew, who thinks himself Teddy Roosevelt, injects a slightly discordant note into the soul feast and thus drops the first hint that all may not be well with the hereditary line. Startling confirmation of the sound foundation of the grim foreboding is not far to seek.

A Dozen Kindly Killings

These neighborhood angels of mercy, respected and revered by everyone from the Rev. Dr. Harper to the cops on the beat, coyly confess to the compassionate release from their wordly woes of 12 lonely old men, who must be very happy in their graves. The body of the last of the dozen reposes in the window seat, awaiting the kindly obsequies the sisters always hold over their victims in the basement, where Teddy is digging the Panama Canal. Nephew Mortimer, a young dramatic critic to end all dramatic critics—not a bad idea!—discovers the household secret just as he has proposed to Rev. Harper's modestly unchurchly daughter. That would seem to be groundwork enough for any self-respecting comedy. But not for Mr. Kesselring.

No, Mr. Kesselring must have another nephew, Jonathan, return from a world tour of carnage, accompanied by Dr. Einstein—Herman, not Albert—a besotted plastic surgeon, who gives Jonathan a new face whenever the exigency of the moment seems to require a new face to outface the law. They, too, have a score of 12 to their credit—the last one in the rumble seat of their car.

Mix these heady ingredients with the Brewster brand of elderberry wine—tinctured with a jigger of arsenic, a spot of strychnine and just a dash of cyanide—a particularly gullible police force and the superintendent of the insane asylum and it shakes up into as dizzying a concoction of mirth as one could ever hope to encounter across the footlights. The delightful whimsy of the climax and denouement of it all is something not to be divulged in advance.

A Cast of Rare Endowment

In the distinguished talents of Laura Hope Crews and Effie Shannon, Abby and Martna Brewster find delightful, humorous and complete realization. By the sheer delicacy, warmth and naivete of their portrayals, they make evil innocent and murder charming. Erich von Stroheim, as the Jonathan who flies into a fury at the suggestion that he looks like Erich von Stroheim, and Henry Sharp, the touseled inebriate, Dr. Einstein, contrive to blend comedy generously with the more gruesome aspects of their roles, and Jack Whiting, as the critical Mortimer, plays with a fine and executive ebullience that is matched by Angie Adams, in the sprightly role of Elaine Harper. Forrest Orr's Teddy Brewster is a remarkably facile caricature that adds enormously to the evening's merriment, and the Brooklyn police force is ridiculously represented by Al Webster, Harold Gary, Harry Kadison and Richard S. Bishop. Henry Buckler and Otis Sheridan complete the able ensemble.

Those who have missed everything else at the National this season still have an opportunity to revel in one of its most uproarious laughs.

Loose-Leaf Notebook

New York, May 18.

William Dieterle, the Hollywood director, is a confirmed astrologist. He won't start a picture until he has studied the astral charts and decided that the stars are right . . . Dieterle is one of the few recognized directors who as yet isn't a member of the Screen Directors Guild. The guild finally appointed a committee of three to approach Dieterle about joining the organization. William Wyler, Garson Kanin and Ernst Lubitsch were selected . . . They met with Dieterle and asked him: "Are you opposed to the Screen Directors Guild?" . . . "No," he replied . . . "Then why don't you join?" he was asked . . . "Because the stars are against it," explained the astrologist-director . . . "Stars, stars," Lubitsch raged. "Listen, Bill—haven't you learned yet—in Hollywood no star is as important as a director?"

RUTH GORDON

Romo Vincent, the 285-pound comic who played "Mr. Average Motorist" in OPA's gas-rationing demonstration for the newsreels, doesn't own a car—and he can't drive . . . This is the reverse of the stories where men cut off toes or fingers to avoid military service. Irving Schlossenberg, photographer for The Washington Post, was rejected by the United States Marines—until he went to a hospital and had one of his toes amputated. Schlossenberg had six toes on one foot . . . One of the most treasured contributions to the U. S. O. campaign is a $5 bill numbered D-5879081-A, G-527, Series 1934. It was presented to the United States consul in Algiers by a former French soldier who had been a prisoner of war in Germany.

Colin Keith-Johnson brought an R. A. F. flier into Sardi's to meet Ruth Gordon. They spoke of airports, and Miss Gordon told him: "I was presented officially with the key to Mitchel Field" . . . "We don't have those things in England," the flier told her. "Over there we just give them the freedom of the field, but no key" . . . "And over here," Miss Gordon told him, "we get the key—but no freedom of the field."

When Lord Beaverbrook made his Waldorf speech before the bureau of advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers Association the dress suit he wore was rented . . . Kenneth Spencer of Cafe Society is being screen-tested by M.-G.-M. for "Cabin in the Sky" . . . At the Algonquin now all sugar bowls have American flags in them as an appeal to conscience . . . Last week Radio Actor Arthur Vinton announced that he would run for Congress against Representative Ham Fish. This week, in his first role since making his political declaration, Vinton played the part of a crooked politician in the radio show, "Mr. District Attorney."

It was Adolf Berle who engineered the new pact with Martinique. He took over negotiations from the British after the bloodshed in Madagascar . . . Cards now are being printed for presentation to persons who discuss Government secrets in public places or who publicly denounce phases of the war program. The cards read: "Our Fuehrer Thanks You for Your Expression of Loyalty" . . . At a public dinner here a few days ago Louis Nizer conducted a quiz, in which he asked: "Do public officials ever go to purgatory?" When the correct answer was announced—"No, because the newspapers give 'em hell on earth"—the guests all turned to see the man who shouted and cheered at this line . . . Newspaper Baiter Fiorello LaGuardia.

A $15.30 contribution to the Stage Door came this week from the Naval Aviation Cadet Selection Board. With it was a note: "Nothing is so much cherished as that which has been paid for in some way" . . . The Beachcombers Club on Broadway will be reopened shortly. The owners of Miami's 5 o'Clock Club will operate it . . . Pickfair, the Hollywood showplace owned by Mary Pickford, is being turned over to the U. S. O. one day each week . . . Walter Bullock, the venerable British newspaperman, died here a few days ago. His colleague, Percy Bullen, said: "We both started as cub reporters in England. We both were graduated abroad in journalism—he in Berlin, I in Paris. We both were pensioned at the same time. And we both were very much content to live in the United States."

No play or cast, in our times, received as much acclaim from the critics as has the current, extended revival of "Candida." The play almost was closed last week because of the regulations which originally permitted Private Burgess Meredith to go from California to New York on detached service . . . Meredith's 28-day leave expired in the middle of last week's matinee. He flew to Washington, obtained an extension of leave and flew back in time to make the show.

Army Scenes

Only the fact that Army training camp scenes for "True to the Army" were photographed just before war's outbreak enabled their inclusion in the Judy Canova-Allan Jones starring film.

Allies May Set Up International WPB

Council Would Speed Production of War Materials by Nations

By Nicholas P. Gregory

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Creation of an international economic and production council to speed production of war materials in order to strike the Axis powers a death blow this year is being considered by the governments of the United States, Great Britain, China and Russia, it was learned yesterday.

At present, these nations are tied together on the economic and production fronts through various committees set up since last December, but it is felt that greater use of their manufacturing facilities can be obtained through a reexamination of existing machinery.

Military requirements will rule every important economic step to be taken. Although the United States, Great Britain, China and Russia would bear the responsibility, every one of the 26 United Nations would participate in the over-all plan, which has been likened to the organization of an international war production board.

Much Spade Work Done

Speed in delivering war materials is the primary factor in the present discussions between American and Allied officials. For example, it is believed that a re-examination of existing production facilities of each country might determine whether the United States should ship the finished product—tanks, for example, for Russia—or send the raw materials to England.

Apparently, production in some items has reached such large proportions that it is believed concentration of manufacturing facilities on one phase of offensive weapon or weapons would be desirable. Much of the spade work in this connection already has been done, thanks to the calibration weapons and standardization of equipment which are proceeding on an increased scale.

Production capacity in the United States has reached astounding proportions and it is expected to go still higher when new plants now being completed go into operation. Capacity is exceeding raw materials, so the whole Allied program is being examined in the light of these new developments.

BEW Examines Problems

If the Allied governments decide on the plan to utilize existing production facilities rather than expand, shipment of raw materials from point to point would increase.

Some of the problems are now being examined by the Board of Economic Warfare, which was given sole authority by President Roosevelt recently to do all the buying of raw materials for the United States. The BEW has set up an engineering division. This may be the nucleus for possible expansion of American plants in various countries to be manned by American labor to manufacture materials needed on foreign fronts.

Payments Now Asked to Buy Postwar Items

By the Associated Press

New York, May 17.—The Advertising Club of New York today advanced a Nation-wide plan to speed the sale of war bonds and to encourage immediate retail orders for automobiles, refrigerators and other capital goods for postwar delivery.

Declaring that its proposal was "laid on an established foundation—the installment buying habit of the American people," the club would have consumers pay regular monthly installments on articles ordered with the cash to be invested in war bonds and held in trust for the purchaser. After the war the bonds would be cashed in as the goods were delivered to the buyer.

"Interest accruing on the bonds will be applied to the purchaser's account until the transaction is concluded," the club's statement said. "Naturally an approximate price will govern—subject to adjustment at time of delivery.

"These advance payments by consumers will achieve the siphoning off of excess buying power during the war and, at the same time, furnish the industries not engaged in the manufacture of war materials a paid-in-advance backlog of orders with which to cushion the change-over of their plants at the end of the war."

Taxi Association Members Jointly Liable, Says Court

Independent taxicab drivers, operating as members of an unincorporated association for identifying purposes and convenience, are jointly liable for negligence of individual operators under a decision handed down yesterday by the Court of Appeals.

The court voided a decision of the District Court which ruled in favor of 36 members of the Harlem Taxicab Association who protested a court order to jointly pay a $200 damage judgment or lose their driving permits and registrations.

The $200 judgment was originally awarded, but not paid, to Mary Champ, who sued the taxicab association for injuries suffered March 15, 1937, when she was struck by a taxicab operated by a member of the association.

Jewish Congress Seeks Recognition Of World Status

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Chicago, May 18.—A demand that the United Nations recognize "The international status of the Jewish people" and give them full opportunity to participate in any peace conferences in all matters affecting their interests was made today by the American Jewish Congress at the final session of its war emergency conference here.

The conference, in a resolution adopted unanimously by the delegates, also urged that opportunity be given immediately for the raising of a Jewish army in Palestine to serve with the United Nations forces in the Middle East and that Palestine be established as a Jewish state after the war. The resolution was proposed by Louis Lipsky, chairman of the governing council of the congress.

Dr. Stephen S. Wise, of New York, was reelected president of the congress.

Promotion of 23 members of the Police Department, 9 of whom were moved up as a result of other members taking leave to join the armed forces, were approved yesterday by the District Commissioners.

The Commissioners also approved permanent assignments for 12 police officers who had received temporarily promotions due to existing vacancies and retirements. Among these were Capt. Archie M. Winfree, replacing Capt. Joseph C. Morgan, retired; Lieut. Basil F. McAllister, replacing Capt. Winfree, and Lieut. Norman S. Hodkinson, replacing Lieut. Emil Desch, retired.

Temporary promotions were issued to Lieut. Nelson O. Holmes, to be temporary captain, replacing Capt. Lloyd E. Kelly; Sergt. Cyrus E. Perry, promoted to lieutenant, replacing Lieut. John E. Scott, also with the Army; Sergt. Chester C. Gouldman, to replace Lieut. Holmes; Sergt. Otha R. Sanders, temporary lieutenant, replacing Lieut. Walter H. Thomas, temporary captaincy; Pvts. John L. Mason and Francis W. Marple, temporary sergeants replacing Sergts. Sanders and Perry; Pvts. George V. Moore, Jack R. Milsted and Forrest L. Binswanger, sergeancies, replacing Sergts. Walter R. Ostrom, George C. Deyo and James S. Dawn, all of whom are now in active Army service. Pvt. Arthur T. Davis became a precinct detective, replacing Eldon F. Hawley, also now in military service.

Those given temporary promotions will be reverted to their former status when department members now serving with the armed forces return. A total of 56 police officers are now serving in the various branches of the military service, and three others are expected to leave in a few weeks.

Charles Cook of Washington Is Youngest Captain at Polk

Charles Harvey Cooke, 25-year-old native Washingtonian and former football and lacrosse star at the University of Maryland, has been promoted from lieutenant to captain at Camp Polk, La., and is now the youngest man in his regiment to hold that rank.

CAPT. COOKE

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Henry Cooke, who live at 2005 Kearny Street Northeast, attribute his rapid rise to the four years of R. O. T. C. training at the University of Maryland, where he was graduated in 1937 as cadet major.

Born here on June 28, 1916, Captain Cooke attended the John Burroughs School and McKinley Manual Training. Because of his R. O. T. C. background he was commissioned a second lieutenant when he joined the Army in 1940.

He was married last September to the former Dorothy Virtie Millar, whom he met while they were both students at Maryland. His father is a sales manager for a Washington printing firm. Living with his parents are a brother, John H., 19, and a sister, Viola, 15.

From the Turner Field Advanced Air Corps Flying School, Albany, Ga., came word yesterday that Aviation Cadet Fontaine B. Hooff, jr., of 4831 Thirty-sixth Street Northwest has reported there for final flight instruction leading to a commission.

Another Washingtonian, Lloyd R. Caracofe, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry DeVanie of 72 I Street Northwest has been accepted for preliminary flight instruction at the Air Force Replacement Training Center at Santa Ana, Calif.

Officials of the A. P. Hill Military Reservation, Fredericksburg, Va., announced that Leroy A. Porter, jr., a selectee inducted in April, 1941, has been promoted to staff sergeant. He lives at 6503 Connecticut Avenue Northwest, Chevy Chase, Md.

Madeline Sobs As Jury Hears Plot Details

By the Associated Press

New York, May 18.—Madeline Webb wept today and could not stop weeping as Murray Hirschl, a former friend, testified that she had a part in the planning and in the aftermath of the robbery-slaying of Mrs. Susan Flora Reich, 52-year-old Polish refugee.

The 28-year-old model is accused along with Eli Shonbrun, the man the State calls her lover, and John D. Cullen, a convicted thief, of first-degree murder in the strangling of Mrs. Reich on March 4.

Uncle of Defendant

Hirschl, uncle of Shonbrun and himself a convicted thief under indictment for the slaying, calmly related a story of crime so cheap that, he said, its perpetrators even stole 10 cents' worth of adhesive tape with which the victim's mouth was gagged.

Madeline lost self-control when Hirschl told of meeting her a few blocks from the Hotel Sutton, where the crime was committed, a few minutes after the hour—1 o'clock—when police say Mrs. Reich's death occurred.

"Madeline said she was very nervous," Hirschl testified. "She said the minute the woman arrived (at the hotel suite) they grabbed her, and she heard the woman yell as she left the door."

"Oh, oh," Madeline moaned, rocking back and forth in her courtroom chair, holding her head in her hands.

"She said there was a man working in the hall with a vacuum cleaner, making a lot of noise, and also that the radio was going full blast, but she left very calmly, she said, and didn't think she attracted any attention."

Shonbrun suddenly stormed at the witness:

"You'll never sleep again, Murray."

But Hirschl's calm-voiced testimony went on and on. He testified he met the three defendants in the Hotel Sutton suite on the morning of the crime. He told of buying some nippers, a jeweler's tool, at Shonbrun's request.

The State—and the State's star witness, Hirschl—claim the nippers were used in cutting a diamond ring off Mrs. Reich's finger.

He testified to accompanying Cullen that morning on a shopping trip for wire and scissors and adhesive tape—the tools which the State claims were used in gagging and binding up Mrs. Reich. Cullen "palmed the tape," Hirschl said, but "couldn't get away without paying" for 29 cents worth of wire and a ten-cent pair of scissors.

According to Hirschl's testimony, murder was not a part of the defendant's plans. They intended only to rob, and the woman's death was an accident, he indicated.

Shonbrun and Cullen met him and Madeline at the corner of Fifty-seventh Street and Third Avenue shortly after the robbery, Hirschl testified, and, he added:

"John told me he had made sure the woman was breathing."

Gen. Somervell Asks Engineers to Assist In Attacking Worst Bottleneck—Transportation

A note of urgent pleading in his voice, Lieut. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, commander of the Army's Services of Supply, appealed last night for assistance in attacking "our greatest bottleneck"—transportation.

"I urge you, try to help us out with this!" the white-haired 50-year-old supply chief requested with eloquent feeling at a dinner of more than 1200 engineers at the Mayflower Hotel.

"Our tank factories and our plane factories are turning out machines in numbers that would astound and dismay the dictators," he said. "Our task is to get them where they are needed by the shortest possible route and in the shortest possible time.

"If one of you transportation engineers can figure out some way of increasing our transportation efficiency, and put that scheme to work, you'd be as great a national hero as the general who wins battles on the field."

Cheering View

A cheering view of another war problem, materials, was given to the engineers, meeting under auspices of 16 national engineering organizations to consider the engineer's job in war production, by William L. Batt, chairman of the War Production Board's requirements committee.

"I am convinced that there is enough material in this country to win this war," he asserted. "But I am convinced that this material must be husbanded carefully by intelligent people so that not a pound is wasted."

Such a statement, he remarked, is certain to find dissenters, but to take the other side of the question "you would have to conclude that we are not going to win the war."

Somerall, too, was optimistic over the general war effort despite the problem of transport, "afloat and ashore," and the fact that the Axis has an advantage in "discipline and a head start."

"When Hitler put this war on wheels he ran it straight down our alley," Somervell declared. "When he hitched his chariot to an internal combustion engine he opened up a new battle front, a front that we know well. It's called Detroit.

"When Hitler took this war into the skies he rose into our own element. We'll meet him there on even terms. We're meeting him there already. From Brest to Berlin he feels our strength, and as the days of summer lengthen he'll feel it again and yet again without respite.

"When Hitler brought civilian populations into the war as innocent victims, he unthinkingly brought in the German people . . . And now that the German people are beginning to feel our wrath, and as a thousand of their cities and towns soon will feel it, they will know that Hitler's promises are written in water. And Hitler will meet a new enemy . . . It will be his own people, and retribution will be swift and merciless."

As for the engineer's job in war production, Somervell called on his audience to present their ideas swiftly to the agency they will aid, "be it railroad, or building construction, steamship or tank arsenal."

Batt said the engineer could be of great assistance in the conservation of war materials through development of "the mines above the ground"—by saving waste materials and by better utilization of scrap.

"The importance today of scrap can hardly be exaggerated," he said.

He named conservation of steel, alloys and other critical materials by revising specifications and "better technique, better ingenuity" on the part of management as other fields for improvement.

Press Resigns Trade Board Job To Enter Army

William H. Press resigned as executive secretary of the Washington Board of Trade yesterday to report for active duty as a captain of Army Engineers.

Clarence A. Arata, assistant manager of the Board of Trade's greater national Capital committee, will succeed Press as acting executive secretary.

When appointed executive secretary in February, 1941, Press was the youngest man filling such a post in any large city chamber of commerce or board of trade in the country.

Arata has been with the Board of Trade since 1938. Prior to that he was assistant manager of the convention bureau of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce. He graduated from the University of Cincinnati in 1933, receiving a LL. B. degree, and is a member of Delta Tau Delta.

Soldiers' Pay

We cannot possibly compensate the men in uniform for the type of service they are rendering. The simple fact is that few of the soldiers in our Army could be hired on a dollars-and-cents basis to shoulder a gun and go off to foreign lands to endure the terror of a blitzkrieg. They accept this responsibility for one reason only: their fighting strength is necessary to preserve the civilization of which they are a part. So in large measure their compensation will be the blessings of peace and freedom which must be regained once more on the battlefield.

With this principle firmly established, however, rates of pay in the services ought to be adjusted to present-day realities. Prices have risen substantially since Congress last fixed the rates of pay for soldiers and sailors. Since the man in the ranks is provided with food, clothing and shelter, he may in part escape the effect of rising prices. But a Government which has permitted substantial wage increases for workers who are not risking death for their country certainly cannot object to a reasonable increase in the pay of men at the front.

On the whole the Senate bill providing a base pay of $42 for Army and Marine Corps privates and Navy and Coast Guard apprentice seamen seems to be preferable to the House bill raising this figure to $50. Congress would do well to remember that it must still deal with the problem of aiding dependents of soldiers who have no other means of support. And the necessity of curbing inflation enters into every question of putting more dollars into the hands of consumers. Regarded from the viewpoint of the soldier, $50 a month is certainly not over-generous. If Congress decides to go that far, however, it should resolve at the same time to reach a little deeper into the pockets of workers in civilian life to counteract the inflationary influence of so sharp an adjustment in service pay.

Priorities Breakdown

A complete revamping of the method of distributing essential raw materials to industry is said to be in prospect, for the present priorities system is approaching a breakdown.

Under the present system concerns with limited war orders have managed to obtain unduly large supplies of strategic materials for production of nonmilitary goods. Factories engaged in war production have also accumulated excessively large inventories of scarce metals. Obviously such leakages through our loose priorities system must be stopped.

The WPB has issued an increasing number of orders prohibiting or drastically restricting the use of specified materials by civilian industries, or directly banning the manufacture of articles which call for the use of strategic materials. Additions to these lists of scarce and prohibited articles are being constantly made, with resultant further curtailment of civilian industry as the war effort is stepped up. But in spite of all that has been done, the WPB is worried by evasions of priorities orders calling for disciplinary action. So more drastic action has become imperative. We must insure a more rapid flow and a better apportionment of scarce materials required by war industries. Fortunately, the WPB is reported to be working on plans for allocating definite amounts of metals and other materials to essential industries, to be divided among individual plants and used within specified time limits. This would not only take care of future supplies of materials; it could also be employed to redistribute excessive inventories.

The WPB has almost completed a survey of the supplies on hand and the requirements of the major metal-working industries. With that information assembled, it will be in a position to allocate supplies of scarce metals much more effectively than is possible under a priorities system. Of course, excessive inventories are not always the result of deliberate overstocking. They may be due to official bans upon civilian production following the acquisition of raw materials. For that reason inventory surveys are especially needed just now when civilian production is being sharply curtailed, in order to determine how much material is on hand. And then we must make certain that these materials reach war plants where they can be put to effective use.

This Vital Summer

War correspondents fresh from internment camps in Germany and Italy seem to agree that the showdown with Nazi Germany is approaching. That showdown will be on two fronts. There is the land front, which in southern Russia has already begun to resound with the fury of attack and counterattack. But equally important there is the sea front, and that is mainly located in the Atlantic Ocean. Hitler, according to one of the released correspondents, Joseph W. Grigg, has sent out from 180 to 300 submarines to slash at Allied shipping in the Atlantic.

This is a challenge which more nearly concerns the United States than any other member of the United Nations. Here is the arsenal of democracy upon which our allies are counting for meeting and repelling and overcoming Hitler's grand offensive. That arsenal is now emitting the weapons of war in amazing abundance. But it is of little use for us to go on making munitions unless we are able to deliver them to our fighting friends. And the fact is that our deliveries are lagging behind our output. The reason is that we are short of enough transport for the gigantic task of feeding the war machine in Europe.

Let there be no mistake. The responsibility does not rest upon the men who are in charge of our shipbuilding program. We are abreast and beyond the schedule of building which the President outlined when this country was plunged into war—fantastic though the figures at the time seemed to be. But events do not wait upon programs. We, like Hitler, are now thinking of 1942 as the year of reckoning. That is implicit in the new ruling of the War Production Board to defer new factory building and to make the fullest use of existing equipment for turning out munitions. Accordingly we cannot afford to dwell upon—even to think of—shipbuilding performance "after 1943," even though that performance, as given by Admiral Land, seems destined to be phenomenal. What we need is the mobilization and protection of all available shipping now.

That is why this newspaper cannot share the "reassurance" which the White House bespeaks for our shipping output. No doubt we are building ships "faster than ever before in the history of the world," to quote the official statement. The fact remains that munitions which should be on the way to the Russian battlefield and to Britain are piling up on our wharfs. The fact remains that sinkings are playing nip and tuck with replacements. In this situation there is no room for complacency, no time for satisfaction over our speed in building new ships. We must cast around for ways and means of enlisting for war work the tonnage which is already roaming the seas on nonwar work. We must also explore better methods of protecting our seaborne traffic from U-boats.

The first suggestion is familiar to our readers. At the beginning of April this newspaper made the assumption that the summer of this year would be vital. And we asked: Is there not a whole lot of tonnage which is now being used on import business for civilian purposes that could be waived for six months? There was, and there is. For in the meantime not nearly enough seems to have been done to conserve our shipping. Business as usual in hides from Argentina, for instance, is still in progress, though this country has enough shoes and leather to meet all footwear requirements for the next two years. It is time that all such traffic should stop. Surely there is the same necessity to mobilize our shipping industry as there was to mobilize our automobile industry.

Protection of our war commerce is as laggard as the conservation of bottoms. The U-boats are becoming more and more daring. Along the whole length of our Atlantic seaboard they are waiting to pick off our merchantmen as they leave our ports with their precious cargoes. They have been bold enough to knife our coastwise traffic. The American people ought to share the indignation of the crews of the tankers against the lack of protection on the journey from the Gulf. There is no justification for it. We have a Civilian Air Patrol all equipped to guard our boats well off-shore, which is ready and willing to do convoy duty. Yet the organization is still in low gear, and the good use of some of its units, as in New Jersey, has been offset by the lack of effective mobilization in it of our private flyers.

As it is, our private flyers for the most part are not being called upon to do a job which they are anxious and qualified to do. Originally the civilian pilots were limited to flights within a 50-mile radius of the home airport. Gradually the restrictions have been intensified till the radius is now only 3 miles. In other words, the civilian pilot and his machine are practically grounded. Yet there are over a hundred thousand overage but excellent private pilots in this country who could be intrusted with the protection of these shores from Maine to the Gulf of Mexico. Little organization is needed. All that need be done is to issue a call to those men to join the C. A. P., and then to delegate to that organization the responsibility of coastal defense, in cooperation with the armed services.

The conservation of our nonwar shipping and the complete mobilization of the Civilian Air Patrol are two measures that should be undertaken without delay. Such measures would recognize the crisis in the war which is almost at hand and to which the warnings of the war correspondents again point. Let us never forget the dark days in the spring of 1918 when the German war machine, which was held to have been stalled, delivered a series of attacks which almost brought the Allies to their knees. Our entire resources must be readied and flung into the battle line if we are to win what Hitler calls the final decision.

Kharkov

Strong resistance by the Nazis at Kharkov does not seem to have slowed down the Russian drive. According to the Russians, their troops advanced between 12 and 37 miles during the first six days of the fighting, and are now within artillery range of the city. What is more, the drive on Kharkov itself has been accompanied, during recent days, by a simultaneous drive to the Dnieper, which has already brought a section of Marshal Timoshenko's army to Krasnograd.

This latter development has ominous possibilities for the Nazis fully equal to those that would result from the loss of Kharkov. For while the loss of that Ukrainian industrial center would inhibit the German use of the Ukraine as a stepping stone to the Caucasus, the severance of Nazi rail communications in the Dnieper Valley would imperil the entire right flank of the German army, all the way from the Crimea to Taganrog and would make a Pyrrhic victory of the recent advance in the Kerch Peninsula.

It is by no means certain as yet that Timoshenko's offensive will develop sufficient power to achieve this aim. For the time being all that can be said is that in taking the offensive when he did, Timoshenko forced the Nazis to go on the defensive, and employ large numbers of men and large quantities of material in defensive operations when their plans called for a large-scale offensive. In other words, Timoshenko is again illustrating the validity of the thesis that the best defense is attack.

Once again this Russian general is proving himself to be a tactician of a very high order. And while it is possible that, in due course, the Germans will begin pushing back the Red Army, the energy they have had to expend already and that they may yet have to expend to regain the initiative may put a permanent crimp in their capacity to take the war to their enemies.

Educational Vistas

In technical branches of learning there are all sorts of valuable home study courses being fostered as part of the war effort. These are furnished through the admirable series of monographs prepared and distributed by Mr. Leon Henderson's staff at the Office of Price Administration. The latest deals with the science of selecting, wearing and taking care of girdles. In less than 700 words the whole subject is explored with magnificent lucidity, beginning with the explanation that one good way of getting a girdle that fits is to try it on.

This, to be sure, sounds like a fairly complicated business requiring a certain athletic prowess. For our part we feel no particular necessity of actually trying. All we were looking for was a sound theoretical grasp of the matter, and this OPA has certainly provided. We can scarcely wait for the next monograph, which deals with the science of buying, wearing and mending stockings. Right here in Washington there are said to be some 30,000 persons paid by the Government to enlighten us on such matters as these. The knowledge goes far to compensate us in advance for some of the sacrifices we must be prepared to make—such, for example, as the conservation of paper.

THE WHARF

The dock-posts grip down through the water into the sand,
And we watch on the edge the gulls plummeting into the water,
Stretching out long necks and raking the surface.
Far out, the ferries glimmer, struggling with the vaulting waves.
The sea runs; it is cold with its ships and birds,
And it draws us close to each other at the black wharf's edge,
Side pressing to side in the wind that will not stop.
And miles into the fading distance, the lighthouse
Makes a cross of light, preparing for blackness.

Earned Reputations

"When one witnesses some of the goings on of the Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled, the marvel is not that many things are done badly but that anything is done at all. Sometimes, reading the utterances of various members of the Legislature, considering the boners, chicanery, and pigheadedness of the gentlemen in charge of our destinies, and then looking upon the might and progress of America, one is forced to the inescapable conclusion that this must, indeed be God's country."

How well deserved is this biting irony with which Ilka Chase closes her very readable autobiography, "Past Imperfect," which has promptly taken its place among the most widely read of recent books.

A series of performances to the point has marked the present Congress, particularly in the House of Representatives. The latest is that with respect to Congressmen grabbing unlimited gas "rationing" cards. The mere reporting of this contemptibly selfish procedure excited angry and characteristic deliverances in the House from notorious reactionaries and others, and when one Representative undertook to back up the public criticism of Congressmen in this matter he was very promptly squelched.

As in other instances, the cry was raised that there is afoot a diabolical attempt "to bring Congress into contempt," "to discredit and destroy representative government." This partially recognizes the truth, for unquestionably there is being generated an attitude that is derogatory to Congressmen and Congress. But to blame this on the reporting and criticism of conduct by Congressmen that naturally produces and deserves ridicule, reprobation, or contempt instead of upon those responsible for such conduct is to be guilty of more conduct of the same sort. Congressmen should not as such indulge in contemptible actions if they would avoid bringing contempt upon themselves and Congress. They should recall and be governed by the fact that the most potent force in destroying representative government has been the degeneracy of the representatives themselves. JOHN D. BRADLEY.

I should like to call attention to a condition in wartime Washington which is causing much bitterness among those who have voluntarily given up our comforts, beautiful living quarters, etc., back home, only to be rudely shown the door when we dare apply for living quarters at Washington's hotels and apartment houses. We do not expect them to accommodate us where there "is no room in the inn," but we would appreciate a polite and courteous reply or refusal from the many clerks and managers of these institutions, instead of an attitude which could only be interpreted as the insolence of a war prosperity.

I therefore would like to recommend that the Congressional Medal of Honor (were it possible) be given to one outstanding hotel in this beautiful city in the vicinity and under the benign influence of General Thomas (Circle), where they are just as hurried and busy and yet take time enough to be as courteous and polite, from the proprietor and manager to the humblest of bell boys, as we have always found on our visits to prewar Washington.

The war is not going to last forever and the whole world, which now flows in and out of this city, in its future peacetime visits here will remember.

Taxing Single Girls

About taxes, in revising the income tax structure, let us hope that some of the injustices will be remedied.

Special reference is made to the high exemption at present afforded to married couples as compared to single people. The way things are now, the burden of taxation in the lower brackets falls on the single, unmarried working women, which is the greatest injustice imaginable.

There are more women than men in the world, so there are probably more single women earning their living than single men. However, the tax-minded officials seem to think they are justified in making tax burdens fall heaviest on single people, always assuming that they are taxing single young men, which is justifiable, when in reality what they are doing is placing heavy tax burdens mostly on single women, who, of all classes, are least able to bear them.

The honest, hard-working girl, fighting the world on her own efforts, single-handed and alone, or the widow who is left alone in later life and forced out into the world to earn her living at an age when she is least able to earn it, suddenly is aware of the fact that the burden of taxes has been unloaded on her shoulders, while her married sisters, who enjoy the protection and advantages of married life, to say nothing of the financial security, are practically tax-exempt.

A married couple living together can live more economically than two single people each living alone. The married couple occupy the same apartment, living-room, bedroom, kitchen, and use the same radio, the same cookstove, dining-room and the same car, while a single person has all these things to supply out of a single salary. Even a joint income tax consisting of twice the amount of a single person's tax is not fair. It still leaves the single person on the wrong side of the tax program. It is the old story of might over right, as those who make the tax laws are, of course, married themselves, so naturally they so arrange it that the married are the ones who are on the credit side.

A little more justice and fair-mindedness for the single wage-earning women taxpayers would be welcome by us all.

Unit Value

Available evidence and reports indicate that any "A" card holder could have obtained a card of higher rating had he been so inclined. Should the unit now be decreased below the 3-gallon figure, hardship would be worked on many of the voluntary "A" card holders—the very people who least deserve to be penalized.

There should be no decrease in the unit value until "B" and "X" card applications have been reviewed. If necessary, new "X" cards could be issued under strict surveillance and current "X" cards voided. Perhaps the same could be done in connection with other high types. While this would be a costly procedure, it would not be nearly so costly as damaging the morale of conscientious citizens.

Taxing White-Collar Girls

"The second proposed a graduated withholding tax to be turned into war bonds for all persons earning more than $20 a week, if single, and $30, if married. In addition, Gore asked an 'overall' tax on incomes starting at 6 per cent on $1040 to $1560 salaries and ranging upward "until no person would have remaining to him, after payment of taxes and investment in Government bonds, a sum in excess of $25,000."

This is quoted from The Post, May 12, in an account of the second bill proposed by Representative Albert Gore (Democrat) of Tennessee, designed to give effect to the President's seven-point program for curtailing inflation.

Now I am first of all not a morale saboteur, nor am I paid a salary commensurate with "the representatives of the people." But it seems that the time has arrived for the ordinary white-collar girl in Washington to be heard.

We have no complaint concerning taxes which would limit individual incomes to $25,000 a year. There is a slight discrepancy, however, in comparing incomes of $1560 and those high enough to leave $25,000 margin after deduction for bonds and taxes. We of the lower-income group expect to pay our share in defense expenditures, and many of us are willing to cooperate, in fact take pride in feeling that, small though we are, it is a privilege to do our part. But we become roused when the "powers that be" produce tax schemes with no sound economic basis.

To illustrate, the average girl earning $125 per month ($1440 per annum) has the following expenses: $35 rent, $25 meals (a conservative estimate and at that half the girls do not get the proper nourishment), $5 transportation passes, $15 clothing and incidental necessities (try buying clothes at $180 a year), $2 church, $5 amusements, $1 stamps, $5 medical fee in case of illness, and then deduct that 6 per cent tax to come off incomes in this group which would be $7.20 more, which leaves a grand total of $19.80 for war bonds, savings accounts, Government retirement deductions, emergencies, and accidents. I insist that all of these estimates are conservative.

Would it be presumptuous to ask that a fair survey of living costs be made prior to a disposal of our magnificent income? We are fighting for a democratic way of living, and the battle cry of the fathers of our country was "No taxation without representation."

Rank Injustice

The judgment suspending the license of Cab Driver Harold G. Strickland for 10 days for an apparently unintentional overcharge of 10 cents is, prima facie, a rank injustice.

If your report is accurate the cab driver was justified in making an extra charge for waiting until the great man bade farewell to his companion. He claimed the charge should have been 50 cents. The Board of Revocation and the Commissioners ruled the charge should have been 70 cents. The cab driver on a close calculation was off 10 cents. There was a clear conflict of testimony as to how long it took for the solon to break away, and the powers that be resolved the doubt against the bread and butter of the cab driver's children. The board and the Commissioners have not covered themselves with glory.

The Post Impressionist

Anent Another Bingen Bishop

As a lad I was an incorrigible collector of strange pets. Conventional dog, cat, rabbit, turtle, or guinea pig—these were eschewed as unrewarded for the care they required.

Some aberration had apparently warped my inner need for the normal dumb companionship required by small boys. I demanded the different; and, fortunately, my mother suffered, with little protest, the succession of salamanders, snakes, skunks, horned toads, alligators, beetles, and what-not, which I brought in to her in a variety of containers for approval.

However, all this is but prologue to my one most grievous gesture in the direction of keeping pets. This occurred subsequent to the receipt from the playmate son of a well-intentioned physician, of a pair each of white mice and rats.

Where to keep them was the only problem. My mother never demurred at just having them; she was insistent this time, however, that I should not have them above stairs. So I chose the cellar windows. The panes provided sunlight, and with inner screens formed suitable cages for my pale rodents. Round oatmeal boxes (remember when these were in demand for building home-made crystal radio sets?) served for nesting houses.

Now rabbits are not the only multiplying mammal: so are rats and mice. In the space of no time at all, my four pets had become parents. From first to last, I was never able to keep accurate census on their progeny, and this was perhaps the cause for the whole trouble. Neither age considerations, apparently, nor degree of consanguinity made the slightest difference to my fast growing families; trigamy seemed to be as common as bigamy.

My window sill cages teemed with mice and rats. Each day, upon return from school, I set about—after a feeble attempt to count noses—feeding my rodent tribes. They devoured anything I gave them—even the boxes in which I placed their food. At any rate, they chewed them to pieces, made crude nests around the outside of the oatmeal box, and deposited newborn families in them every other week or so.

Liebensraum was a word not yet in my vocabulary. But my rats and mice knew about it.

One day I noted a peculiar thing about my cages—they were comparatively empty; a few babies were tumbling about helplessly.

"All asleep," I guessed. "All tired out from running around, and in their houses, asleep."

Next day, both cages were entirely empty. A sudden fear struck me: someone had taken away my pets! I opened the screens and frantically shook the oatmeal boxes upside down. Not a rat, not a mouse.

But in the bottoms of both boxes, neatly gnawed, were holes; and in corresponding positions in the sills were holes also, leading straight down and into the walls of our home.

From this point on, I can only chronicle a sort of two months' nightmare as it happened.

It had been our family custom, supper over and things cleared away, for my mother to play the piano in the parlor while dad and I sang the old standbys. One particular evening my mother was having trouble with the sustaining pedal. It seemed to stick after being pressed, would return very slowly, then suddenly pop back with a loud clunk against the baseboard. It was disconcerting, this off-beat in bass, and my mother asked dad to see if perhaps it needed oiling.

I went off for the 3-in-1 can, and came back into the parlor in time to witness a tableau. Dad was on his knees under the keyboard. He had taken off the baseboard, and something had occurred to make him bump the back of his head on the underside of the keyboard. He was holding his head with his left hand; in his right he dangled a white mouse, quite dead. Mother was standing on the leather couch. The bottom of the piano was littered with debris fashioned into nests, and at least three of these were alive with baby mice.

I fled in tears as father began destruction of my former pets.

But now began the terrible days. Mother would open her cupboards, and sitting there on the shelf, prinking its whiskers and staring at her with coral eyes, would be a mouse. She would reach for food among boxes in her pantry, and mice would scamper across her hand; pull the carpet sweeper from its corner and at the first push drop its handle as a chorus of tiny screeches told her another nest of mice had been brushed out.

My habit of eating a snack in bed at night as I read a last chapter brought them bodily up on the covers to snatch crumbs. They played touch-last on my parents' bed at night.

They ate our hotwater bottle and my kites; they ate holes in rugs, wainscoting, and stair treads; they made a nest out of a hair-filled pincushion; they gnawed the plush handgrips off a set of matched golf clubs.

A couple took up abode in mother's sewing stand, and caromed out together when she opened the lid, like a pair of Nijinskis in "that incredible leap."

Finally, father could stand it no longer. He called exterminators to do a job that brooms, shoes, and a score of mouse traps could not accomplish. We moved to a hotel for the duration.

Father never scolded me; and I've often wondered what it was he once must have done when he was a little boy that made my escapade "even-Stephen" with his.

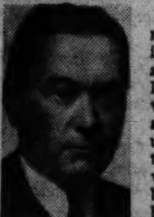
Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Through Rose-Colored Glasses



LIPPMANN

A STATEMENT about shipping issued at the White House for publication in the Sunday newspapers says in conclusion that "The progress made thus far is easing our shipping problem, but there will be a shortage of ships until sinkings throughout the world are brought under better control and the shipbuilding program gets into full production.

"The American people can be assured that the shipyards will do the job assigned to them."

Neither in what it says nor what it leaves unsaid is this, I submit, a realistic report on the shipping problem. The grim truth is that ships are being sunk faster than they are being built; that almost certainly the German submarines are coming into action faster than we are sinking them; that while the need for shipping is increasing in order to supply our outposts, and our main war fronts in the Pacific, in the Middle East, in Russia, and in Great Britain, the supply of available ships is diminishing. If anyone, then, allows himself to become "assured" or to believe that the shipping problem is being "eased," that it is not critically serious and of decisive importance on the outcome and length of the war, he is not facing the facts.

THE BRIGHTEST ASPECT of the picture is the one which the White House statement dwells upon, namely the fact that the shipyards are now geared up to fabricate an immense number of ships. The capacity of the yards is now beyond anything ever attempted in the history of ship building, and if this fabricating capacity could be put to full use, the output of ships in the next 18 months would be enormous.

How big it will actually be does not depend primarily on the shipyards but on the flow of materials and parts to these shipyards. That is why there are many who, recognizing what Admiral Land and Admiral Vickery have accomplished in the shipyards, nevertheless argue that the basic problem of ship production has not been mastered. The fabricating yards are the end of the process of production, but only the end of it, and that is why we shall not be able to speak of the success of the shipbuilding program until the War Production Board has organized much more effectively the flow of materials.

THIS HAS not yet been done. To get it done will require ardent initiative within the Government and the pressure of constructive criticism outside. Mr. Nelson and his associates will need a great deal of strong public support if they are to overcome the inertia of Government departments and the routine of private business, and thus to be able to allocate and ration and regulate among the vast number of primary and intermediate producers. Rationing gasoline is child's play compared with this problem, and much more depends upon it.

Nevertheless, the fact remains that the shipping problem cannot be solved merely by building ships, and it is a very dangerous error to think that we can build more ships than the Axis can sink. As things are going now the equivalent or more than the whole year's output of the American shipyards will be at the bottom of the sea even if the program is fully realized. With the ships that are being sunk faster than they can be built, there go down the precious cargoes, and the even more precious lives of the crews. We have, therefore, no ground whatever for any such complacent feeling as the White House statement could lead the people to have, and it is our imperative duty to cast aside all complacency over the shipping problem. We are not solving it and we are not even "easing" it. The problem is getting the better of us, and no matter how favorable the news from Europe seems for the moment to be, if we do not master the shipping problem we cannot play our part in the war, we cannot hasten or even participate effectively in the decision.

THE REALLY critical point now is in the use and in the protection of ships. These two are much more closely related than might at first appear. It is plain that by taking extraordinary measures, it would be possible to dig up for direct military use more ships than now seem to be available. This was done in 1918 and it can be done again.

Now in so far as these mobilized ships are used to carry the war to the enemy—by reinforcing the British air offensive and the Russian front, by making possible commando raids and the occupation of strategic points—they make all shipping safer. A ship which carries to England a load of bombs that are then dropped on a submarine base has made shipping in the Caribbean that much safer. The more we utilize our existing supply of ships for the offensive against the enemy, the better is our defense against the enemy's submarines. Therefore, we should make drastic sacrifices and take large risks in regard to imports and exports in order to assemble ships for the military offensive.

BUT AT THE SAME time we cannot afford not to do more than we are doing to protect the ships that we send out, and to rescue the crews. It is plain, of course, that the resources of the Navy are strained severely by the task of escorting convoys to Australia, to Britain, Iceland and Russia. These are primary tasks and no doubt they call for most of the combat ships which can be spared from the battle line for such purposes.

But the plight of the merchant fleet is so serious that we cannot rest content until we set out to deal with it in a spirit like that of Dunkirk, where anything that floated was put to work. We must assume that if the task of protecting these unprotected ships and, at the very least of doing more to rescue the crews, were given to younger officers, who have been in action in this war, a good deal could be improvised with the help of the fishermen and the yachtsmen and the merchant seamen and the airmen themselves. It was a group of younger officers who solved the submarine problem in 1918 and, while we wait for the delivery of enough orthodox combat ships to master the submarines, it would be reassuring if something of the same sort were at least being attempted.

CAA to Offer Flight Training To 210 High School Boys

By the Associated Press

The Civil Aeronautics Administration, as an experiment, will open its pilot training program in the near future to 210 high school boys.

Charles I. Stanton, acting administrator, announced yesterday the flying instruction would be given at 21 high schools scattered over the country. Its description as an "experimental program" was taken to mean it would be extended to other schools if it proved successful.

Heretofore, the CAA pilot training program has been directed to college-age youths, with 90 per cent of the 70,000 pilots produced since 1939 receiving their training through colleges and universities. The other 10 per cent, all aged 18 to 26, won training scholarships in competitive noncollege ground school courses.

In opening the courses to boys of high school age, the CAA reduced the minimum age requirement to 17.

Columbus, Ga.; Idaho Falls, Idaho; Danville, Ill.; Anderson, Ind.; Battle Creek, Mich.; Mexico, Mo.; Roswell and Santa Fe, N. Mex.; Jamestown, N. Y.; Duncan, Okla.; Baker, Oreg.; York, Pa.; Watertown, S. Dak., and Danville, Va.; Ensley High School, Birmingham, Ala.; Modoc Adult High School, Alturas, Calif.; East High School, Waterloo, Iowa; Flathead County High School, Kalispell, Mont.; Pershing County High School, Lovelock, Nev.; Box Elder High School, Brigham City, Utah, and St. John's Military Academy, Delafield, Wis.

Stanton said applications already were being received from students in the high schools selected for the experiment. Applicants must be able to pass the physical requirements set up for participants in regular CAA courses. If over 18, the applicant must enlist in the reserve of the armed air forces, and if under 18 must sign an agreement that upon reaching 18 he will apply for enlistment in the reserve.

Democracy And War

By Janet R. Keith

Ottawa.

PEOPLE on this continent are beginning to realize that war has done something to democracy. We still have the undisputed right of democratic nations to send representatives of the people to Congress and to Parliament. But there is an uneasy feeling that these representatives are gradually becoming a group of puppets, a high school debating society which carries on its somewhat puerile discussions while decisions are being made upstairs in the principal's office.

The big sweeping changes made in Canada during the past year have been as much of a surprise to members of Parliament as to the rest of the nation. Drastic new price control policies and man power policies have been put into effect without so much as a word of mention in Parliament. The cabinet quietly passes an order-in-council; the prime minister makes a radio announcement over a national hookup, and members of Parliament, along with the rest of the nation, wake up to the fact that another revolutionary program has gone into effect.

THE MOST powerful men in the United States and Canada today are not cabinet ministers, not Congressmen or parliamentarians. They aren't even responsible to the people's elected representatives. The United States has its Nelson, Henderson, McNutt, Wallace and Milo Perkins; Canada has its Donald Gordon, Elliott Little, Berkinshaw. These are the men who dictate national policies; no one can even guess where their authority ends. Beside the all-embracing powers of these administrative dictators the debating privileges of a parliamentarian look pitifully small.

If our elected representatives no longer rule the nation, can we still call ourselves a democracy? Or are we already well advanced on the road to full-fledged bureaucracy? One of Canada's leading commentators recently had this to say of Donald Gordon, the price-control boss: "One detects a certain fear of Mr. Gordon, a fear of what he may grow into. Gordon is one of the most formidable figures thrown up by the war in Canada. With talents far beyond those which are necessary in a first-class official, he has many of the qualities—color, power of speech, natural force—which go to make up a potent popular leader. What, it is asked, what if this man, passionate about the war, should some day appeal to the country over the heads of the government?

"The question may come from troubled conscience, or from dismay over the decline and all but abdication of Parliament, or from realization of the seeming confusion of ministers over their responsibilities. Nevertheless, the fact remains that some of the most vital war leadership in Ottawa today is coming from a man who is neither a member of Parliament or a member of the cabinet, and while it would be nightmarish to suggest that Mr. Gordon sees himself as a potential fuehrer (he is in reality a rugged democrat) the implications of the situation can hardly be overlooked. What it means is that not merely is our economy being overturned, but that the overturning is being done by an official while our responsible ministers and Parliament stand silently on the sidelines."

HAVE WE anything to fear from these strong new leaders who have been tossed up to the top positions in the nation by the turbulent storm of war? Probably not. They aren't powerthirsty, shouting demagogues. They are quite efficient executives, doing tough jobs which have got to be done if the democratic nations are to survive.

And if they have more power than we usually grant to administrative officials, there are good reasons for it. The most obvious reason is that great emergencies demand the kind of quick, decisive action which comes from individuals, not from groups. And if these individuals are chosen from outside the people's elected assemblies, there is a reason for that, too. Of late years the congresses and parliaments on this continent simply haven't been producing the kind of capable courageous man who could tackle a big war job, make quick decisions, admit defeats, give clear-cut orders.

The awful truth is that we haven't been getting our best brains elected to our parliaments, because we haven't bothered to make political careers look attractive to our bright young men. We've offered the promise of riches to the young businessman, of fame to the young scientist, of adulation to the young actor. But for the politician we've had only cold indifference tinged with suspicion.

Now we are paying the price of our indifference. The London Economist writes that the "low intellectual level of the British Commons since 1931 has been responsible for much of England's tragedy." Bruce Hutchinson, outstanding authority on Canadian affairs, says: "Will any Canadian deny what everyone in Ottawa admits—that the intellectual level of our Parliament is also deplorably low?"

There seems to be little doubt that the United States Congress also has fallen into low public esteem. Congressmen themselves admit that they have bungled important parts of the war program. "We are all guilty," said Congressman "Mike" Monroney recently. "We have left undone those things which we ought to have done, and we have done those things which we ought not to have done."

Because our elected representatives have failed us in our time of need we have been forced to bring in outsiders to take over the command. Because our democracy has been weak, we have been forced in a great emergency to swing over to bureaucracy. It is lucky for us that we have strong, capable men to turn to, men who are willing to pinch-hit when the bases are full.

We don't need to worry very much about the "bureaucrats" who have taken over the controls of our wartime Government. What should concern us a great deal more is the fact that we've let our democracy fall into a state of disrepair. War hasn't weakened democracy; it has just brought to light the weaknesses already existing.

Wartime Washington

PUSEY

WE AMERICANS are accustomed to thinking of starvation as a horrible experience that is inflicted upon the peoples of Europe and Asia by the ravages of war. That is, of course, the least disagreeable way to think about acute hunger. We lament the cruel fate of peoples in far-off lands and take it for granted that we would do something about it if we could. Yet most of us ignore the fact that in this thriving and prosperous city hunger is a constant nightmare to a considerable number of families.

Among the wards of the District the Washington Chapter of the American Association of Social Workers recently found a mother and three children trying to subsist on $3 a month after their rent and fuel bills had been paid. Indeed, gnawing hunger is a common experience of children who are so unfortunate as to be dependent on public charity in the Nation's Capital. For even such sums as Congress appropriates for relief of the destitute who are unable to provide for themselves cannot be distributed on the basis of actual human needs.

These hardships do not often fall upon men or women who are able to work. Any able-bodied person can get a job in these days when man power is at a premium. But consider the plight of a breadwinner who has lost his ability to work. Records in the Public Assistance Division tell the story of a Washingtonian who recently suffered a heart attack. Presumably he will never again be able to work. When his resources were exhausted, he went to the PAD for help. His family consists of his wife and six children. The cheapest flat they can squeeze into costs $30 a month. Food for eight persons costs at least $50 a month. Clothing, fuel, medical care and incidentals brought the estimated minimum budget for this family to $115. But under the law it is impossible to grant the family more than $60 a month.

So virtual starvation persists in Washington by legislative decree.

The study made by the Washington Chapter, American Association of Social Workers, shows that an average of 57 per cent of the total relief grant in the cases examined goes for rent. Under present conditions, of course, the rent must be paid to save the family from being put out onto the street with no hope of finding new quarters. But this means, in most instances, that only a meager sum is left for food. With food prices soaring at high levels, hunger stalks more readily into the homes of destitute families.

One family reports that its children have had no fresh milk for years. Another finds that if the children are provided with shoes they must go hungry until the cost of the shoes is made up from the food budget. And most families in this predicament are forced to live in wretched quarters where rats invade their bedrooms and disease accentuates their distress.

In any circumstances the facts outlined in this report by expert social workers would be a shocking commentary on the Atlantic Charter. For one of the principles enunciated by that great document signed by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill during their famous meeting at sea is "freedom from want." Since the United Nations joined in their pledge to fight the Axis to extinction, "freedom from want" has been one of the basic ideals for which Americans are shedding their blood abroad. Yet in the prosperous capital of the United Nations children have to make a choice between bread and shoes.

SUCH CONDITIONS can be endured when they are necessary. But in this instance hunger in Washington homes is chiefly a result of a stupid law. Conrad Van Hyning, the director of public welfare, went before the House Subcommittee on District Appropriations some weeks ago and asked that the "ceilings" fixing the amount of relief that can be granted to any one family be eliminated. His plea was backed by the Commissioners and the Board of Public Welfare. And it had a special cogency because rising prices make it utterly impossible to determine what the cost of living will be here next year.

The local officials did not dare to ask that "freedom from want" be put into actual practice in the Capital. They requested only that special hardships be alleviated. But the House turned them down flat. It reinserted the $60 relief-fund "ceiling" along with other "ceilings" for families of less than six persons. In other words, it voted to impose stark hunger on a large number of Washington children; for children invariably predominate in the large families against which this discrimination is aimed.

In some respects, the complacency with which Washington received this blow is even more disturbing than the callousness of the House in delivering it. To be sure, the Board of Public Welfare was aroused by the action of the House. It arranged a special meeting with the District Commissioners, which resulted in an agreement to support the elimination of relief "ceilings" in the hearing before the Senate Appropriations Subcommittee. And Mr. Van Hyning made a vigorous protest through the press against the action of the House.

BUT NONE of the top flight officials has exhibited a fighting attitude. Isn't "freedom from hunger" worth fighting for at home? Where is the leadership that the people of Washington have a right to expect in a matter of such importance to the community? Quiet resolutions in board meetings will not do the trick. It is time for Washington to shake off its somnolence and make an issue of stupid legislation which deprives local authorities of discretion in dealing with so elementary a problem as relief of destitution.

If hungry children sleeping in rat-infested beds fail to arouse this voteless city to a vehement demand for a new deal, there is not much hope that Washington will ever be able to emerge from its social and political doldrums. The simple fact is that we have got to fight for decency and democracy at home as well as abroad. It makes little difference that militant public opinion is used in one instance and tanks and airplanes in the other. If we are unwilling to accept hunger and degradation as a common way of life in Washington, the city must certainly rise up with a greater show of civic spirit than anything it has manifested to date.

House Group Approves Bill To Punish Unions in Rackets

By the Associated Press

A House Judiciary Subcommittee approved yesterday legislation which would permit prosecution of labor unions under the 1934 Antiracketeering Act if they interfered with interstate shipments.

At the same time, the subcommittee recommended that the full committee table a measure to make it illegal to solicit or demand the payment of dues as a consideration for employment on a Government-financed project.

Introduced by Representative Boren (Democrat) of Oklahoma, the latter bill was aimed at the exaction of union initiation fees and dues from workers on some Government construction projects. The committee rejected it without comment.

Representative Hobbs (Democrat) of Alabama who introduced the other measure, said he would seek early consideration by the full committee.

Fought by Labor

His bill—which labor union spokesmen vigorously opposed—would permit the prosecution under the 1934 act of any individual or group interfering in any way with interstate shipments.

It was designed primarily, Hobbs said, to deal with this situation:

Farmers and others have complained that when hauling produce or other merchandise to some large cities they were halted by union men who demanded—in terms implying the threat of violence—that union men be hired to unload their trucks.

The Justice Department brought charges under the Antiracketeering Act against a New York local of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers of America and 26 individual members. In a 6 to 1 decision last March, the Supreme Court ruled, however, that unions could not be prosecuted under the act for the activities alleged in the charges.

Extortion Definition Broadened

Under Hobbs' bill, the definition of robbery and extortion would be broadened to include the obtaining of property by "actual or threatened force, or violence, or fear of injury." Persons found guilty of such actions would face a maximum penalty of 20 years' imprisonment and a fine of $10,000.

Another section would prohibit, under the same penalties, interference with or obstruction of interstate commerce by "physical force or intimidation." This section, Hobbs said, was added at the request of Joseph B. Eastman, defense transportation coordinator.

Untold Tale Of War

Raleigh, N. C., May 18.—Josephus Daniels, who has lived through four wars, does not know when this one will end but when it does he believes the end will be sudden. Daniels, celebrating his eightieth birthday today, was born early in the war of the sixties, was a young North Carolina editor during the Spanish-American conflict, served as Secretary of the Navy throughout the first World War, and hopes to write an editorial in the Raleigh News and Observer when the current war is brought to a victorious conclusion.

The veteran diplomat told a story that had never been published of how contradictory information came from two capitals of Allied countries late in 1918. London saw a big spring offensive in the making and Paris was confident the war would never last until 1919.

"You ask me when this Armageddon will come to an end," said Daniels.

"I call it the Armageddon, because when the firing ceases, I hope the prophecy of a thousand years of peace will follow.

"I am no Elijah, not even an Elisha who received the mantle of the greater prophet . . .

"So, I refrain from indicating even a probable date when this hell of fury will write finis on the most terrible days in the history of the world. But I will tell you a true story growing out of my experience in the World War from which you will glean that when it does come, the end will be sudden and will be due, perhaps, as much to the unwillingness of U-boat sailors to go to certain death and to the hunger of the civilian population, as to the conclusion of arms, as in the World War, although, of course, the Allies won that victory in the hard fighting on the fields of France . . .

Geddes Came to Washington

"In early October, 1918, 40-odd days before the Armistice was signed, I received a cable from the American Embassy in London that Sir Eric Campbell Geddes, first lord of the British Admiralty, was in possession of such vital information that he felt he should come to Washington at once to confer with the Secretary of the Navy and his advisers . . .

"In a few days Sir Eric, with half a dozen high ranking naval officials, headed by his chief of staff, Admiral Wemyss, reached Washington. On the night of their arrival, at my residence on Wyoming Avenue, the American Secretary of the Navy, the Assistant Secretary, Franklin D. Roosevelt; Admiral Benson, Chief of Naval Operations, and half a dozen other admirals having to do with the conduct of the war conferred until the early hours of the next morning over the serious situation unfolded by Sir Eric Geddes.

"'We have come into evidence that is incontrovertible that the Germans are making ready with the opening of spring for the most terrific use of U-boats that has yet been experienced,' said Sir Eric.

"'They have built very many, and we are sure that the worst reign of terror of the war will begin with the end of this winter. The situation is so serious that I and members of my staff felt it a duty to come to Washington to acquaint you with it in the certainty that with this information you would join with us in the rapid construction of destroyers and other craft to met the assault which we know is coming.'

". . . As the outcome of the all-night conferences, messages were sent to every Navy yard and shipbuilding concern in America to send its best representatives to Washington at once . . . They all came; they were informed under strictest military secrecy of the state of affairs portrayed by the British admiralty, and immediately construction was speed up with increased forces on a 24-hour basis so the American Navy could send a large number of destroyers to Europe before the threatened spring drive. Sir Eric and his staff sailed for London, their hearts gladdened by the assurance of a large fleet of fighting craft from the United States . . ."

Daniels went on:

"The day after that all-night conference with the British, I had a call from a colonel of the United States Army who told me he had just arrived from France. 'Just before leaving Paris,' he said, 'I was commissioned by Ambassador William G. Sharp to deliver to you, in person, a message of the most confidential character. It was to tell you and ask you to communicate to President Wilson that the Ambassador was certain that the war would end within 60 days.'

A Poser for Daniels

". . . And so," said Daniels, ". . . Which one should I believe?

"I reported both of them to President Wilson . . . The President asked 'What do you think?' and my answer was that our course was clear. We must act and act immediately with every resource in our power on the information Sir Eric Geddes had brought . . . I added that if he were right we would be most derelict not to do everything humanly possible to meet the threatened danger. I told the President I had every confidence in Ambassador Sharp and had a hunch he was right, but we did not dare to let it lessen the fullest preparedness. The President agreed and directed 'full speed ahead.'"

Daniels went on:

"Within less than 50 days the Armistice was signed. Were both Geddes and Sharp right?

"Certainly," continued Daniels. "The Armistice was signed four months before the slaughter the British admiralty feared . . ."

PEGLER

THE PRESIDENTIAL COMMUTATION of Earl Browder, chief of the Communist Party and one of the foremost pro-Axis collaborationists during the life of Berlin-Moscow compact, establishes the principle that under American justice today, the politics of a criminal may be weighed in his favor. This is a political commutation, as the White House statement admitted in the remark that Browder's liberation would have "a tendency to promote national unity." That was equivalent to saying that Browder was given his freedom so as to quiet the political clamor of his followers who, incidentally, are all sworn enemies of the form of government provided by the United States Constitution.

Browder's followers represented that because he was a Communist he received harsh treatment at the hands of the Federal court. He was sentenced to four years and a fine of $2000 for swearing falsely in an application for an American passport which he used to travel abroad in the interests of a foreign power which was, until June 22, last year, a silent partner of Adolf Hitler in the war.

The contention that Browder was punished, in part, for his politics, received acknowledgment from a number of genuine Americans as distinguished from Communist enemies of the American state, in its present form, who enjoy American citizenship. The severity of the sentence was cited in support of this contention and Wendell Willkie was one of those who leaned toward this belief.

BUT IT IS no more dangerous to all liberty under law to punish a man for his political principles under a pretext of law than it is to liberate a criminal out of consideration for his politics in response to the clamor of an organized following, however large or small. It must be noted that the White House statement concerning Browder's commutation did not admit that he was sentenced for his politics. On that score the statement merely said the commutation would "have a tendency to allay any feeling which may exist in some minds" that this was the case. But the observation that his release would have "a tendency to promote national unity" does admit that his political views and political power were permitted to intimidate American justice.

Under this principle any public enemy serving a thoroughly just and well-deserved term might be released in response to a demand by an organized following. As a case in point, George Browne, late president of one of the largest A. F. L. unions and late member of William Green's cabinet, might be turned out of prison in response to a demand by his former colleagues in that high body who have never had the courage or civic decency to repudiate this notorious underworld thief and betrayer of labor. Instead of repudiating him, Green and the rest of the A. F. L. cabinet merely failed to reelect him and delayed even that negative action until long after his criminal character and conduct were notorious and he was on the point of conviction in court. Green and his cabinet might demand Browne's release ostensibly in the name of five million members. Browne's propaganda claimed a following of only three million.

BY AN INTERESTING accident of telegraphic transmission the Communists have been trapped into a rather nasty attack on Mr. Willkie, whom they had quoted in support of their propaganda for Browder's release. Mr. Willkie informed me that he had made no public statement with reference to Browder and explained that the quotation which was used for this purpose was lifted from an article written a long time before.

Mr. Willkie then wrote: "The 'Free Browderites' have practically committed themselves to the immediate institution of a 'Free Fritz Kuhn' movement. A logical suggestion would be that these lovers of liberty, free trial and civil liberties, effect a merger and dub this movement 'Free Browder and Kuhn.' How about it?"

Mr. Willkie wrote that but the quotation marks fell off so the Communists attributed the thought to me and said: "Pegler leeringly suggests that the Free Browder movement should work for the release of Kuhn. But obviously it is not the backers of Browder's freedom who want to see Kuhn released, but Pegler himself."

If there is a leer in this suggestion, it must be charged to Mr. Willkie and he is at least one backer of Browder's freedom who also wants to see Kuhn released.

Paper Piling Up, WPB Puts Brake On Salvage Drive

Householders have responded so generously to the waste paper salvage drive that the country now has "an unusual surplus," the War Production Board reported yesterday.

Therefore WPB's bureau of industrial conservation said today it was considered "inadvisable" at this time to urge further collection at points distant from paper mills "when the railroads are straining to the utmost to carry the war load."

Despite the unusual success of the drive, Lessing J. Rosenwald, chief of the bureau, said the country as a whole could not afford to stop paper collection, because a new shortage may develop next winter in view of the large quantities required for the manufacture of paperboard containers.

Allen H. Connolly Appointed G. W. U. Business Manager

Appointment of Allen H. Connolly as business manager of George Washington University was announced yesterday by Dr. Cloyd H. Marvin, university president.

CONNOLLY

A graduate of Iowa State College, Connolly has been in university work since 1924. He has been business manager of the University of Arizona, of Teachers' College at Columbia University, New York, and of Kansas City University. He resigned from the latter institution to come to George Washington University to succeed Charles E. Merry, resigned April 15.

Before entering university administration, Connolly was employed as an engineer, for which he had been trained at Iowa State Cillege, During World War I he held a lieutenant's commission in the Air Corps and was stationed at Langley Field.

Distinguished Flying Crosses Given to 12 at Bolling Field

Twelve Distinguished Flying Crosses were awarded yesterday to Army Air Corps officers and men—one of them a Washingtonian—for "extraordinary achievement" while ferrying bombers before the United States entered the war.

Among the pilots and crew members honored was Master Sergt. Horace T. Peck, who lives with his wife at 3117 Nichols Avenue Southeast. His citation reads in part:

"For extraordinary achievement while participating in an aerial flight as radio operator of flight to Scotland and return in July, 1941 . . . Accomplishment of this pioneer flight was made under unfavorable weather and icing at high altitudes and flying nine hours strictly by instruments."

The others receiving the Flying Cross were Capt. James W. Chapman, jr., of Austin, Tex., who copiloted the plane that carried the lend-lease mission to Russia last September; Maj. David B. Lancaster; Capt. Richard T. Knight of Lubbock, Tex.; First Lieut. Theodore J. Boselli, of New York City; Second Lieut. Charles T. Allen, Birmingham, Ala., and Lieut. J. C. Moe.

Also Master Sergt. Adolph Cattarius, Maspeth, Long Island; Master Sergt. Joseph G. Moran, Ellsworth, Pa.; Master Sergt. James E. Sands, Langley Field, Va.; Technical Sergt. James M. Cooper, Philadelphia, and Sergt. Richard J. Barrett, jr., Bolling Field.

Sergeant Peck, the holder of the Marine Corps Good Conduct Medal, has served in the armed forces since 1930. His first four years were with the Marines, and he has served in the Army Air Corps since September, 1936.

Born in Monson, Mass., on November 18, 1907, Peck attended the Monson Academy and came to Washington in August, 1941, shortly after his transfer to the Ferrying Command at Bolling Field. Prior to that he had distinguished himself as a crew member of the first blind flight, in August, 1940, between Mitchel Field and Bolling Field. He also was in the crew of the plane that took Government officials to the Pan American Conference last year.

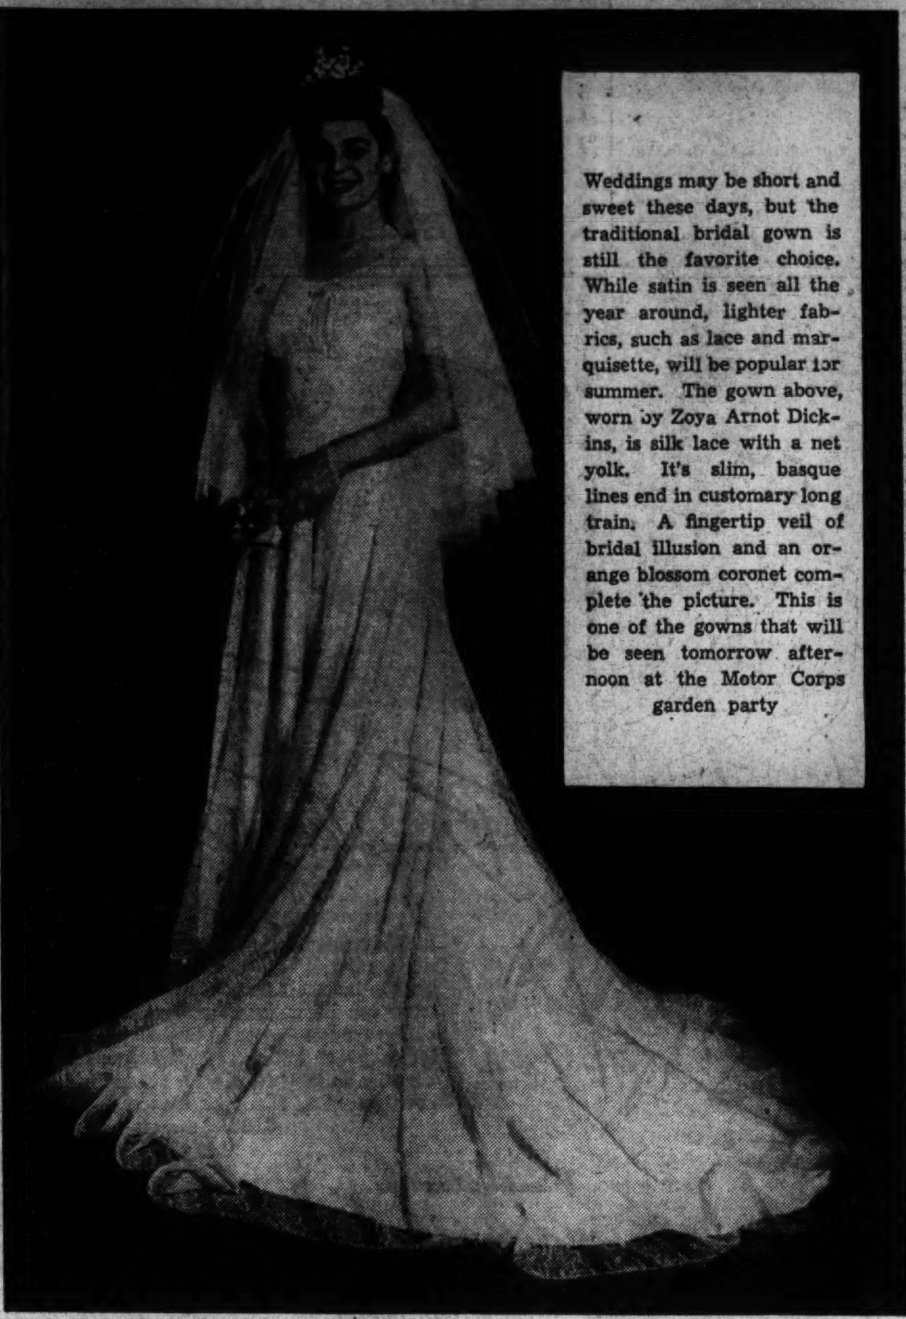
Traditional June Brides Wear Lace and Trains



Weddings may be short and sweet these days, but the traditional bridal gown is still the favorite choice. While satin is seen all the year around, lighter fabrics, such as lace and marquisette, will be popular for summer. The gown above, worn by Zoya Arnot Dickins, is silk lace with a net yolk. It's slim, basque lines end in customary long train. A fingertip veil of bridal illusion and an orange blossom coronet complete the picture. EVERYBODY is having to make the best of things these days, the mighty as well as the meek. The manufacturers who formerly did things with sweeping gestures, never counting the cost or minding the waste so long as they got action, are now going into huddles over substitutes and make-shifts and frugal operation. And home makers who once found it cheaper and more efficient to buy things ready-made are now learning again how to make out on their own ingenuity and thrift. Home decoration is an activity in which women can be particularly self-sufficient, since so much can be achieved by enthusiasm, energy and nimble fingers.

Mrs. B. V. writes: "I have used almost every suggestion you sent me in the past. Would you help me again? First I will describe my living room. The rug is jade green, tone on tone. Most of the upholstered furniture is in green and white checked cotton and we have a lounge chair in coral cotton. The tables, chairs and desk are maple. The walls are a gray, white, yellow stripe paper. The draperies are yellow ground sailcloth with a pattern in white, green, deep red, very splashy looking. In the diningroom alcove the chair and bench pads are covered with a pale yellow candlewick fabric (made from a bedspread). These rooms are very cheerful, comfortable and pretty. I have no unnecessary pieces, and each one can be used to make a nice group in either room. Now for the questions: (1) The upholstered furniture needs slip covers. What would you suggest? I should like to make them and launder them myself. (2) The wall along the porch side needs a sofa, table and lamp. What color, type and material for sofa? (3) I should like a large coffee table, mostly for magazines. Could I use some other wood besides maple?"

Practical Decoration

It was nice to have your letter and hear about what you had made of other suggestions I had given you in the past. About your question: (1) Slip covers of the flowered material you have used for praperies would be about as practical a thing as you could get. If this idea doesn't appeal, a sturdy washable fabric in yellow would be certainly very effective. (2) Your new sofa might be attractive in plain green not far from the predominating shade in your rug. Having it the color of the rug would incidentally keep the sofa from seeming too large as it could in a room where you already have another sofa. (3) For your new coffee table, you could use another wood—such as walnut, beech or even oak. However, I should think you might find an interesting large size coffee table in maple.

Folding Screens

Mrs. M. B. writes: "I would like advice about some screens that I have—two pair of folding screens made of burlap. The burlap is worn out and I would like to recover them . . . what material should I use?"

The easiest way to recover your screens would be to use chintz or some other interesting fabric. I believe you will find it difficult to finish them with brass tacks and get them even, if you are going to do the work yourself. I would suggest tacking the fabric as neatly as you can with ordinary tacks, then covering the edges with upholstery gimp or some sort of braid.

Outfit Pleases Service Men

Hollywood, Calif.—Joan Leslie, starring opposite James Cagney in Warner Bros.' "Yankee Doodle Dandy," went prepared to be put through the paces by the parachute troops at San Diego, as well as to entertain the boys with songs and dances.

To keep up with the soldiers in their special exercise routine, Joan wore a long-sleeved chalky white blouse and navy blue shorts.

Dances and songs were executed by the youthful star in a lovely dance frock of white, eyelet-embroidered cotton. It was styled with short, puffed sleeves, deep square neckline, fitted bodice and graceful skirt.

Man Past 50, Who Has Never Lacked for Intelligent Feminine Companionship, Judges From 'Tarheel's' Letter That He's No Answer to Smart Girl's Prayer

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: In my opinion you were too subtle by half in your reply of May 15 to "Tarheel," the gentleman of 30 who said he has never met a girl with an interesting mind; that few women have the mental capacity to be good companions,—and then recited, word for word, a conversation he "very foolishly launched," recently, with a woman coworker, to prove his pessimistic conclusion is honestly come by. Judging by the quality of his contribution to the discussion set forth, he will never "get" the meaning of your mild suggestion to "look within himself for the remediable cause" of his mediocre associations.

Now, with more than 50 years of living on the debit side of the ledger, and lacking several of "Tarheel's" claimed credits, I still enjoy today,—as I have through the years,—a never-failing abundance of mentally stimulating feminine companionship; and this despite the fact that my senior draft registration card shows that in no particular am I a match for Adonis; or Tarzan, either.

If we have a fair sample of "Tarheel's" I. Q. in his purported analysis (in the conversation cited) of the reasons why General MacArthur's exploits at Bataan were played up in the news, then I think somebody ought to break it to him gently that he is hardly the answer to any smart girl's prayer for mentally interesting male companionship. Why didn't you tell him so, Miss Haworth? Why humor him in the delusion that he played Aristotle to the girl's Gracie Allen?

I am just as allergic as "Tarheel" professes to be, to gals who are beautiful but dumb. But, praise be, I have never had to put up with them, for lack of choice. There are some women, as I have found, who possess the companionable blend of brains and beauty. But intelligence in either sex has to be appreciatively approached, not regarded with doubtful apprehension, if is it to add a fine flavor to companionship. Sincerely,

LUCKY BLOKE

Do Men Resent Girls Suggesting 'Dutch Treat?'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have just finished reading "Tarheel's letter and wish to say that any man, 30 years old, who has never met a woman he can respect as his intellectual equal is either an insufferable egoist or else he is primarily,—even though perhaps reluctantly,—attracted to nitwits, for reasons best known to himself.

He says he has never known a woman with an interesting mind,—even though he knows plenty who are college graduates! Doesn't that smack of intellectual snobbery? Perhaps he needs to be reminded that academic degrees do not necessarily confer intellectuality. There are many interesting persons whose education ended with high school. Furthermore, I think native intelligence and common sense are greater assets that encyclopedic knowledge. The normally intelligent person of average education is often capable of a better brand of conversation than egoistic intellectuals, who can tolerate no opinions but their own.

As for "Tarheel's" cutting comment about women "expecting a man to pay the freight when they go out together on trial flights of friendship,"—I want to get it into the record that on several occasions (before I learned better) I offered to pay my way, when in a man's company, with unpleasant results. The men were annoyed or embarrassed, and in each instance, the "trial flight of friendship" bogged down.

Believe me, I would like nothing better than a comfortable man friend to whom I could say: "Let's go riding tomorrow." Or, "Let's go to the ball game," or what-have-you, with the implicit understanding that it was a "Dutch treat" date. What I mean is,—I would gladly "pay my own freight," in exchange for the privilege of naming the form of entertainment; because there are many excursions a girl would like to take, in a man's company, that she doesn't feel free to suggest if he is footing the bill. This goes for concerts, plays, sports events, etc. When it comes to dining and dancing, that's a different thing. In conclusion, Miss Haworth, I second your suggestion that "Tarheel" should look within himself, for the explanation of his failure to find interesting women friends. Sincerely,

LADY TARHEEL.

She Seconds 'Tarheel's' Criticism of Women

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I think you were a little too unsympathetic with "Tarheel," in suggesting that the fault may be his, if he knows only mentally inferior women. Although I am a woman, and, therefore, fairly well disposed toward my own sex, I must say that I don't meet a woman of "interesting mind" once in a blue moon. (Nor man, either, so far as that goes.)

Being away from home and lonesome, I was just about to write in desperation to your column to ask: "Is it possible to find here some person, male or female, highly educated, of leftist persuasion, who is also lonesome?" If I am to be conventional, I suppose I must ask for someone around the age of 50. (Sorry, "Tarheel," that I am not a couple of decades younger!)

The more intelligent the person, the less chance he has of meeting his own kind. The number is limited; not more than 20 per cent of the world's entire population, at most, having adult minds, I should say. So naturally it is difficult for the 20 per cent to find really congenial companionship. I have known such companionship a few times in the past, but circumstances beyond control always interfered to dissolve the alliance. It would be wonderful if, through your column, a way could be found to alleviate somewhat this problem of intellectual starvation in wartime Washington. Sincerely,

A. G. H.

Interesting Person Attracts His Kind

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I was so amused by "Tarheel's" harangue against women this morning that I cannot resist replying;—hence this, my first letter to any newspaper. Having been born and reared in North Carolina, I feel safe in saying to "Tarheel" that North Carolina would be embarrassed to claim him as a native son.

But, to be brief and to the point, it is quite apparent why he has never known any interesting girls. He lacks what it takes to interest them. A man or woman must be stimulating in his own right to strike a spark in another person. Intelligent girls just don't waste time and brain power "making conversation" with a man they consider boring. And vice versa, of course.

In other words, it is my opinion, based on experience, that mental companionship (or social comradeship) operates on the same principle as anything else! You get in proportion to what you give; your dividends are commensurate with your investment. If you would be interesting to the other fellow, you must be sincerely interested in him,—and a dead giveaway of egocentricity is trying to ram your opinions down his throat. If you want an encouraging audience for your pet ideas, you win it by first listening attentively while the other fellow expounds his views.

By the way, my husband is a "Tarheel" of a different stripe. He happens to think rather highly of feminine intelligence,—fortunately for me. Sincerely,

NORTH CAROLINIAN.

Matching Jewelry For Dress and Hat

Almost every bonnet has a veil, these days, and almost every woman wonders how to keep the charming bit of fluff out of her lobster thermidor.

But Grace Bradley, featured player in Hal Roach's "Bridget From Brooklyn," has found a solution to this feminine problem. She wears two matching pins of different sizes on the lapel of her suit, or the neckline of her dress. In a restaurant or at the theater, Grace throws back her veil, and with the smaller pin fastens it to her hat—or to the bunch of flowers that so often, today, passes for a hat.

These practical costume pieces are designed by Joseff of Hollywood.

'Summer Girl' Must Exercise For Slim Hips

By Ida Jean Kain

The "Summer Girl" of 1942 has already been selected. We don't know who she is and don't mind. But you too can be a Summer Girl—provided you get into shape for your bathing suit.

It isn't going to be all war and no play. We are going to have to play some so we can keep working harder. We will need the sun, salt and air tonic we get from swimming at the beaches.

But if bathing suits are rationed as strictly as other clothing, a girl will have to have a good figure. You'd better begin now to trim down hips, thighs and waist so you can qualify. Here is a set of exercises that will fix these three measurements.

Qualify Through Exercise

1. Stand on one knee, the other leg stretched straight out at the side. Raise arms overhead. Bend to the same side as the outstretched leg and slide that hand down the leg as far as you can. Try to grasp your ankle and tug to increase the side-bend. Hold it for a second, return to position, stretch, and bend again. Repeat five times and rest. Perform with other leg outstretched. That exercise strengthens the muscles of the waist, hips and thighs and slims all three.

Oh, you can't do it? Then get into condition with these easier exercises:

2. Lie on one side on the floor, one arm straight up under the head, the other braced on the floor chest-level, both legs straight down. Do the side-scissors. Swing both legs from the hips, keeping knees straight, as wide as possible. Swing your legs in a scissors-like movement—but hard! Keep it up for 50 counts. Then rest, and try the other side for the same number.

3. Now do a leg-circling exercise. Stay on your side and raise the upper leg straight from the hip, with knee straight, and describe a wide circle, first in one direction, then the other. Complete 10 circles and change sides.

Thigh Reducing

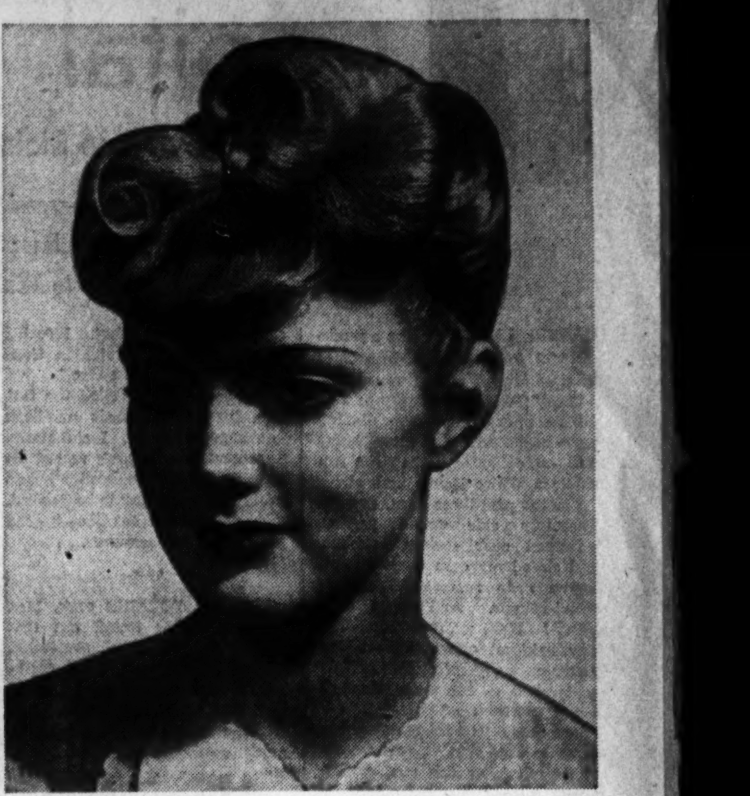
4. Another good thigh shaper can be done from the same position. This time raise the upper leg from the hip in air, hold it, then bring the other leg up to meet it. Lower separately. Repeat this one four times and change sides.

5. Finish with a hip trimmer. Assume a semi-sitting position on the floor, both hands on floor at sides, and legs straight down and together. Roll from one side to the other, propelling yourself with your hands and going away over on the soft fat pads on hips and thighs.

Fitted Coat Ensemble

Hollywood, Calif.—Jane Wyman visited husband Ronnie Reagan on the set of "Desperate Journey." Jane was wearing a smart, fitted coat of light-weight black wool over a bright print showing a black background. The coat was unique for its shiny black straw braid edgings which matched the fabric of her sandals and trim on her bag.

Hair Skein Transforms Coiffure



For the busy woman who likes variety in hair dress, but hasn't time to experiment, Antoine, the coiffure artist, has evolved the extra hair piece. Above is shown his "skein of hair," which consists of two long bands of hair deftly joined together. This may be worn like long hair and gives a sleek look to the head. Above it is arranged as a bow coiffure. It may also be worn as a braid, a twisted coil at the nape of the neck, a twist to encircle the head, a turban, a "bun" of hair in the back, or in pompadour or pageboy effect

Smile, Best Asset, Says Actress

Hollywood, Calif.—"A 'million dollar smile' is not only one of the greatest assets of a feminine star, but is an absolute requisite to her success," says Brenda Marshall, movie star.

"And a 'million dollar smile' is one of the component parts of any woman's charm," Miss Marshall continued. "It isn't only a movie star who has to worry about the public. The housewife meets her public at the grocery store, the women's clubs, apparel shops, etc. The secretary meets her public in offices, at restaurants and on the telephone. The executive woman meets her public in business meetings, offices and social gatherings.

"A smile on the face of the housewife may mean the difference in her purchase of a small, brown-edged head of lettuce or a large, crisp, green-leafed one. The secretary may elicit praise and consideration from her employer if she has a ready smile when fulfilling her duties. And incidentally, telephone contacts are a great part of a secretary's job. And, believe it or not, a person on the other end of the line can tell if a smile is genuine or not, because the same thought behind the smile determines the tonal quality of a voice," Brenda declared.

"The executive woman who smiles genuinely and easily is far more likely to get work from her employes willingly and cheerfully than the stern-faced, curt businesswoman.

"So," concluded Brenda, "watch yourself. If you find that you don't smile enough, force yourself to until you get in the habit of it, until it becomes free and easy and a part of you. You will be happier, more charming, more likable and successful."

Town Talk Centers Around Congressional "X Cards;" Mrs. Byron's Race; New Draft Class; 'Gypsy' Lewis' Talent; and George Allen's Trip to Eire

THERE'S NO TIME like a week-end to pick of oddments of interest for a Washington column. Let any news gatherer try to take off a couple of days from digging up paragraphs, and more items will come her way than she can shake a White House pass at.

For the past three days, I've deliberately side-stepped parties, skimmed over society columns, and closed my ears (well almost, anyway) to rumors-making-the-usual-rounds. And what happened? Well, without expending any habitual effort to keep my finger on the social pulse (and my typewriter at the same time) I found out that:

One Senator's wife, annoyed beyound words that X cards seem to be marking the spot where most of Congress now stands, is expressing herself freely in this fashion: "It's come to a pretty pass in this country when the press dares to criticize the statesmen of America!"

At a dinner at the Swiss Legation on Sunday evening, gas rationing was the chief topic of talk; and everybody asked everybody else how he managed to get there. "You probably used the Senator's X card," somebody said to Mrs. Guy Gillette.

"Indeed we didn't," she snapped back. "We came on my three-gallons-a-week!"

REPRESENTATIVE Katherine Byron, candidate for reelection from the Sixth Maryland District, has a good answer for those who remind her that when she ran for office the first time, she indicated that she wanted only to fill out her late husband's unexpired term.

"We weren't in the war then," she says. "Now, it's different. Everybody is expected to do his part in the war effort. I feel I can be of more service in Congress than anywhere else."

Not once has she cited the fact that it's any woman's privilege to change her mind. Incidentally, Representative Byron's record on backing the Administration's war effort leaves nothing to be desired. Seems to me she has done a good job all the way around . . .

FROM A FORMER cook, Mrs. Lister Hill has found out that there's a new, and somewhat strange, draft classification. Talking to said cook the other day, Mrs. Hill asked her whether her husband would be going into the Army sometime soon.

"No mam," said the cook, "not soon. You see he's in class 4-F."

"What?" asked the puzzled Mrs. Hill, not sure she could trust her own ears. "What class did you say?"

"You know," went on the cook, "a. b. c. d. e. f. Well he's in 4-F."

"Oh," Mrs. Hill said sympathetically, "he must be pretty bad off. I didn't know he was ill."

"He's not," was the answer. "But he's in 4-F because he's not a citizen. You see, Mrs. Hill, he has been in the penitentiary."

"GYPSY" (Mrs. James Hamilton) Lewis has told so many fortunes for sweet charity's sake lately that she wouldn't mind not seeing another life line for the rest of the season. Truth is, she's so good at it; makes the future seem so rosy, and is so accommodating about it all that no garden party, horse show, or card-party-for-a-cause in Washington is quite up to par unless "Gypsy" is on hand, or rather on hands, and in action.

Yesterday afternoon, however, Mrs. Lewis took time out from fortune-telling to gather in a small group of friends at the Sulgrave Club for an "after 5:30" get-together in honor Mme. de Basily. The latter is the former Miss Lascelle Meserve, and those invited to see her were old friends who knew her back in the days when she lived in Washington.

Mme. de Basily's parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. Harry Meserve, built the Tudor-style house at 1825 R Street, now the home of Mrs. Demarest Lloyd.

Arriving in Washington several days ago M. and Mme. de Basily found out that the housing problem in the wartime Capital is every bit as baffling as it's cracked up to be. They had to change hotel headquarters three times in the first two days of their stay. Residents of Europe for a number of years, they came to this country some time ago and have taken a country house in Connecticut. They'll be headed there when they leave Washington in a few days.

LATEST RUSTLINGS of the Washington grapevine have it that former District of Columbia Commissioner George Allen will be off to Ireland some time soon, on a special mission for American Red Cross Chairman Norman H. Davis. Seems Mr. Allen is to find out what is needed in the way of medical supplies over there in the Emerald Isle. Only drawback to the jaunt so far as Mr. Allen is concerned is that plans are being made for him to

Maj., Mrs. James Y. Adams Now 'On Station' in Capital

Renewing acquaintance with their many friends here are Maj. and Mrs. James Y. Adams, who have just come to Washington, where Major Adams will be on temporary duty at the War Department.

Major and Mrs. Adams arrived in Washington on Friday and are at present house guests of Major Adams' parents, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Emory S. Adams, at their home on Thirty-fourth Street. General and Mrs. Adams will entertain this evening at a small family party and will take their guests on to the performance of "Arsenic and Old Lace" at the National Theater.

Mrs. James Adams, an Army Junior also, is the former Miss Lucretia Van Horn, daughter of Mrs. Robert Van Horn and the late General Van Horn. She and Major Adams were married about four years ago in Atlanta, Ga.

Last March, Major and Mrs. Adams visited Mrs. Van Horn in San Francisco, Calif., where she now makes her home, when they went to the West Coast to attend the wedding of Major Adams' younger brother, Capt. Emory S. Adams, jr., to Miss Margery Churchill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Churchill of San Francisco. The wedding took place in the Post Chapel of the Presidio on March 21, with General Adams as best man and Major Adams as head usher.

On their way to the Capital from Randolph Field, Major and Mrs. Adams stopped off for a visit with Captain and Mrs Adams at Fort Benning, Ga., where Captain Adams is now stationed with the Paratroops.

MISS FRANCES M. LINTHICUM

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest M. Linthicum announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Frances M. Linthicum, to Ensign William J. Gregg, United States Naval Reserve.

Ensign Gregg is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Gregg of New York City. He attended the Naval Academy at Annapolis and is a graduate of Georgetown University School of Foreign Service.

The date for the wedding has not been decided.

Thomas J. Watsons Give Party for Peru's President

President Manuel Prado y Ugarteche of Peru, who will be in Washington tomorrow for a final few hours visit before starting back to his homeland, is now finishing a New York calendar that has been crowded with fetes in his honor.

Among the many parties given for him was the large dinner and reception at which Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Watson were hosts on Saturday evening in their home, 4 East Seventy-fifth Street.

The distinguished list of guests included former President Herbert C. Hoover, the Peruvian Ambassador, Manuel Freyre y Santander; the U. S. Ambassador to Peru, R. Henry Norweb; Rear Admilar Adolphus Andrews, Mrs. Thomas W. Armitage, Mrs. Robert Worth Bingham, Dr. and Mrs. Nicholas Murray Butler, Dr. Robert I. Gannon, James W. Gerard, former U. S. Ambassador to Germany, and Mrs. Gerard; Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Miss Fannie Hurst, Dave Hennen Morris, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Schram, members of President Prado's party and many others.

Barbara Poole To Have Four Attendants

Miss Barbara Poole will have four attendants when she becomes the bride of James F. Brewer, jr., Saturday afternoon at St. Gabriel's Rectory. A reception at the Admiral Club will follow the ceremony.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Mrs. LeRoy Algernon Poole of Silver Spring and the late Mr. Poole. She will be attended by Mrs. C. C. Sisson, a cousin, as matron of honor, and Miss Phyllis Poole, her sister, as maid of honor. Miss Kitty Tilt will be bridesmaid and Miss Marjorie Wiley, niece of the bride-elect, will be junior bridesmaid. Miss Poole's brother, LeRoy, A. Poole, jr., will give her in marriage.

The couple were both honored—but at separate fetes—Saturday night. Mrs. Sisson was hostess at a surprise party shower in honor of the bride-elect, assisted by her mother Mrs. Arthur Reaney of Alexandria, and Mrs. John Linton of Sycamore Hill, Md. At the same time, Mr. Brewer, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James F. Brewer, sr., was honor guest at a smoker given by Miss Poole's brother for about 40 guests.

Miss Fletcher Plans Wedding

Plans have been completed at Washington Cathedral for the wedding of Miss Jane Delight Fletcher and Hugh Leonidas Crandall which will take place on May 28 in the Chapel of St. Joseph of Arimathea. The Rev. Charles T. Warner, rector of St. Alban's Parish Church, will officiate.

Robert Frost To Visit Here

A pause between lectures, but even then not complete freedom from the platform, is in store for Robert Frost, the poet, who will arrive Thursday for several days visit with his daughter, Miss Lesley Frost at Frost School.

Mr. Frost, whose latest book of poetry, "A Witness Tree," came from presses just last month, and has been in Cambridge, where he holds a chair at Harvard. His stop here is enroute to Breadloaf, Vt., where he has a summer home and more lectures are on the books.

Miss Frost plans to entertain several times for her father during his Washington stay. He will mount the lecture platform, even in the midst of this "vacation," Saturday night when he will speak at St. John's College in Annapolis. Both Miss Frost and her father were in New York recently to attend the annual meeting of the American Academy of Arts and Letters.

President Quezon To Be Honored at Luncheon Tomorrow

Rest for presidents is a short-lived and fleeting thing, and the few days respite Manuel Quezon, President of the Philippine Commonwealth, has been enjoying since his arrival in Washington will come to an end this week with appointments both business and social on his calendar.

The Philippine High Commissioner, Francis B. Sayre, will be host Wednesday at a men's luncheon honoring the Philippine President and the Vice President, Sergio Osmena. The fete will be held at the Mayflower Hotel in the Pan-American Room, and guests will include members of the Philippine Commission and Government officials.

Today President Quezon will meet the Washington press at a conference scheduled for 11:30 o'clock in the headquarters of the Philippine Commission on Massachusetts Avenue.

Mrs. V. L. Collins Off to New Jersey

Mrs. V. Lansing Collins, sr., her daughter-in-law, Mrs. V. Lansing Collins, jr., and the latter's small daughter, Karen, left yesterday for Princeton, N. J., where they will be at the Queen's Court apartments indefinitely.

Mrs. Collins, jr., is the wife of the former United States vice consul at Batavia, Java, who recently was appointed vice consul at Melbourne, Australia, and has gone there to assume his duties. His wife and their daughter returned to this country about a month ago and have been in Washington for a visit since then.

F. F. Chamblees To Make Home Here

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Fuller Chamblee, who were married Wednesday, May 13, will make their home in Washington after a brief wedding trip through the mountains of western North Carolina.

The bride is the former Ruth Evelyn Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Herbert Jones, of Melrose, Mass., and Mr. Chamblee is the son of Mrs. Millard B. Chamblee and the late Mr. Chamblee, of Zebulon, N. C.

The ceremony took place at 4 p. m. in the National Baptist Memorial Church. Dr. Grave G. Johnson, pastor of the church, officiated. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a street length Molyneux model of white brocade sheer. She wore a large white picture hat and matching accessories. A shoulder cluster of white orchids completed her costume.

Miss Lois Herbercha Jones served as her sister's maid of honor. She wore a corn color ensemble with a coronet braided hat of the same shade. Her flowers were talisman roses and sweet peas. Millard Wallace Chamblee was best man for his brother.

Following the ceremony there was a reception at the Hay-Adams House, and shortly afterward the couple left on their wedding trip. The former Miss Jones attended the University of Vermont and the Chandler School in Boston. Mr. Chamblee is a graduate of Darlington Academy, in Georgia, and also attended North Carolina State College. He is a member of the office staff of Senator Robert R. Reynolds.

Countess Feted

Miss Carolyn Nash was hostess at a small luncheon yesterday in honor of Countess Obert, who is a guest at the Belgian Embassy. Countess Obert is the former Yolanda Avezzana, daughter of a one-time Italian Ambassador to the United States. Her husband is now with the Belgian government-in-exile in London.

Oertling (above), general chairmen, have planned that this particular lawn party, which is for the benefit of the Red Cross Motor Corps, shall give all comers their money's worth in entertainment. With that in mind they have planned a fashion show and novelty acts for the entire duration of the event from 4 to 7 p. m. tomorrow afternoon. The fete will be given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Cafritz, 2301 Foxhall Road. Tickets are on sale at the Mayflower and the District Chapter House, 1730 Eye Street. The Delcarlia bus will take you to Reservoir and Foxhall and Red Cross members will transport you the rest of the way to the gardens of the estate

Invitations Out for Doll Show

Mrs. M. F. Scanlon, wife of Brig. Gen. (Mike) Scanlon, is busy sending out invitations for what might be termed "The Display of Five and Fourteen," at Dumbarton Oaks Gardens, 3103 R Street, Wednesday, May 27.

The "five" are dolls, two of which model copies of the gowns worn by Queen Elizabeth during her Washington visit. They were sent to the British War Relief Society by Princess Elizabeth and Princess Margaret Rose. The dolls will be exhibited and sold for the benefit of refugee children from all the occupied countries of Europe who have found homes in England.

So, as has been suggested, the benefit is a matter of aid to children, meaning the refugees, from children, meaning the princesses.

The "fourteen" will be live models, well-known Washington women who will dress in the uniform worn by British women war workers. The services represented will be the Women's Royal Naval Service (the Wrens); Auxiliary Territorial Service, (I. T. S.; Women's Auxiliary Air Force (W. A. A. F.); Postwomen, Air Raid Precaution Ambulance Corps, Women's Voluntary Services, Auxiliary Fire Service, Munitions Workers, Women's Land Army, Joint British Red Cross and Order of St. John.

Helping Mrs. Scanlon with her list—an unusual one for Washington, there being no sponsors on it—are the members of her activities committee, Mrs. Guy DuBoulay, her house guest, Mrs. W. Jasper Du Bose, Mrs. Richard Wigglesworth, Mrs. C. Matthews Dick, Mrs. George MacDonald, Mrs. Cyrus McCormick, Mrs. W. E. Pattison French, Mrs. Warden Wilson and Mrs. James W. Boyer, jr.

go by clipper, and he hates to fly. "I'll certainly be glad to set foot on Irish ground . . . and I mean ground," Mr. Allen has been telling friends.

UP AROUND Capitol Hill yesterday, the talk seemed to be mostly about beloved Pat Boland . . . His sudden death cast a pall over Congress, for he numbered his friends by the dozens.

Witty and wise, with a flair for emerging suddenly from the background with a quip you were sure to hear quoted right and left, Pat Boland was one of the most entertaining men in Washington. But while his social accomplishments were not to be overlooked, it was his ability as a legislator, his loyalty and his integrity that were mentioned time and again, as fellow Representatives mourned his passing yesterday.

Final proof of his political integrity came to the fore only a few days ago. In a small group in which he found himself someone happened to mention that Pat had three close relatives in the armed forces—one son in the Navy; another in the Army, and a brother, also in the Army.

"Yes, they're in the war," he said. "But so am I. I've got a campaign coming up that looks like a tough one, and I haven't got enough money to see it through."

A wealthy New Yorker, who had been listening with marked interest spoke up. "I'd be more than glad to help you," he said. "Just let me know how much you need, and it's yours for the asking."

Without a moment's hesitation, Pat replied, "That's mighty nice of you, and I appreciate your offer. But you're not one of my constituents, not even a Pennsylvanian; there's no reason why you should help me, and I won't allow myself to get politically indebted to anybody."

Wonder how many men in politics could have turned down that offer . . . for a reason as good as that?

Mr., Mrs. E. B. Woolley Back From Wedding Trip

Mr. and Mrs. Elliott B. Woolley, who recently returned from a wedding trip through the mountains of Virginia, are now making their home at 4121 W Street Northwest. The bride is the former Miss Vivienne Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Miller of Wyoming. Mr. Woolley is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert E. Woolley, of Washington.

The wedding took place at the Church of Latter Day Saints with the Rev. Ezra T. Benson officiating. The bride was attired in ivory satin and carried a shower bouquet of white roses and sweet peas. Miss Doris Miller, sister of the bride, was her only attendant and wore a frock of blue silk moire. Her bouquet was of talisman roses and baby's breath. Herbert B. Woolley was best man for his brother.

F. H. Jourdan And Bride to Return Soon

Expected to return to Washington day after tomorrow from their wedding trip through the South are Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Henry Jourdan, whose marriage took place Saturday at Christ Lutheran Church.

Mrs. Jourdan is the former Miss Evelyn Louise Iager, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Luther Iager of Washington. She was given in marriage by her father as the Rev. J. Frederic Wenchel performed the rites at 7:30 in the evening against a background of ferns and baskets of pastel spring flowers.

The bride's gown was of white point d'esprit over taffeta and was fashioned with a sweetheart neckline, fitted bodice and full, long train. Her long veil of illusion was caught by a halo and orange blossoms and she carried a shower bouquet of white orchids, roses and lilies of the valley.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Thelma Iager, as maid of honor. The latter was gowned in sage green taffeta with a low waistline and full skirt and carried a bouquet of Piccadilly gladioli and fern. A single gladiola bloom caught her short veil.

Gowned like the maid of honor, but in blossom peach taffeta, were the bridesmaids, Mrs. Vincent De Angelis, Miss Dorothy Minker, Miss Margaret Paulson and Miss Frances Wolf of Philadelphia. The attendants all wore single strands of pearls.

Robert L. Hoener was best man for Mr. Jourdan, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. August Jourdan of Omaha, Nebr. Ushering were Raymond F. Iager, brother of the bride, Wilbur Stahl, Matthew Miller and Kurt Wehle.

The home of the bride was decorated with spring flowers for the reception for immediate families and the wedding party after the ceremony. Later the bride put on a going-away outfit of a black sheer dress with white buttons and peplum and a white hat with black trim. Her flowers were orchids. Mrs. Jourdan was graduated from the University of Maryland with the class of 1939 and is a member of Kappa Delta Sorority. Her husband is with the finance division of the War Department.

H. J. McGrath and Bride to Live In Milwaukee

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Joseph McGrath, who are now on a wedding trip following their marriage Saturday at St. Martin's Church in Washington, will make their home in Milwaukee, Wis.

With Msgr. Michael J. Ready officiating, the ceremony took place at 10 o'clock. A message from Pope Pius XII conferred the Apostolic benediction on the couple.

The bride, who is the former Miss Lenna Marie Wilson, wore a shell pink crepe suit with a corsage of white orchids and lilies of the valley. Mrs. Thomas Buckley, the matron of honor, had on an aqua crepe suit, a matching hat and a corsage of tea roses. Florian W. Kearn of Milwaukee was best man, and the usher was Thomas Buckley.

A reception was held following the ceremony at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Burrows. Mrs. Burrows is a sister of the bride. For traveling the bride later donned a luggage tan crepe frock with frock accessories. Mr. McGrath attended Marquette University and Marquette University School of Law.

Ensign J. B. Cobb And Wife at Home

Now making their home in New York City are Ensign Joseph Brooks Cobb, jr., U. S. Naval Reserve, and his bride, the former Miss Marjorie Louise Gayle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Tessier Gayle of Lake Charles, La.

They were married in the Rectory of St. Thomas More Catholic Church in Arlington May 12 by the Rev. Edwin J. Lee in a ceremony at 4:30 o'clock. The bride had chosen a powder blue jacket dress and hat of the same shade. She wore white kid gloves and carried a bouquet of white orchids and stephanotis.

Mrs. Fred Taylor Smith of Lake Charles, was matron of honor for her sister, and wore a navy and white silk jacket dress with navy and white accessories. Her corsage was white camellias. Mr. Smith was best man for Ensign Cobb. A small reception was held at the Arlington apartment of Mrs. Charles Henry Schreiber, sister of the bride.

Congressional Wives Hear OPA Experts Give Details Of New Price Ceilings

By Genevieve Reynolds

WHEN THE Congressional wives return to their respective home States they'll be able to tell the folk back home why there's a price ceiling on pork and veal and none on fresh vegetables, fruits or lamb.

Mrs. John Taber

Mrs. W. Austin

As the retail price ceiling law swung into effect yesterday the Congressional wives held an all-day institute to thresh out the intricacies of "General Maximum Price Control Regulations." This is the first time in the history of the club that any group of Congressional wives has held such an institute on any current problems of the day.

R. V. Gilbert, Director of Research Division of OPA, who was the first speaker on the morning program, pointed out that our living standard must be reduced drastically and that luxuries would first be eliminated.

"Despite price fixings," said Mr. Gilbert, "it is still possible to obtain reasonable retail profits."

"If you're puzzled as to why a commodity costs more in one store than in another," said Dexter M. Keezer, Deputy Administrator of OPA, "you must consider that the small independent merchant cannot buy in quantities as large as big corporations or chain stores and must sell a few cents higher to meet expenses. This means that there will be individual prices in stores under maximum ceilings."

Mrs. Warren R. Austin, wife of Senator Austin of Vermont, asked the speaker if taking home the groceries from the stores would reduce the price of the products. To this question he replied no. Check the list of goods on the price-ceiling list posted in all department stores, advised Mr. Dexter.

Following this speech, Karl Borders, Director of Rent Division of OPA, discussed the rent control law. Mrs. John W. Taber, president of the Congressional Club, presided over the morning session and introduced the speakers. Mrs. May Thompson Evans, chief, Consumer Relations Section, presided over the afternoon round-table discussion of members of the club.

Mrs. Biddle Recites

MRS. FRANCIS BIDDLE, wife of the Attorney General, took poetry off the bookshelves and made it a vital, living subject to members of the Woman's National Democratic Club yesterday when she read some of her poems at the weekly luncheon meeting.

Mrs. F. Biddle

Mrs. H. F. Stone

She read extracts from her poems written under her maiden name—Katherine Garrison Chapin. Not only did Mrs. Biddle read her poems but she related personal incidents of when and why each was written. Reading from her collection of poems published in book form, "Plain Chant for America," she chose "Girl in the Sun," "While There Is Yet Time," "A Little Boy at Dancing Class" and several others.

"The Last Free Flag," which she wrote in 1938 because she saw the approach of Naziism, is something of an answer to the pro-Nazi criticisms of America, according to Mrs. Biddle.

Mrs. Albert Black presided over the meeting and introduced the guest speaker. Hostesses of the day included Mrs. Milo Perkins, chairman of the hospitality committee; Mrs. Charles Fahy, Mrs. James Le Cron and Mrs. Herbert Dorsey.

Special guests at the head table included Mrs. Myrl Myers, wife of the Consul General at Canton, China; Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, wife of the Chief Justice; Mrs. James H. Rowe, wife of the Assistant Attorney General; Mrs. Robert Taylor, Mrs. Charles H. St. John, Mrs. F. W. Hiddiga and Mrs. Raymond Clapper.

Girls' Camp Leader Here

IF YOU'RE worried about the teen-age girls' ability to face war crisis or postwar problems you ought to talk with Mrs. Elbert Williams of Dallas, Tex., who is the national president of the Camp Fire Girls, Inc. In less than 10 minutes she'll dispel your doubts or trusts.

Mrs E. Williams

Miss H. Dively

In town for a few days she will be guest of honor and speaker at the annual luncheon of the Potomac Area Camp Fire Guardians Association today at the Fairfax Hotel. The luncheon this year is in the interest of the summer camping fund of Camp Fire Girls.

Tall, bright-eyed Harriet Dively, associate field secretary, Camp Fire Girls, Inc., is another firm believer in the potential powers of young girls.

"I am convinced that organized young people in whatever major projects they are called upon to do," said Miss Dively, "will produce more work than has ever been anticipated."

Miss Dively came to Washington especially for the Camp Fire Girls' luncheon today. She is a native of Grand Rapids, Mich.

Postlude

Miss Ralston Makes Debut As Pianist

By Ray C. B. Brown

Fanny Amstutz Roberts presents Mildred Gaddis Ralston in a piano recital Monday night in Phillips Memorial Gallery. Program of compositions by Bach, Mozart, Chopin, Brahms and Debussy.

Brown

It is encouraging for a debutante pianist to have as large and friendly an audience as the one that filled the concert room of Phillips Memorial Gallery last evening for the recital of Mildred Gaddis Ralston. In the case of this young musician, there is something to be encouraged, for she has a talent for the piano and a good technical foundation upon which to build an interpretative ability. An emotional warmth radiates from her playing, and she has an obvious predilection for the poetic values of music. Her touch is expressive and she phrases with an aptitude for variety in contour and tonal color.

The sooner she breaks away from the tradition of recital programs, the better it will be for her development. Young musicians should be advised to begin the exploration of musical literature before they become circumscribed by a limited repertoire and while their interest is fresh and eager. It is not always easy to discard convention, but the results of revolt are rewarding in the growth of intelligence and in the pleasure of discovering how much excellent music is neglected.

Miss Ralston started with a piece of dubious pianistic worth, Busoni's transcription of the chaconne from Bach's D minor sonata for solo violin. It makes a brave show of technique, but it transfers a singing voice to a percussive instrument and alters the values almost beyond recognition. This was followed by three Chopin pieces—the D major nocturne, the F sharp major impromptu and the A flat major ballade.

A Brahms group contained the A minor, A major and B flat minor intermezzi from Opus 118, and from these a transition was made to Debussy, represented by "Reflections on the Water" and "Gardens in the Rain." The recital closed with Mozart's concerto, the orchestral part of which was played by Fanny Amstutz Roberts at a second piano.

One suggests that Miss Ralston build a more interesting program for her next appearance. If she wants to play Mozart, let her precede him with a sonata by John Christian Bach or John Schobert, the two composers who most influenced his early style. In place of Chopin, let her try Alkan for a change, and Medtner in lieu of Brahms. As for Debussy, whose impressionistic delicacies as yet evade her as they do nine out of ten pianists, some of the barcarolles, impromptus or nocturnes of Gabriel Faure would make an agreeable substitution.

Pay Stabilization Up to President

Board, the new War Man Power Commission, and the Department of Labor. The President has not mentioned any one of these as being in charge of the program, nor has he said which of several wage stabilization methods he wishes adopted.

Enforcement Methods

At present, most support appears to be given to the War Labor Board as the directing and coordinating agency, on the ground that it commands the largest and most effective Federal authority. Chief objection to its taking over the whole field of wage stabilization is that a shift to an operating function might imperil its present judicial role of adjudicating labor disputes.

If the board should assume the function, however, it has been proposed it announce a policy of complete freezing, subject to change only after proceedings and permission of the board or new subagencies of the board to be set up throughout the country on a regional basis. For enforcement, the freeze would be dependent on two weapons:

1. The Office of Price Administration would recognize no pleas for relief of price ceiling hardships or requests for upward revisions in the price ceiling if a factor in the difficulty were increased costs due to grants of wage rises.

2. Clauses would be written into all Federal contracts for war and Government supplies, prohibiting pay increases without prior War Labor Board sanction.

These methods, it is believed, might take care of the present inflationary problem of wage increases granted voluntarily by employers without any dispute, so that the case, under present procedure, is outside the scope of the War Labor Board.

They would be effective deterrents to inflationary wage boosts, it was believed, not only in war industries, but in almost all civilian manufacturing and service areas. With few exceptions, present profit margins are too small to permit extensive wage increases without concurrently necessitating higher prices. In only a few industries, and not those employing the largest labor forces, are prices exempt from the ceiling which went into effect yesterday for retail sales and will become binding on July 1 for services.

OPA representatives were reported to have taken the initiative at yesterday's meeting in demanding that the stabilization program be quickly made an actuality, lest wage rises defeat the battle against inflation.

Senate Wipes Out House Cuts in Farm Appropriation Bill

with the Government," and told the Senate he was not saying anything he had not told Baldwin to his face at hearings before the Byrd committee on nonessential spending.

"If he wants to sue me, let him go ahead," shouted McKellar," I will waive the fact that I am a Senator."

Baldwin, in a statement last night described McKellar's charge that he is a Communist as "absurd and untrue."

At the same time, he hailed the Senate vote as demonstrating the confidence of the Senate in the FSA program.

"I am immensely gratified by the confidence the Senate demonstrated in the work of the FSA by its vote," he said. "This is the important outcome of the debate. Any charges that Mr. McKellar or anyone else makes about me or any other individual in the FSA are relatively unimportant.

"Of course, any charge that I am a Communist is absurd and untrue."

McKellar took the floor after Byrd charged FSA with "high pressure" methods and "solicitation of clients in order to expand appropriations." The Virginian said FSA has made use of the Government frank to "circulate vicious attacks upon members of Congress who have dared to advocate reductions in the appropriations of the Farm Security Administration."

Byrd described farms financed by FSA "on the collectivist principle" and McKellar attacked migratory labor camps maintained by the agency "for men nobody ever claimed were farmers." The Tennesseean charged rural rehabilitation loans made by the agency allowed for such items as poll taxes, movies and even lodge dues.

McKellar said Baldwin "is giving away enormous sums to some very trifling people" and that grants to "those who will not work for it" are hurting the morale of the farmers.

Senator Russell (Democrat) of Georgia, floor manager of the bill, cited $13,070,434 in below-budget cuts by the committee in the 680 million dollar measure. He said agriculture was necessary to win the war and asked the Senate not to cut any deeper. He said it would be "wasteful" to deny travel funds to send farm officials into the field. Together with Pepper and Senator Connally (Democrat) of Texas, he denied there was anything improper in FSA allowing for poll and other taxes and miscellaneous expenses in loans to needy farmers.

In defense of Baldwin, Senator Bankhead said he had never heard Baldwin make any statement "that indicates in any way that he is a Communist or not in full accord in every way with our American institutions." Hill made a similar statement.

Pepper asked McKellar what justification he had for the charge. The Tennessee Senator said he based it on cross-examination of Baldwin before the Byrd committee.

In addition to the 25 million dollar cash increase for FSA over House figures, and the 55 million dollar raise in the rural loan authorization, the Senate without opposition increased the amount for loans to farm tenants and sharecroppers for purchase of farms to 40 million dollars. The House had cut this to 25 million dollars.

X Gas Card Holders Are On the Spot

Federal officials who have X gasoline ration cards are on the spot. In at least two war agencies they have been politely but firmly told to surrender them. Signs point to quiet inquiries in other agencies. "We want all our employes to be in the clear when the X list is published," an official said yesterday. A review of gas ration cards in each department is being suggested. Share-your-car groups are being formed in each agency and it has been proposed that they be used in making a check of the ration cards.

A loophole in the Office of Price Administration's gas rationing regulations gives the employe who travels a chance to chisel an extra tank of gas. This is the regulation that reads: "No ration card is necessary for any motor vehicle if the occupant thereof exhibits an official, military, naval, or governmental travel order in effect at the time of the transfer of gasoline to him authorizing or directing travel by auto." Several Federal agencies already have moved to plug up the hole by tighting up official use of both Government-owned and private autos. Written consent now must be had in several bureaus for the use of cars.

Jeff Smith is now a lieutenant commander in the Navy. He was assistant general counsel of the War Production Board . . . M. Joseph Meehan, chief of research and statistics at the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, will go to WPB to help Bob Nathan "think" for Donald Nelson. Nathan couldn't get a better man . . . Gen. Philip Fleming is back at his desk at Federal Works . . . Louis Simon, who was recently retired as the Government's supervising architect, is back at work at the Public Buildings Administration.

Steve Hannagan, the super-duper press agent, is reported to have been hired by the Navy to pep up its "E" awards to war plants . . . Assistant Commerce Secretary Robert Hinckley was once thrown in a German jail on a charge of disturbing the peace. He was preaching in the street when he was arrested. The quiet and unassuming Commerce official was once a Mormon missionary . . . It now appears that no budget and personnel cuts will be made on agencies that have 1 and 2 priority ratings. Only a very few agencies in the No. 3 category have or will be slashed. Cuts that will average around 12 per cent have or will be made on agencies that are rated 4 and 5.

Personnel Turnover

Agriculture is one agency that has been taking it on the chin. It has lost approximately 2400 employes in the last 10 weeks. This number is about 20 per cent of its Washington staff. Replacements have been hired for 600. In some bureaus a personal turnover of 65 per cent since Pearl Harbor has been recorded. More replacements would have been hired but the department faces stiff cuts in its 1943 budget which is now in Congress. Moreover, no replacements are available to fill technical and scientific jobs. Agriculture is geared down to a war footing.

Two stenographers at OPA are speaking:

"I'd like to get a divorce from my husband," said the first one in a casual manner. "We don't get along. I'm here in Washington and he's in Ohio. Our marriage will never work out."

"Why don't you sue him for incompatibility?" the second one asked.

"I would," was the reply, "if I could catch him at it."

Civil Service Commission is working on a plan to cut out much paper work. It wouldn't answer inquiries on chances of appointment, standing on registers and the many other questions usually asked by eligibles. These information sources would be closed to members of Congress as well as everyone else . . . John J. Barrett, president of the United National Association of Postoffice Clerks, has joined the drive to raise the salaries of Federal workers to offset higher living costs. The President's pay raise plan is expected to be sent to Congress at any moment . . . Sentiment is growing in the departments to give employes Memorial Day off. The President, however, says that if the war effort can be furthered by working then the employes should work. And that means the employes will work but they'll be given time off to see the parade.

Gas Lack Strands Witnesses

Paul A. and Elbert Dulfer are considerably worried about whether they will be able to get away from Washington, back to the relatively untroubled calm of the Golden Gate. The Department of Justice is concerned, too. Summoned as Government witnesses in the Japanese agent trial being held here the Dulfers drove. Since they arrived, gas rationing has gone in effect.

Blackouts Due Every 10 Days or So

Bolles Also Tells Capital to Expect Daylight-Raid Tests At Stated Intervals

Washington may expect to have a blackout every ten days or so from now on, Civilian Defense Executive Lemuel Bolles announced last night. Daylight air raid tests also will be resumed as a regular routine.

Bolles, accompanied by his assistant, Maj. Leance Raoul LeGendre, is going to Baltimore this afternoon to confer at 2 o'clock with civilian defense directors of Maryland and Virginia, and possibly Pennsylvania, to arrange the details for a proposed three or four-State blackout. The meeting will be held in the office of Judge Rowland K. Adams, third regional director for Civilian Defense.

Although Bolles said that he could not predict the timing of the regional blackout until after the conference, he said it would probably be "very soon."

Virginia Speeds Tests

Virginia communities and counties, he pointed out, have been ordered by Virginia Coordinator of Civilian Defense J. H. Wyse to hold at least one practice blackout and one daylight test at least once a month until further notice.

Therefore, Col. Bolles thought that Virginia would, with the District, suggest that the regional blackout be held on the earliest possible date.

The ultimate aim in blackout practices, Bolles said, is to stage one with no advance warning at all—just sound the warning and let the people go through the prescribed procedure. Such a drill cannot be attempted until the air and steam horns are installed, which will not be until the middle of June at the earliest. Even then they will have to be operated manually, since the District has never yet obtained priorities on the copper wire to connect the horns with the central control system.

Periodic Tests Evalued

"We postponed the first total blackout until March because of the signal system," Bolles said. "But we cannot postpone the training of civilians any longer. The only way we can do this is through periodic tests—day and night, long and short—until every citizen is as familiar with the basic rules for self-protection during an air raid as he is with the Ten Commandments or the Lord's Prayer."

Bolles said that most cities in eastern Canada were having blackouts every 10 days, and they were becoming more frequent in all American coastal cities.

The daytime drill, which has never been stressed here except as a workout for the sirens, is considered important by Bolles because of the entirely different situations which it involves. For one thing, it would give experience to the women wardens who are principally on duty during a blackout. As a general principle, the daytime drills would train people in observing air-raid precautions at the busy period rather than always during the leisure hours.

Usher Indicted In Murder Of Missionary

Richard L. Wilhite, 17-year-old theater usher, was indicted for first degree murder yesterday in the hammer and butcher knife slaying April 15 of Madeline Matthes, 25, missionary for Jehovah's Witnesses.

Wilhite, it is charged, killed the missionary as she sat in the Whilhite apartment, 1422 N Street Northeast, awaiting the youth's mother, tor whom she wished to play some Jehovah's Witnesses' records and discuss religious pamphlets. The girl lived at 1321 M Street Northwest.

U.S. and D.C. Agencies to Draft Report Today on Sharing Cars

A report to the President on the "Share Your Car" movement is scheduled to be drafted today when representatives of 75 Federal and District agencies meet in the Agriculture Department Administrative Building.

The progress that the car pooling plan has made in the last two weeks will be reported. Most of the departments have been instituting programs similar to that adopted some months ago by the Agriculture personnel office.

The Agriculture plan has seven points, by which it had enrolled 550 persons who had expressed willingness to join the car rotation movement, and 220 who were actually engaged in it as of May 1.

Determination of the owners, the first point, had been accomplished as early as July, 1941. From lists of car owners, questionnaires were devised and sent out to each worker, requesting the name of the owner, his home address, bureau, how often he drives to work, where he parks his car, how many passengers he can carry, whether he would be willing to rotate driving with employes in his neighborhood and whether he would be willing to carry other employes who did not drive.

From the replies, charts were made, based on a District map divided into 20 horizontal and 18 vertical coordinates, and from the locations thus determined, employes were classified into prospective neighborhoods.

This plan is similar in principle to that for the Public Utilities Commission's origin and destination survey which is to begin May 25 with the polling of 360,000 workers.

The P. U. C. survey is primarily concerned with mass transportation facilities. To assist the "share your car" program, however, all the cards which show private automobiles as the normal means of going to work will be turned over to the "share your car" organizers.

As a further aid to the movement, workers will be asked to sign their names on the back of the P. U. C. questionnaire cards, which are to be circulated by the Council of Personnel Administration, the American Automobile Association and the Boy Scouts.

At first there was no intention of having the workers' names on these cards, which are detailed to show the places of residence and of work, the hours of work and the usual means of transportation to and from work. P. U. C. Chairman Gregory Hankin felt that not only were the names not relevant to his purpose, but that many persons "from a natural dislike of signing their names to anything at all" would fail to cooperate if this were asked.

Since the names are important to the "Share Your Car" program, Hankin agreed to risk the "natural dislike" in order to conduct the transportation poll.

Red Tape Tangle

Little House in Post Square Neatly Bound in Red Tape

For all the shortage in houses and offices, the little white house in Post Square, formerly occupied by the Defense Housing Registry, stands as vacant as a haunted house in a West Virginia hollow because of an Alphonse and Gaston act the Federal and District Governments are putting on.

The cause of this unusual hesitancy on the part of both is that the District owns the property and the National Housing Agency put up the house.

When the Defense Housing Registry moved from the prefabricated cottage to more luxurious quarters in Mellett's Madhouse, Commissioner Guy Mason thought there would be an admirable site for the rationing board. However, because the Housing Agency did put the composition walls together, Mason told District Rationer L. P. Steuart—who had been half-promised the occupancy—that they would have to wait for permission from the Federal agency.

Last night Mason announced that he understood that the National Housing Agency was going to house the Federal Public Housing Authority in the bungalow. The Federal Public Housing Authority is a newly formed master unit comprising all of the public housing bodies concerned with the District.

But the National Housing Agency last night said that although such a plan had been broached, it had not got very far. The N. H. A., it seems, feels it cannot make any decision without seeing if Mason has any use for the house.

"After all," said a spokesman for Federal Housing Administrator John B. Blandford, jr., "it is the District's land."

The spokesman said that he supposed Mr. Mason could order the Federal Government to tear down its playhouse and assemble it elsewhere "——But I think something will be worked out before we come to that," he added.

FSA Grants D. C. $300,000 For Parks

$500,000 More Considered; District Heads Appoint Recreation Board

Both the Federal and District governments took notice yesterday of the city's parks, now that gas rationing has made them more popular than ever.

The Federal Security Administration granted a District request for $300,000 to make improvements, and considered the allocation of $500,000 more for recreational purposes.

At the District Building, the Commissioners appointed a Recreation Board.

Members Listed

Named to the Recreation Board were Mrs. Ethel S. Garrett, Harry S. Wender, Mrs. Alice Hunter and James E. Schwab. District Budget Officer Walter Fowler will represent the District government on the board, and Supt. of Schools Frank W. Ballou will represent the Board of Education. Irving C. Root, superintendent of the National Capital Parks and Planning Commission, will represent that body.

Charles P. Taft, OEM health and welfare director, conferred "on the mobilization of forces in obtaining the allocation" with Milo Christiansen, acting District recreational coordinator; Donald Klein, of the National Park Service, and Robert C. Cubbon, newly appointed field representative of Taft's office, for the District.

The Commissioners had requested that the $300,000 left over from the original Lanham Act appropriation for the District be used to grade undeveloped playground areas. The other $500,000 was requested by the National Park Service for Federal property here such as Rock Creek Park, the Chesepeake Ohio Canal and Anacostia Park.

Christiansen Likely to Be Head

Christiansen is expected to be appointed superintendent of recreation by the board appointed. Mrs. Garrett was appointed for one year; Wender, executive vice president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, for two; Mrs. Hunter, Negro, president of the Federation of Parent-Teachers Associations, for three; and Schwab, chairman of the Board of Trade's recreation committee, for four.

Commissioner Guy Mason revealed that Wender resigned from the $500 per year position on the District Parking Commission in order to take the nonpaying place on the Recreation Board. Wender had been active in the passage, several weeks ago, of the recreation bill, which consolidated the diffused authority over District recreation facilities into the single board.

Hearing Deferred In Traffic Death Of Doris Stallings

A hearing scheduled yesterday at Upper Marlboro, Md., in the traffic death of 15-year-old Doris Stallings, who was injured fatally in front of the Marlboro Courthuse Saturday, was postponed until Monday.

Horace W. Trice, 37, of 2726 Thirtieth Street Northeast, has been charged by county police with manslaughter in connection with the death. According to police, the car Trice was driving went out of control, jumped the curb and crushed Miss Stallings against the iron fence in front of the courthouse. The car continued on almost to the door of the courthouse.

Police had difficulty in clearing the police room of nearly 50 irate town residents who gathered and threatened the driver of the car. It was finally necessary to remove Trice to the county jail to protect him.

Circus Brings Ballet Ensemble Of 50 Elephants, 50 Girls

CLOWNING AROUND—Lou Jacobs, famed circus clown, lifts a tent for a peep at Doris Claire, aerial ballet beauty. The "big top" will be pitched Monday at Twenty-first and C Streets Northeast for a six-day stand

"The Greatest Show on Earth," according to its vanguard, Publicity Agent Frank Braden, will hit the Nation's Capital Sunday for a six-day run beginning Monday at Twenty-first and C Streets Northeast.

This year's show, streamlined by Norman Bel Geddes and staged by John Murray Anderson, consists of 22 separate displays. One of them—"The Ballet of the Elephants"—presents 50 of the pachyderms and 50 girls in a mass choreography by George Balanchin, with music by Igor Stravinsky.

Another new feature is "Holidays," depicting the festival days of the year from New Year's to Christmas. Described as "by far the costliest act in all circus history," "Holidays" uses $100,000 worth of costumes and cost the circus $50,000 in props.

Acrobats and artists include Massimilliano Truzi, "the greatest juggler of the age," the Flying Concellos, the Shyrettos, unicyclists, the Wolthings, high wire artists, Zarina, novelty equestrienne, the three Fernandez aerial troupes, the Pilades, "acrobatic marvels," and the Christianis, bareback riders.

Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey also boast 1009 wild animals, including Mr. and Mrs. Gargantua the Great, a streamlined menagerie, and dozens of clowns, "funnier than ever."

Other acts are the "Fiesta del Torres," a parade depicting scenes at a bull fight, an all-girl aerial ballet and a tight wire act by the Naittos.

The show, scheduled to open with a matinee performance at 2:30 Monday, will run through Saturday night, May 30. Tickets will go on sale tomorrow at the American Automobile Association, Seventeenth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest.

The A. R. Hesters Win Sweeps In Woodridge Club Rose Show

Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Hester, 1824 Rhode Island Avenue Northeast, won the sweepstakes championship in the annual rose show of the Woodridge Garden Club held last night at the McKendree Church Hall near South Dakota and Rhode Island Avenues Northeast.

Second and third places in the sweepstakes went to Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Hofmann, 1617 Evarts Street Northeast, and Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Gamble, 3100 Twenty-fourth Street Northeast. The scoring was close with 209 points for the winners, 186 and 181 for the runners-up.

In addition to winning the sweepstakes, Mr. and Mrs. Hester also took first place in the competition for the best composition of roses. Mr. and Mrs. Hofmann were the winners in the artistic arrangement class.

Best rose of the show was exhibited by Mrs. H. C. Maynor, 2605 Brentwood Road Northeast, and second best rose was shown by Mr. and Mrs. Hofmann.

Morris Refuses Directed Verdict In Records Trial

Motions by defense counsel for directed verdict of not guilty in the cases of four of five persons charged with illegal removal of Civil Service Commission records were denied by Justice James W. Morris in District Court yesterday after the Government ended presentation of its evidence.

The motions denied were in behalf of Miss Katherine Kay, financial secretary of Standard Business Service where records were allegedly removed for transcription into mailing lists; Harlin G. Crandall, former employe of Civil Service Commission; Walter A. C. Camp and Werner J. Orbach, partners in a health food business.

Lambda Sigma Chapter Observes Fiftieth Birthday

Members of Mu Chapter of Lambda Sigma Fraternity met at Naylor's Restaurant last night to observe the fiftieth anniversary of their organization. Of 426 members 125 were present.

Following the banquet, Col. Thomas Marshall Spaulding, founder of the local chapter of the fraternity, who presided, gave an informal talk.

Honesty—Thy Name Is Hippocrates

A physician was among those who returned X-cards yesterday to the rationing board at Rockville, Md. He said his patients come to his office and he makes no outside calls and does not feel he is entitled to the X classification. The board agreed and issued a substitute.

Boxing Bill Hits Snag In House

District Committee Delays Action on Bill to Compensate Ring Commissioners

The House District Committee yesterday delayed action on a bill to provide compensation for the District of Columbia boxing commissioners.

Representative Hartley (Republican), New Jersey, known as the "father of District boxing," introduced the measure under consideration. It placed pay for the commissioners at "not more than $3000 a year."

Commissioners of the District, however, expressed opposition to this sum as "too high" and suggested payment at the rate of $10 a meeting and not more than $500 a year.

Claude Owen, chairman of the boxing commission, estimated the number of meetings held by the members at approximately 100 a year, in addition to official attendance at all boxing matches. He pointed out that the Hartley measure had the approval of the late District Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen and former District Commissioner David McCoach, jr.

The committee approved four local bills, one of them to permit railroad changes for development of Buzzard's Point in connection with expansion of Navy Yard facilities. Another would grant a Federal charter to the United Philippine War Veterans, another extend the changing of Conduit Road to MacArthur Boulevard to include that portion of the road in Maryland. The fourth would permit issuance of a license to practice chiropractory to Dr. Wesley K. Davis.

STORE UP IRON for YOUR BLOOD
Get Vitamin B for Your Nerves

When the body craves these vital elements, a rich supply will put color in your cheeks, enrich your blood, benefit your glands and other organs WITHOUT ALCOHOL OR HABIT-FORMING DRUGS.

When your system is low in iron and vitamin B all your organs slow down—you look bad, get tired easily, and feel played out. Iron makes red blood and red blood is vital for healthy muscles, healthy skin, healthy glands and healthy organs. Iron-poor blood may cause low vitality, heart palpitations, shortness of breath, swollen ankles and frequent periods of ill health.

Your nerves need vitamin B and so do your stomach and bowels; if you don't have enough Vitamin B you may get a painful neuritis, stomach upsets, constipation, weak appetite, mental depression, restless sleep and you can suffer in other ways.

In these conditions, you need ENRICH, the thrilling new tonic that tastes like juice of wild cherries and gives you more iron every day than a bushel of spinach or boxes of raisins; more vitamin B daily than 8 ordinary cakes of yeast. Your pep comes back with a bounce when you restore missing iron and Vitamin B, and you eat more, stop worrying, and sleep better. Thousands of men and women feel keen and lead happier lives, through the help of ENRICH. Don't wait.

One bottle, $1.79; full course treatment, large size, $3.19. Money refunded unless ENRICH improves your state of well being.

"THE LOWEST PRICES ON THE EAST COAST"

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Chicago, May 18.—When Stan Spence came back to the Washington bench in Cleveland after running out an infield hit, and told Manager Bucky Harris that he had pulled a leg muscle, Harris cracked; "This hurts me worse than it does you."

POVICH

It was an old bromide but it summed up the situation. Harris was losing his only .300 hitting outfielder. In fact Spence was batting .416 at the moment.

"I've never seen it to fail," said Harris today as he moaned at his ball club's retreat toward the cellar. "The ball players who get hurt are the ones who are always going well. The fellows in a slump never seem to pull any muscles or break any legs; it's always some guy you need in there every day."

For two weeks now, George Case has been out of the Nats' line-up with a torn shoulder, forcing Harris to play three left-handed hitters in his outfield, even against left-handed pitching. The unhappy alternate would be to move big Roberto Ortiz into the outfield, but Harris does not want to make that concession to the opposition.

"Case is the perfect example of what I mean," said Harris. "He was off to a great start this year, doing everything well. He was hitting more than .300, fielding well and running the bases better than he ever did. In the first three weeks of the season he scored 19 runs and was leading the league. It usually took him a month to get started, but this year he was off winging. Now look what has happened.

"Last year, Case had long slumps during which he couldn't buy a hit of any kind. He wasn't much help to the club during those periods, but he was never hurt. It's only when they're going well, that accidents seem to happen to my ball players."

Harris said he didn't wish First Baseman Mickey Vernon any ill luck, "but look at him. He isn't batting .200 for us, but he keeps disgustingly healthy. If he were having a good year, he'd probably be due to break a leg any minute now."

What the Army left of the Washington ball club when it extracted Cecil Travis and Buddy Lewis from the line-up, has been ravaged by injury. Dutch Leonard, the best pitcher on the club, has been out for three weeks with a broken leg and will be out for three weeks more, which doesn't sweeten the picture for Harris.

"That was the darndest accident," said Harris. "Leonard breaks a leg because he plays the game up to the hilt. He's one of the few pitchers in the league who knows how to slide and would try to beat out a hit to the infield by sliding, so what happens? He breaks his leg."

Harris could go back to spring training for the full background of the Nats' tough luck. That's where Frank Croucher, in the first week of practice, became too frisky in the infield and came down with a sore arm. He hasn't been able to lift his hand to help the Nats since the season started and Harris' infield plans were wrecked.

"The worst blow, though, was what happened to Case after it seemed he was ready to get back into the line-up," continued Harris. "His shoulder is coming around nicely when Buck Newsom accidentally gave Case the business. Case was sitting on the dugout steps watching the game when Newsom came up from the dressing room and vaulted over him by placing his full weight on Case's shoulder. It was the bum shoulder and it gave way. It has been in a splint for two weeks."

The injury to Spence has been merely the latest in a long line of accidents to Harris' club. Spence was playing with a square yard of tape across his lame back, but he was doing well, nevertheless. Unable to take a full swing, he was slicing hits to left field and maintaining an average of .400 when his leg gave way in Cleveland. A Washington line-up without Spence is a pretty drab picture to Harris.

When his club ran into a flock of double-headers on this Western trip, putting a strain on his pitching staff, Harris got another setback. In Detroit, the first Western city for the Nats, Jack Wilson suddenly reported that he had a chipped bone in his elbow. Harris sent him home for two weeks of treatment in high disgust. He was disgusted because Wilson had been out of the line-up for most of two weeks with a lame ankle and could have used that idle period for treatement of his arm, if he had been frank enough to report that his arm also bothered him.

As it is, Harris is struggling along with a club on which four regulars are hitting below .200. Mickey Vernon is slightly under that figure, Jake Early has mustered only a meager .187. Mike Chartak is slugging away at a horrible .125 pace, and Joe Gomez as of this morning was a .167 hitter with a likelihood that it would be less by tonight. The Nats are now more of a soft touch for a pitcher than the White Sox, who are supposed to represent the absolute Nadir in big league power.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

A Great Clutch Hitter—Joe Gordon

New York, May 18 (INS).—We like Joe Gordon too much to predict that he will lead the American League in hitting this year. At the moment he's up in the .340's and almost daily he is corroborating our staunch belief that he is the greatest clutch hitter in the game.

CONSIDINE

It's unfair to suggest that he might top them all this year. It's the one sure way of hexing the guy. We once wrote that Cecil Travis would lead the league in hitting—and he promptly went 19 for 0, dropped out of the five leading hitters and might have dropped out of the league itself if we hadn't rushed into print and stated flatly that he was a bum. Whereupon he steadied and, if we recall correctly, finished fourth or fifth among the hitters that year. But our original boost was too much to overcome.

Up until this year, no hitter we ever met had more disdain for a base hit, as such, than Gordon. His interest in getting a safe knock would arise only when a safe knock alone would suffice to help the team. If the Yanks were winning by a handy score, he'd have trouble getting the ball out of the field. Or, if the Yanks were leading and some infielder or outfielder robbed him of a hit with a great play, Joe would stroll back to the dugout whistling.

We learn of the love of Romeo for Juliet, of Abelard for Helois and Tristan Speaker for Isolde but the love of the average hitter for a hit transcends all.

The Old Fox Knew Manush Too Well

Clark Griffith expressed it best, years ago, when we suggested to him that Heinie Manush would not hit as well for Washington after Heinie's great pal and booster, Joe Cronin, moved on to Boston.

"Hah!" sputtered the old gentleman, scornfully. "I could send Cronin to China, and keep Manush, and if Heinie's dear old mother were playing second base against us someday, and robbed Heinie of a hit with a one-hand catch, Heinie would still want to beat her over the head with his bat. The only thing a ball player loves is a base hit. It's their meat and potatoes."

Getting back to Gordon, he is (or was) the exception.

Last season Joe McCarthy called Gordon aside one day, after Joe had hit about .120 through a series which the Yanks had won easily, and said: "Joe, you can hit about as well as you want to. Why don't you get more hits?"

Gordon shrugged. "We're winning, aren't we?"

"That's not it," McCarthy told him. "I'm thinking of you. If you start hitting like you're capable of hitting you increase your value to the team. And you can make more money. Those extra hits will be a good talking point for you at contract time."

Gordon thought it over for a bit and said, "We're winning, aren't we?"

That's how it went the rest of the year. Joe finished with .276, far down the list of hitters. Yet in the World Series against the Dodgers—where it counted—he made the DiMaggios, Kellers, Camillis, Reisers and Medwicks look like also rans. Joe batted .500.

Enemy Pitchers Agree On His Talent

Dodger pitchers, as well as Durocher, all agreed that Gordon was by far the most dangerous man in the Yankee lineup. But none of the Yanks was surprised, nor was McCarthy. They had seen him break loose in every important series and hit two or three or four hundred points over his mild average.

"He's the greatest ball player I ever saw," McCarthy solemnly asserted the night after the 1941 series ended.

The comparatively dizzy height to which Gordon has ascended in the list of American League batters this season may indicate that he has taken McCarthy's advice to heart. If so, that has meant a complete reversal of his outlook on baseball.

On the other hand, his .340-plus may be simply a Gordon contribution to a Yankee team which needs hitting at the moment. With Joe DiMaggio struggling to get out of the .280's and .290's and Killer Keller mashing the apple at a soggy .220-odd, it is patently time for Gordon to change his role from that of bi-weekly clutch hitter to everyday producer. It will be interesting to see if he drops back when DiMag and Keller start belting the ball again.

Physically, we think he is capable of leading the league. We mean he has the coordination and the guts of a great hitter. But such a goal has always seemed rather trite to him. He is the perfect team player. His interest in personal glory is always secondary. Until this season, he has intruded his really wonderful batting skill into a contest only when there was an imperative need for a hit or run. And when he has, pitchers agree, the man is all but impossible to get out.

If he could only field!

Night Ball Officially Banned in New York

Washington Unaffected By Army Rule

Dodgers Undecided About Twilight Play; Giants Will Stick To Daylight Games

By Bob Considine

New York, May 18.—Night baseball has been officially banned in the New York area for the duration, and the first of 28 scheduled big league arc games, here, the Dodgers vs. Giants, will be played at the Polo Grounds Friday afternoon instead of at night.

But Larry MacPhail, president of the Dodgers, asserted tonight that the order to douse the lights at Ebbets Field and other parks came before the ball parks had been given an opportunity to demonstrate that night baseball is possible without producing a glare.

Shibe Park, at Philadelphia, and Griffith Stadium, in Washington, which lie in the Third Corps Area, are not expected to be affected by the new vigilance. Washington is about 100 miles inland from any war shipping which might be illuminated by mainland glares. The Phils and Braves play Shibe Park's first night game of the season Friday night. District Commissioner J. Russell Young said in Washington—where 21 night games are scheduled—that "as far as we know," night baseball will not be banned.

Shields Worked Perfectly

MacPhail has tested certain shielding devices on the Ebbets Field lights. They were made by the General Electric Co., and worked so well in a private demonstration, according to MacPhail, that the lights were not visible 100 feet from the park.

"We were asked by the Army to turn on our lights for its recent test at sea," MacPhail said. "This we did, though we told the authorities at that time that we had ordered these shielding devices. However, they wanted to test the lights without shields."

Maj. Gen. Thomas Terry, commandant of the Second Corps Area, told reporters that observers in a patrol boat could plainly see the Ebbets Field lights 15 miles at sea, and that they "agreed that it must be stopped."

MacPhail, when informed of this several days ago, called on Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine, who is charged with the task of enforcing the Army's dimout regulations.

Undecided on Twilight Games

"Valentine asked me if I thought we could successfully shield our lights. I answered 'Yes. We can.' I believed from that conversation that we would be given an opportunity to demonstrate how well we could. But apparently we won't be given one. No, I plan no appeal. I can't say just now whether we'll go in for twilight baseball."

MacPhail said that the loss of night baseball will mean little to the Dodgers, or other big league teams, but that a spread of the regulation would result in the closing down of nearly all minor league teams affected.

"We wanted seven night games only," MacPhail said. "We would have drawn about 25,000 to each game. In the day time we'll draw about 11,000 to those games. That's a drop of perhaps $60,000, but what's that if we're helping the war effort? We gave that much away in our recent charity game.

"But I do think we should have been given a chance to show that we can comply in every way with the letter of the dimout regulations. I had three ways of cutting down the glare at Ebbets Field—the shields, the turning out of certain light towers, and resetting the lights to concentrate on the field itself. All would have worked, in the opinion of illumination experts. But I guess we won't get a chance to prove it."

Giants to Rely on Sun

Horace Stoneham, president of the New York Giants, also stated that his club did not plan to substitute twilight games for the doused night games. The Giants' office issued a statement that fans who had purchased tickets for Friday night's game could get their money back—or use them for the matinee.

The Yankee Stadium is not equipped with lights for night baseball.

The Jersey City Giants played a night game against Baltimore in Jersey City last week. It is probable, however, that General Terry's office will extend the New York and Brooklyn ban to Jersey City, Newark and other cities in the area.

Abrams and Mamakos May Steal Spotlight

Neighborhood Pals in Rubber Contest On Thursday Boxing Show for Navy Relief

By Tony Neri

While the Lee Savold-Lou Nova heavyweight scrap figures to be a good attraction, there's still another 10-rounder on Thursday's Navy Relief boxing card that may well steal honors. This match, which deserves twin billing, pairs Georgie Abrams, No. 1 ranking middleweight, and Steve Mamakos, Washington's Golden Greek.

Abrams, also a local product, learned the rudiments of the boxing game here while a member of the Boys Club. He and Mamakos grew up in the same neighborhood, and have been matched as both amateurs and pros.

They split in two pro fights, Abrams winning the first and Mamakos taking the second very decisively. Since these early days both boys showed marked improvement and climbed the fistic ladder to gain shots at the middleweight championship. But both fighters' ascendancy was stopped by one man, Tony Zale.

Steve Stung First

Mamakos was the first to feel the sting of Zale's punches. First he lost a 10-round decision to the former Gary (Ind.) steel puddler, and then was knocked out in 14 rounds after having the title in his grasp. In that second meeting Steve floored Zale in the fifth round and Chicago fans thought they were seeing the crowning of a new champion. But the bell intervened and Zale, whose recuperative powers are extraordinary, came out for the next round fresh as ever to successfully defend his crown.

Abrams, a stablemate of former Middleweight Champion Ken Overlin, had his chance against Zale last November in Madison Square Garden. And again the blond-haired Zale was successful in retaining his crown.

In that fight Abrams caught Zale early, spilling him in the first round with a sharp left hook to the midriff, only to see Zale recover sufficiently to finish out the round and come back stronger.

Again in the eighth round Georgie had the champion in a bad way. But it was the same story of Zale weathering the stormy session and coming back as if he hadn't been hit.

Abrams and Mamakos are meeting in this rubber match for the right to again meet Zale for the title. Promoter Mike Jacobs, who is staging the Thursday card here, has exclusive rights to book Zale, and he has promised the winner the bout.

That contest will either be held here next month or in Chicago,

Service Men's Fight Ticket Fund Gets $20 Contribution

With the service man's ticket fund to close tonight, a $20 check from Eddie Smith of the Cross Roads, swelled the amount to $378. Two blocks of tickets were distributed Sunday, one to the U. S. O. at the Twelfth Street Y, and the other to the U. S. O. at the Knights of Columbus.

Readers still wishing to allow a service man to see the Navy Relief boxing card Thursday may send any conrtibution to The Post's boxing writer, in care of the Sports Department.

Michigan Ace Paces Western College Golf

By the Associated Press

Ann Arbor, Mich., May 18.—Willowy Ben Smith, University of Michigan junior from Fort Myers, Fla., fired a one-under-par 71 this afternoon for a 36-hole total of 146 to seize the Western Conference Golf leadership at the halfway mark of the event that ends tomorrow. Smith had a morning 75.

Dropping three 40-foot putts in his afternoon round, Smith pulled ahead of red-headed James McCarthy, Illinois footballer whose 73 topped the morning round, and others in the field of 43. One shot were Left-handed Spero Baltas of Minnesota with 74, 73—147, and McCarthy with 73, 74—147, while Capt. John Holmstrom of Illinois with 76, 72—148 and John Krisko of Ohio State with 76, 73—149 were within striking distance.

Billy Gilbert of Ohio State, 1940 conference titleholder, yielded nine shots to par and trailed Smith by seven strokes. Last year's champion, Alex Walsh of Illinois, has been graduated.

Cox, Attas Better Par In Pro-Am

Three Teams Tie With Best-Ball 64s; Attas, Jerseyite, Has 68, Cox a 69

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

John Attas, a 25-year-old Navy Department employee late of Park Ridge, New Jersey, and Host Pro Wiffy Cox posted the first sub-70 rounds of the local competitive golf season yesterday at Congressional to pace a large field in a combined Maryland State-Middle Atlantic P. G. A. pro-amateur tournament. All prizes (excluding pro sweeps) were in defense bonds and stamps, totaling $122.

Attas, a new member of Bradley Hills and a complete stranger to District competitive golf romped around the long par 72 layout in 68 strokes, four under par, while Cox paced the professionals with a 69, includnig three missed putts of putter-length on the last four holes.

Whitney Harb showed his wife, Mrs. Helen Hicks Harb, the woman professional, that she was not the only prize winner in the family by helping Cox five shots as the host team tied two other duos for the pro-am honors with best ball 64 totals. Attas and Tommy Doerer, jr., of Bradley Hills had a best ball 64 without any handicap strokes as did the Kenwood team of Pro George Diffenbaugh and former Club Champion Johnny Bergelin. Harb had a five-shot allowance.

Bergelin won both gross and net honors in the amateur sweepstakes with a one-under par 71, holing several sizable putts for the third best round of the day as the simonpures stole the honors from the pros with two of the best three scores.

Andy Gibson Second

Second money in the pro sweepstakes went to Baltimore's Andy Gibson, the smooth-stroking scot from Bonnie View who matched regulation figures with a 72, while in third place was Leo Walper, the driving range pro who wintered in Miami but hasn't played in a month with a 73.

Low gross winner in the amateur sweeps after Bergelin accepted net prize in preference to the gross was Roger Peacock, the Indian Spring stylist and former city, State and Middle Atlantic titlist with a 73. Kenwood's George Borsari was second net winner with a 76-7, 69.

Attas, a five-handicapped player in the Metropolitan New York section last year and winner of several minor tournaments in his home District, made himself at home on the big Congressional greens. Among the putts he holed was a 75-footer on the seventh hole for a birdie and a 50-footer on the seventeenth, which helped him to finish with three straight birdies. Doerer's birdie-studded round came in handy as Tommy was 2 under par on his own ball for the first eight holes and was an excellent partner.

Cox made two or three good putts, including a rainbow effort on the twelfth hole, but if Wiffy had been making his short ones he could have been around in 60. He had an eagle on the eighth hole, practically knocking the pin out of the cup with his second shot and holing an easy putt. Cox and Harb were 8 under par for 10 holes in the best

Bob Feller Accepts Bid to Pitch for Dean's All-Stars

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 18.—Speedballer Bob Feller, former Cleveland pitching ace who now is a chief petty officer in the Navy at Newport, R. I., will play in Chicago Sunday.

Today he accepted an invitation to compete with Dizzy Dean's All-Stars against Satchel Paige and the Kansas City Monarchs at Wrigley Field.

Feller, who accepted by telephone from Newport, said he would donate his share of the game's proceeds to the Navy Relief Fund.

Bob Kennedy Scores Ahead of Moses For Deciding Runs; Orval Grove Wins

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Chicago, May 18.—Well, Sir, Wally Moses stepped up to the plate in the ninth inning today and walloped a home run. It didn't do the Nats any good. The score was tied 5-5 at the time, there were two out and there was a runner on base, and the White Sox won their seventh in a row and the Nats lost another ball game.

The final score was 7-5, and the final pitch was delivered by Bill Zuber, Washington relief hurler. He had been doing very well to that point. He stopped a Chicago rally in the fifth and then pitched hitless ball for three innings. Then in the ninth he got slugged.

Bob Kennedy opened the ninth for the White Sox with a single to center, but Third Baseman Bob Repass made a fancy play on Tresh's attempted sacrifice bunt and forced Kennedy at second. It seemed that Zuber was out of trouble when he fanned Pitcher Orval Grove for out No. 2, but Moses brought him more misery. Moses hit Zuber's second pitch on a line into the right field bleachers and it was home, James, for the White Sox.

Rookies Square Off

Managers Bucky Harris and Jimmy Dykes both unearthed a rookie pitcher at the start of the ball game. Hardin Cathey was making his debut as a starting pitcher for the Nats, and husky Orval Grove, another right-hander who has been in the Chicago farm system for years, became a starting pitcher today for the firts time.

The White Sox moved Cathey out of there in the fifth inning while Grove went the route. Cathey's wildness didn't help him. In fact, three of the four men he walked scored in the first five innings.

Cathey couldn't hold a 2-0 lead the Nats gave him in the first innign. Estalella led off with a single and there were two on and none out when Lodigiani made a low throw to first on Repass' grounder. Chartak flied out but Bruce Campbell doubled to center for one run, and Repass scored on Vernon's infield out.

Cathey walked two White Sox at the start of the second inning and they both scored. Tresh beat out

Phils and Pirates Meet in Second Relief Fund Game

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, May 18.—A near sellout is expected tomorrow when the Phils and the Pittsburgh Pirates meet in the second major league baseball game for the benefit of the Army-Navy Relief Fund.

Game-time is 5 p. m., (E. W. T.) set at the twilight hour to accommodate thousands of war industries workers whose shifts normally end between 4 p. m. and 5 p. m., too late for the regular 3:15 p. m. starting time.

Even the umpires have to buy admission tickets. The Phils purchased a block of 100 for their players and families while the Pirates ordered 50.

The first benefit game, between Brooklyn and New York, yielded $58,806 for the fund.

Indians Win and Challenge Yankees for American Lead

Tribe Bests Macks, 7-4; Dean Victor

Cleveland Victory Brings Team Only 13 Points Behind World's Champions

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, May 19.—The Cleveland Indians today slammed their way to within 13 per centage points of the league-leading idle Yankees in a 14-hit attack that stopped the Philadelphia Athletics 7 to 4.

Chubby Dean held his former teammates to six hits to chalk up his third victory without too much trouble, although he granted nine bases on balls. It was the Tribe's third straight win over the A's.

Indian batting honors were shared between Kenny Keltner and Les Fleming. Keltner rapped a single, a double and a triple in five times at bat and drove in two runs. Fleming had a perfect day with a double and two singles in three trips.

The Tribesmen kept chipping away at Herman Besse and Fred Caligiuri, who relieved him in the fourth inning.

With one out in the first inning, Oris Hockett began the Tribe attack with a single and scored when Keltner planked his triple off the right-field wall.

The Athletics took the lead for the first and last time in the second by scoring twice on two walks, a single and an error. After Bob Johnson and Elmer Valo walked, Johnny Wallaesa lined a single to right and when Hockett let the ball go through him both men scored.

Dodgers Defeat Cubs, 4-1, for 7th Straight

Home Run Robs Allen of Shutout; Bruins Held to Five Hits; Flock Extends Lead

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, May 18.—The Brooklyn Dodgers boosted their National League lead to seven full games today with their seventh straight conquest, a 4-to-1 triumph over the Chicago Cubs.

Johnny Allen, the veteran right-hander, pitched five-hit ball that would have brought him a shutout except for a home run by Catcher Clyde McCullough after two were out in the ninth inning.

The National League champions scored all their runs with timely hits off Jake Mooty, two of them coming on a pair of doubles by Arky Vaughan.

In the first inning, Billy Herman walked and raced all the way home as Vaughan smashed a liner against the screen in right field. In the fourth Peewee Reese singled, was sacrificed to second and scored on Vaughan's other two-bagger.

Brooklyn put the game out of reach with two runs in the sixth. Mickey Owen started this thrust with a single and stole second, then capered home on a double by Reese. After Allen popped up, Reese took a taunting lead off second, drawing a wild throw from Mooty and enabling the little shortstop not only to steal third but to race on home.

The Dodgers also pulled a double steal with Pete Reiser and Dolph Camilli in the third.

Foxx's Homer Tops Tigers, 4-2, For Red Sox

By the Associated Press

Detroit, May 18.—Manager Joe Cronin restored Jimmy Foxx and Pete Fox to the Boston Red Sox lineup today and they batted home three runs for a 4-to-2 victory over the Detroit Tigers that squared their serie sat one game. It was Charley Wagner's fourth pitching victory against two defeats.

Old Double X belted a two-run homer, his fourth of the season, in the sixth inning, to bring the second defeat to Rookie Hal White, who won his first two American League games by shutouts. Pete Fox and Ted Williams each singled home a run in the third.

Rudy York hammered his ninth homer of the year in the sixth and sent across the other Detroit run in the opening frame with a long fly after Jimmy Bloodworth and Ned Harris had greeted Wagner with singles.

Cards' 15-Hit Attack Beats Giants, 16-4

By International News Service

New York, May 18.—The St. Louis Cardinals smashed out 15 hits and put eight others on the bases through walks today and banged their way to a 16-to-5 triumph over the New York Giants.

The visitors scored in six of the nine innings with a free-hitting attack against Dave Koslo, Harry Feldman and Ace Adams who went to the mound in that order, with Koslo being charged with the defeat.

It was a close ball game for just one inning—the first. The Cards opened with one run and the Giants countered with two in the underside of the frame when Johnny Mize hit a homer with one on, after which the home forces were engulfed by a five-run attack in the second. The Giants never threatened seriously again.

Lon Warneke was driven off the hill by the Giants in the third and Max Lanier went the rest of the way to be credited with the victory.

G.W.-Md. Return Game Is Canceled

Because of the approach of final examinations, athletic officials at George Washington University and the University of Maryland have decided not to reschedule the baseball game rained out last Saturday at College Park. This was to have been the final contest of the season for G. W.

Thus the Colonials do not get a chance this year to even the score with the Terrapins on the diamond, G. W. having lost a decision on April 18 at Griffith Stadium, 7 to 5. The teams broke even last year, each winning on its home ground.

This was quite disappointing to Coach Vinnie De Angelis of George Washington, even though he ended his first season as head coach with seven victories and four losses. He had hoped to see his boys meet Maryland and come through with a parting victory.

De Angelis is classified 1-A in the draft and is deferred only until next month. He may join the physical education section of the Army Air Corps at Maxwell Field, Ala.

St. Albans Netmen Win Championship

St. Albans School netmen clinched the private school tennis championship of Washington yesterday when they swamped St. Johns, 8-1, on the Wisconsin Avenue courts. The losers' only triumph came in the doubles.

Today St. Albans again takes its home courts to face Roosevelt at 3:30.

Argyle C.C. Table Net Meet Reaches Finals Tonight

The Argyle Country Club will complete the Annual Table Tennis Tournament for the club championship tonight, starting at 8 o'clock. Luke Beale will engage Ray Amsden in the last round, the winner to play "Shorty" Gibbs, who amazingly defeated Shirley Chamblin, one of the club's stars.

"Bob" Byerly, one of the surprises of the tournament, will take on "Fritz" Williams, who is always a tough guy to beat. The winner of this match will go into the finals, competing against either Amsden, Beale or Gibbs, winner in the lower bracket.

The winner of the men's single title will have to be at his best, whoever he may be, when he plays against Carolyn Wilson, the "kid" star who has won both the District and California State championship. Carolyn won the club's women's title and will play the winner of the men's title for the club championship.

Mrs. Leo Walper And Marion Brown In Golf Play Today

Marion Brown will play in her first tournament in two years and Mrs. Leo Walper will make her season's debut in the Star Cup play for the Class A women golfers today at Kenwood Country Club. A field of 73, only 11 less than that of last year, is entered in the 18-hole medal play handicap vent.

The Class B Star Cup play is scheduled for Friday at Kenwood. Entries closed yesterday and pairings will be announced tomorrow.

Little Generals Lose, 6 to 3, To G. W. High

For the second time this season George Washington High diamonders of Alexandria downed their hottest Northern Virginia rivals yesterday taking a 6-3 decision over Washington-Lee on the latter's Arlington field.

A narrow 13-12 victory in an earlier meeting, the Presidents went out and clinched matters quickly yesterday. They had scored all their runs before W.-L. had its only productive period in the fifth inning.

Dick Downey, a right-hander, set the Little Generals down with 6 hits and was in trouble only in the fifth. He fanned five and handed out four walks. For the opposition Ray Bridenbaker went the distance, allowing 10 safeties and six bases on balls.

Navy Joins Summer Baseball League of Local Schools

Middies Not to Play Opener Before July 22; Present Team to Be Hit by Graduations

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., May 18.—Navy's baseball team will participate in an intercollegiate summer league organized recently by Max Farrington, George Washington University athletic director, it was announced today.

Commander L. S. Perry, Navy's graduate manager of athletics, reported United States Naval Academy officials decided today to accept Farrington's invitation to join the league.

However, Perry said, only the baseball squad would join although other league members have decided to enter swimming, golf, and tennis teams.

Navy's schedule has been tentatively arranged, Perry reported, and will be released when finally approved. The first summer baseball game will not be played before July 22, he said, because many players will be away from Annapolis on summer leaves until that time.

All Navy's games will be played at home on Lawrence Field, the Naval Academy baseball diamond. Other league members plan to schedule home-and-home contests and also expect to meet several Army and Navy service squads.

Navy's current baseball squad, which is on a 10-game winning streak, will be hit badly by graduation but Coach Max Bishop expects to use several jayvee and plebe diamond stars to plug the gaps.

Farrington organized the league because the extended summer school sessions and shortened graduation plans, inaugurated by many colleges for wartime, would give students an opportunity for additional competitive recreation.

Other league members are the University of Maryland, George Washington, Georgetown, Catholic and American universities.

Bespectacled Bill Lee Hits High Road

Cubs' Right-Hander Has Won 5, Lost 1, In His 'Comeback'

St. Louis Cardinals Bemoan Absence of Big Johnny Mize's Warclub

By Judson Bailey
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, May 18.—The year's best pitching comeback is that of big Bill Lee of the Chicago Cubs, who won 5 and lost 1. . . . In the entire 1941 season he won only 8 and lost 14. . . . The husky right-hander, who is becoming accustomed to his spectacles, has allowed 10 earned runs in 52 innings, an average of 1.72 a game. . . . Lee's former teammate, Lefty Larry French of the Brooklyn Dodgers, also is doing pretty fair with a 3-0 record and no earned runs in his last 22 innings. . . . The Charley horse French suffered while pitching to the Pirates last week will keep him from facing the St. Louis Cardinals Wednesday.

The fellows who said down South that the Cardinals were short of punch and missed Johnny Mize seem to have had the right dope; the Redbirds have been shut out five times, which is more than any other club in either league. . . . They also have lost nine games by one run. . . Biggest surprise of the early season figures is the Boston Braves leading both leagues in home runs. . . . The Pittsburgh Pirates, who looked so woeful on the defense last season, now are leading the National League in fielding; the Braves are second in hitting, fielding and the standings.

Jake Early, the Washington catcher, is having contact lenses made and soon will be the only major league catcher wearing glasses . . . When the Braves were in Pittsburgh recently the gatekeeper refused to let Tiny Jim Wallace through the players' gate till Manager Casey Stengel came to his rescue . . . So the rookie from Hartford beat the Pirates . . . A photographer, taking pictures of the world champion Yankees at their hotel in St. Petersburg during spring training, once waved Phil Rizzuto aside with the comment, "Sorry, bud, I only want ballplayers in this one."

Buck Newsom felt so playful the other day as he came into the Senators' dugout he gave a hearty slap on the shoulders to Outfielder George Case . . . It happened Case was sitting on the dugout steps because his shoulder was injured and Bobo's friendly belt hurt the shoulder over again . . . If there is no major league baseball next year Manager Billy Southworth of the Cardinals says he will try to get into the Army . . . Ernie Bonham, who has allowed only one run in his last three victories for the Yanks, has given only three walks in five games . . . Now that Bobby Feller is gone, strikeouts are scarcer in the American League; highest for the season is eight in one game . . . Word is around that the Athletics have Catcher Frank Hayes on the market.

Phantom Player Scores in Brunswick at Charles Town

Dan Scocca Brings Home $18.20 Shot

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., May 18.—Taking command in the opening furlong, Phantom Player set all the pace and held a 2½-length advantage over his nearest rival at the end of the Brunswick Purse, featuring the Monday program. Purchased by R. E. P. Hoover of Harrisburg, Pa., from Mrs. J. B. Bond just before the race, the 3-year-old made good for his new owner under a well-judged ride by Danny Scocca, the Washington jockey.

Fritzedward, owned by G. G. Wangh, jr., was second and a neck in front of W. W. Watters' Darby Du. Only two others competed, T. W. Kirk's Dark Ace and R. C. Waple's recently purchased Michigan Sun.

It was to the tune of an $18.20 mutuel that Phantom Player turned in his second victory of the meeting under Scocca's riding. The winner's time was 1.53 4-5 for the mile and a sixteenth over a heavy track.

At least two members of the field lost their chances at the stretch turn. Fritzedward, closest to the pace most of the way, ran out with Jockey Clarence Wright at the final bend and carried the then charging Darby Du with him. Jockey Lee Eversole took Darby Du to the inside and kept him to pressure but he was through. Fritzedward finished along the outside rail.

Jockey Martin Bletzacker, leading rider at the meeting, added two victories to his growing string. He was aboard Mrs. Dan Chamblin's Berwyn in the fifth race when the veteran gelding turned back Gold Sweep, Dividend and five others in the role of a $4.40 favorite. Bletzacker came back in the sixth race to set all the pace and win by three lengths with M. B. Goss' My One. Pops Sister was second and Sir Jerome was third in this 7-furlong test. My One paid $8.80.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MATHORA, $7.20, $3.20, $2.60; PORT MELODY, $3.00, $2.60; INCENTOR, $3.00.

MATHORA took command over INCENTOR on backstretch, drew clear, but had to be put to pressure to hold PORT MELODY safe. The latter was anchored in heaviest going on inside early, responded when shaken up and hung in final test. INCENTOR took command in opening furlong and weakened in closing stages. G. C. HAMILTON was a beaten-off fourth.

THIRD RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:32. Off at 3:32½. Winner, J. E. Murphy's br. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—JALAINE, $21.00, $9.20, $4.00; RING UP, $6.40, $3.40; BRAZEN HUSSY, $2.80.

JALAINE was rushed to front on outside entering backstretch, shook off BRAZEN HUSSY and was put to pressure while holding on gamely. RING UP was forced to race on inside in deepest going for 3 furlongs, came out and closed boldly. BRAZEN HUSSY was hard ridden and had no excuses. BOATS CREW moved up menacingly early and then weakened.

Daily Double, MATHORA and JALAINE, Paid $72.40

FOURTH RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:57. Off at 4:01½. Winner, J. Oxenburg's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BERWYN, $4.40, $3.00, $2.80; GOLD SWEEP, $4.00, $3.60; DIVIDEND, $4.60.

BERWYN forged to front in run to first turn, was steadied along in front, but had to be put to pressure to stave off closing bid of GOLD SWEEP. The latter was outrun early, came out entering stretch and closed with bold rush. DIVIDEND moved up on outside along backstretch, but weakened in closing test. TAR MISS came through to improve position along rail entering stretch and then tired.

SIXTH RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $700; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 4:57. Off at 4:57½. Winner, M. B. Goss' ch. f. (4) by Stimulus—Foxy Agnes. Trained by M. B. Goss. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:30⅕.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PHANTOM PLAYER, $18.20, $5.40, $2.80; FITZEDWARD, $4.20, $2.60; DARBY DU, $2.60.

PHANTOM PLAYER forged to front in opening furlong, was rated while setting good pace and responded to urging to hold sway to end. FITZEDWARD was under mild restraint while closest to pace, ran out entering stretch and finished gamely on extreme outside. DARBY DU was outrun early, came out when placed to drive but hung after being carried out by FITZEDWARD turning for home. DARK ACE was hard ridden and showed game effort.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $600; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:48. Off at 5:49½. Winner, Mrs. E. R. Routt's br. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BROOKIE BOY, $11.00, $6.60, $4.00; NETTA WOOD, $12.20, $6.20; ALAMODE, $3.60.

BROOKIE BOY, well handled, saved ground while within striking distance for half, was allowed to drift out for racing room, responded gamely to strong riding and wore down NETTA WOD to win going away. NETTA WOOD was sent to front early, set pace under steadying restraint for 6 furlongs and held on gamely. ALAMODE improved position boldly along backstretch and then weakened. LEE'S JIMMIE raced sorely and closed some ground.

NINTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $600; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 6:16. Off at 6:17. Winner, A. S. Hewitt's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ULTIMA THULE, $20.60, $8.40, $5.20; BAR SHIP, $3.80, $3.80; MISS SELECTION, $6.20.

ULTIMA THULE, allowed to settle into best stride, worked way to contention on outside, responded to pressure to take command and tired at close. BAR SHIP was steadied while setting and pressing pace with MISS SELECTION and closed willingly under strong handling. MISS SELECTION was hard used while getting to front and weakened in final stages. BLENETHEL was pinched back along rail early, came to outside after half and hung in final drive.

Cubs Suspend Hurler For Intoxication

Brooklyn, May 18 (AP).—Vallie Eaves, a right-handed relief pitcher for the Chicago Cubs, was suspended and sent back to Chicago last night, Manager Jimmy Wilson disclosed today. He was accused of being intoxicated when he came to Ebbets Field for yesterday's doubleheader with the Dodgers.

Eaves, a former White Sox hurler, had worked only a couple of innings this spring.

Rollins Gridmen Enlist En Masse

Orlando, Fla., May 18 (AP).—Every member of the starting line-up of the Rollins College 1942 football squad has joined up as a potential United States Marine officer.

Under the procurement plan for obtaining second lieutenants, they will remain in college until they have received their degrees. Then they will be assigned to a candidates' class for a six-month training course.

Selections at Charles Town

Dear Al:

Martin Blezacker, the Ohio boy who came to this track, a saddle unknown two years ago, is setting the pace for the local riders with seven winners. Buddy Root and Willie Dufford are tied for second with five winners each, while Danny Scocca and Clarence Wright have four. Vernon Arthur led the trainers for the first week by saddling five winners, one more than Dan Chamblin and John Bosley, jr. If you were reading this column a couple of years ago perhaps you remember my writing about a mare out on Alan Clarke's farm who disowned her first colt. She wouldn't have anything to do with the broomstick-legged youngster and not only that but she bit him each time he came close to her. The colt retaliated by sneaking up behind his mother and biting the hair out of her tail. Clarke had hopes that the mare would change her ways, but she didn't and he was forced to feed the youngster on cow's milk. By June the colt was all scarred where his mother had bitten him and by June the mare didn't hardly have a hair in her tail. It was the colt's turn to laugh, however, for the mare didn't have a tail to brush off the flies. Last week a colt named Pymo came out on this track. His breeding was Mowlee-Pyrites. I didn't take any particular notice of him and neither did the bettors. He was last out of the gate but in the stretch he turned on a powerful drive and went on to win by a length and a half. They hung up a $35 mutuel on him. You guessed it, the colt was none other than the scarred little fellow who used to battle with his mother. Incidentally, the mare has had other foals since and has treated them with kindness. See you on the rail. BILL.

First race—JUNIOR PROM was a winner last week and looks like a repeater in this field. CHARMING BOY has speed and is dangerous at this abbreviated route. TIME PASSES for the show end.

Second race—BROOMORIA seems well placed in this 7-furlong test. Should make the most of the No. 1 post position. FREETONE and ARDMORE II to fill out the money bracket.

Third race—SURPRISE BOX is dropped down for this and needs only to be sound enough to run around the track to take it all. HIGH BUD is good now and belongs close. FAIR HAIRED'S last was promising.

Fourth race—MANNY B is speedy and is suited by the short route. Might take the top early and stay there. BUTTERMAN is always dangerous over this course. HALF INCH for the show end.

Fifth race—MR. JIM was a winner here earlie rin the meeting. Likes the track and may make it two in a row. STADIUM was a rather lucky winner but is fit and will be close. BLACK BASS is an upset possibility.

Sixth race — RANDLE'S QUEEN and ROYAL ECHO are a close fit in this sprint test. Both are fit as hands make horses and I prefer them in the order named. LITTLE MOWLEE was a good second last out.

Seventh race—J. HAL and HOT MAN figure to battle it out for the chief money in this field. The top one gets the best of the weight. VESTALE won that last impressively.

Eighth race — WORTHOWNING should improve enough off that last to whip this kind. SOME GROUCHER and FUSIONETTE to fill out the money bracket.

Substitute race—If this event is used, I'll take REAL BOY, PURPORT and BALKANESE.

Best bet—BROOMORIA.

Wright Rides Minee-Mo 1st at Belmont

By the Associated Press

Belmont Park, N. Y., May 18.—The John B. Partridge-Jockey Wayne Wright combination continued to click on high here this afternoon when Minee-Mo easily won the featured De Mund (class C) Handicap of seven furlongs. Riding for the man who helped to start him on his comeback campaign early in the year, Wright booted the bearer of the purple and white silks first home by three lengths in the very keen time of 1:23 4-5. Minee-Mo returned $9.70 for two.

Mrs. Alice F. Sherman's Grey Wolf was just as easily second over Wheatley Stable's Naval Reserve. Porter's Cap and The Finest finished in a dead heat for fourth. The Finest was ridden by Wendell Eads, who substituted for Conn McCreary. The latter suffered a bruised right leg and a shaking up as the result of a two-horse spill in the third race. The other boy to fall was Ralph Neves, who received lacerations about the head, neck and back.

A good-sized crowd was present today, 15,381 passing through the turnstiles.

Roman Flag, favorite in the headliner, broke well, then faded out of contention and finished last. Vintage Port, Roman Flag's recent conqueror, also was lacking in speed on this occasion.

There was a bunched run for the early lead, then Wright shot Minee-Mo out of the group to assume a clear advantage. Pompey's Son continued smoothly and won unextendedly. Grey Wolf finally shook loose from Naval Reserve through the final furlong.

Shasta Man Pays $20 at Suffolk Downs

By the Associated Press

Boston, May 18.—Running on top all the way, J. L. Patterson's Shasta Man today won the featured mile for platers of the $2000-$1500 class at Suffolk Downs by a length and three-quarters.

S. W. Shapoff's Misflying ran second, 15 lengths in front of M. Weiner's Playfields, who came third.

The winner ran the mile in 1:42 and paid $20, $5 and $3. Misflying paid $2.60 and $2.20 while Playfields returned 3.20.

Jockey Danny Johnston, who had the leg on Misflying, claimed a foul against the winner and Jockey Arturo Delara for carrying him wide at the top of the stretch but the stewards refused to change the order of finish.

The longest priced winner of the New England season occurred in the fourth when Very Grateful, owned by Miss A. O. Baldenecker of Willimantic, Conn., won, paying $165.20, $36.60 and $13 across the board.

The daily double paid $41.20 on 410 tickets when J. F. Byers' Vingt Et Un and Mrs. Ed Haughton's Late Pass won the first two races.

Pig Tales Winner Of Lincoln Fields Opening Feature

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 18. — Woolford Farm's Pig Tails, a 3-year-old daughter of Hollyrood, was a pole-to-pole winner of the Inaugural Handicap today as Col. Matt J. Winn's Lincoln Fields track opened the Chicago major racing season with a 30-day meeting.

A crowd of 8000 installed Pig Tails, coupled with Technician, the even-money favorite. Pig Tails, with Lee Haskell aboard, went winging at the start and wasn't headed. She beat Mrs. G. H. Emick's Book Plate by a length and a half, with Jean Putnam's Polymelior a close third. Technician was fourth in the six-horse field.

Just one race train was operated to the track, and it was jammed with 1326 people. Railroad officials finally had to stop selling tickets.

Nats Beaten In Ninth by Moses' Homer

an infield hit to fill the bases and Cathey fanned Grove for the second out, but Moses, same guy, singled to right and tied the score at 2-2.

Mike Chartak and Bruce Campbell restored Cathey to a 3-2 lead with two out in the third. Chartak banked a triple to deep center and Campbell got him home with a single to center. Campbell did all right today. He drove in three of the Nats' five runs. Later in the inning, Vernon and Early walked to fill the bases but Pofahl grounded out to get Grove out of a spot.

Cathey Blasted

The Sox caved in Cathey in the fifth after Tresh beat out a hit to Gomez. Moses drew a walk and with two out, Kuhel, Hoag and Kollaway socked singles to get three runs home. Zuber put an end to the assault after the Sox took a 5-3 lead.

The Nats tried hard to get the tying runs and eventually they got 'em. They got one in the sixth after Vernon led off with a single to left and took second on Appling's muff of Kennedy's throw. Jake Early's single moved Vernon to third, and Pofahl scored him with a single to center, but the stomach went out of the uprising when Early overrated his speed and was thrown out trying to take third on Pofahl's blow.

In the seventh, Bob Repass was a big help in getting the tying run. He walked with one out and stole second with two out. A wild pitch put him on third, and he scored when Campbell beat out a dinky roller past Grove. That tied the score at 5-5, but in the ninth Moses led the White Sox out of the American League cellar.

Mamakos, who is managed by Matt Twomey, has been training at the Knights of Columbus gymnasium. Manager Twomey says his charge is in excellent shape. He's been drilling daily with Middleweight El Brookman.

Abrams, who was due here yesterday, but failed to show up, has been training in Stillman's gymnasium in New York, where there is an abundance of sparring partners. George is expected to work out today at Uline Arena.

Nova again went through his paces at Uline yesterday with Claudio Villar, the brown-haired Spaniard, providing the opposition. For three straight days now these two big heavyweights have gone at it hammer-and-tongs. The onlookers have been supplied with choice action in every one of their skirmishes. If these two fighters could be paired it would make for one heluva fight.

Over at the K. of C. gym, Lee Savold was content to limit his drills to light exercises. Manager Bill Daly wants Savold to be just right for this fight, and Lee, who is in top shape, was told to make a easy day of it. However, Savold will resume heavy work today with "Stomping" Bob Smith as his sparmate.

Tickets for this charity show, Navy Relief will benefit, are on sale at Griffith Stadium, and prices are $2.50, $4, $6 and $10, tax included.

Crucial Western-Central, Wilson-Tech Games Slated Today

Series Lead Depends on Results

Four Top Nines Clash as Play-Off For Crown Looms; Hosts on the Spot

Though the public school baseball playoff is still three weeks away, a good line on its outcome may develop today as four of the top five teams in the standings engage in two games.

A preview of the championship round may be witnessed either at Central, where the home forces brace themselves for Western's invasion, or at Tech, where Wilson furnishes the opposition. Both games start at 4 p. m.

In both cases the issue is squarely up to the hosts. With four victories in five games apiece to their credit, Both Western and Wilson can much more easily afford a loss than their foes—Central with three victories in four games and Tech with a two and two record. A loss for either of the latter clubs may be disastrous in its quest for the two places in the title round.

Wilson and Tech go into their scrap with neither boasting the favorite's role, but Western' Red Raiders, the defending champions, seem to hold a definite edge over the Vikings. This despite the fact Tech, a mutual rival, downed the Raiders in an extra inning game but was convincingly trampled by Central.

Except for the Tech letdown, Western's pitching staff of Charley Hines and Clarence Kuldell has been almost invincible so far. Its fielding has been just as good and in Shortstop Ray Love, Second Baseman Bob Cockrill and Hines the Raiders boast the heaviest-hitting trio in town.

Central has either Aaron Weisenberg, a curveball hurler, or Fireballer Harry Wolfe to toss at today's opponent. Even if the pitchers have a good day, the Vikings still will have trouble matching the batting talent of the Raiders.

Both Wilson and Tech have a choice of pitchers today. The first may start either Jack Ogle or Crain to oppose Sammy Webb or Dan O'Connell.

John Rigney, Chisox Mound Star, Sings 'Anchors Aweigh;' Joins Navy Today

Right-Hander Will Enter Service as a First Class Seaman; Joins Cochrane at Great Lakes

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 18.—John Dungan Rigney, pitching mainstay of the Chicago White Sox, starts wearing the blue of Uncle Sam's Navy tomorrow.

The 27-year-old Rigney, who evidently made no effort to obtain a commission, enlisted today at the Great Lakes Naval Training Station, and was inducted as a seaman, first class, which is comparable to a private in the Army. He was ordered to report back tomorrow to receive his uniform.

Whether he will be immediately available for Lieut. "Mickey" Cochrane's Great Lakes Navy baseball team, along with his other duties, was not disclosed by the naval officials. Like all other recruits, Rigney will be taught the fundamentals of seamanship and will join other "gobs" in the routine of marching and drilling.

Jimmy Dykes, manager of the White Sox, had regarded the big right-hander as a potential 21-game winner this season and his loss will be a serious blow to the Sox. He leaves the club at its season's peak. Getting the same smooth pitching and fielding they have had all season, but adding to it timely hitting they lacked while dropping 18 of their first 22 games, the Sox are in a winning streak.

Said Dykes:

"We'll miss him, but Uncle Sam can use him better than we can. He is a grand boy. I wish him lots of luck."

Rigney has been with the White Sox since 1937. His best year was 1939, when he won 15 and lost 8. His record this season was 3-3. In all, including yesterday's farewell, Rigney won 57 games and dropped 56.

The big, good-natured pitcher's final major league game for the duration was a brilliant 4-3 victory over Washington. He allowed but three hits and none after the third inning.

Proudly watching him in the stands was his wife, the former Dorothy Comiskey, the daughter of the late Lou Comiskey and granddaughter of Charles A. Comiskey, founder of the White Sox dynasty. She is treasurer of the club.

Concerning her husband's enlistment, she said:

"I am very happy about Johnny going into the Navy and he is, too."

After receiving the farewells from his teammates yesterday, Rigney sat down in front of his locker, fingered his glove for a second and then tossed it to young "Chuck" Comiskey, 16-year-old brother-in-law, who one day will direct the destinies of the White Sox.

"Keep it until I come back again," Rigney counseled.

Brewers Beat Construction Diamonders

Though outhit, 11-10, the champion Heurich Brewers, beaten in three of their previous four Post-Industrial League starts, regained some prestige yesterday when they turned back H. and J. Construction nine, 11-6.

The Brewers pushed over five runs in the first inning and were never headed as they added tallies in the fifth, sixth and seventh. Art Lacey was the winning pitcher and Brewer led the winning attack with two singles in three trips. Acquilino's homer for Heurich was the day's longest hit.

Little Hoyas Beaten, 8-4, By Bethesda

Its ninth victory in 13 games was recorded by Bethesda-Chevy Chase High baseball team yesterday when it downed Georgetown Prep, 8-4, in a seven-inning game at Garrett Park.

Each team scored four runs in the first inning, the Barons winning with a brace of runs in both the fifth and sixth frames. Myers, who started for the winners, could get only two men out in the opening inning and Shoemaker was called in. He allowed only one hit for the remainder of the game, striking out 12.

Harry Phillips, outfielder, led the Barons' 10-hit assault on John Showell, collecting a double and two singles in four times at bat.

Idaho Pitcher Hurls No-Hitter—With Variations

By the Associated Press

Pocatello, Idaho, May 18.—Tony Jeli, of Twin Falls, pitched one of the Pioneer League's rare no-hit baseball games last night to win from Pocatello, 4 to 2.

But that's only a small part of his feat. He also:

Fanned 11 batters.

Walked seven.

Made a wild pitch.

Latest Rookie Yarn Concerns Sporting News And Its Baseball 'Play'

Atlanta, May 18.—Obliging Jack Meagher, Auburn's football coach, is arranging grid schedules for naval air cadet teams next fall—and it frightens his colleagues . . . If he can't get an opponent, he just adds the game to his own schedule . . . Friends suspect the Tigers may play on the double next season—Wednesdays and Saturdays . . . The International Ice Hockey circuit will do business as usual, come winter, and no doubt this is cold comfort to the interested parties . . . Sudden thought: Wonder if Leon Henderson will slap a rationing order on wool-gathering chess-players?

Censorship regulations may puzzle baseball writers but not the Greensboro (N. C.) News . . . It explained a canceled game with a well-censored picture of Manager Heinie Manush beneath an umbrella, talking to his rain-coated park custodian . . . Add colorful reporting: For lack of a steel pin the tongue was broken, for lack of the tongue the starting gate couldn't be used. Charlotte Hall Halts Coolidge Rally, Wins, 7-6

Staving off a Calvin Coolidge High rally in the final inning, Charlotte Hall Military Academy nine marked up a 7-6 victory yesterday at the local diamond. It was the fifth triumph in 11 games for the Cadets.

After grabbing a 7-4 lead in the top half of the ninth, C. H. M. A. was forced to tighten down as the Colts put on a two-run comeback.

Entry Deadline For Schoolboy Golf Tomorrow

Schoolboy golfers, who have only six league matches left after the trio of contests scheduled today, must have their entries in tomorrw at 5 p. m. for the ninth annual Scholastic Golf Championship which runs Friday through Sunday.

Frank Emmet will close the entries tomorrow afternoon at Room 901, Washington Loan & Trust Co., or Republic 8200, extension 976. No post entries will be accepted.

The Washington Post trophy will go to the winner's school for a year while the champion will receive a replica. Alton Willett of Bethesda is defending champion.

Today's matches find Coolidge and Western meeting at Congressional; Anacostia at Central at Bannockburn, and Roosevelt and Wilson at Columbia. None hold any bearing on the titles as Roosevelt is public high titlist and Bethesda metropolitan champ.

Golfers at St. Albans Chased by Bulldozers

St. Albans, N. Y., May 18 (AP).—Golfers on the 120-acre St. Albans Golf Club went off their game today as mechanical bulldozers and diggers began tearing up the turf in preparation for the construction of a huge United States Navy hospital on the site.

Action in taking over the club greens was so swift that golfers and workmen met in mid-course while Harry T. Dolan, special assistant to the United States Attorney General, was in the Queens County clerk's office filing condemnation proceedings.

Local Bartender On Tomorrow's Wrestling Card

George Bruckman, wrestling bartender from the Washington Hotel, has been booked to face Jim Austeri, of up-State New York, in a special 30-minute bout on tomorrow night's show at Riverside Stadium featuring "Gentleman Lou" Plummer, of the United States Coast Guard, and Tommy O'Toole, the fighting Arizona Irishman. It will be "ladies' night" and service men's night.

Bruckman has impressed locally in four previous appearances, and in addition has scored a number of victories in other Eastern rings. He weighs 190 pounds, and is a product of the Central Y. M. C. A.

Promoter Turner completed his supporting card yesterday for his first Wednesday show in years. The change from Thursday to Wednesday was made out of respect for the Naval Relief Boxing Show.

In 30-minute matches Fred (Legs) Grobmier, the lanky Des Moines, Iowa, scissors king, will wrestle Rudy LaDitzi and Dick Lever, Plummer's companion from the Coast Guard, will oppose Dominic Serio, a newcomer from the Midwest.

Semiwindup honors will be turned over to Max Krauser, the Polish refugee grappler, and Milo Steinborn, the Memphis "Strong Man," both former Graeco-Roman European champions.

Marines Win, 8-6, In League Play

After ending its two previous games in deadlocks, the Marine Corps Headquarters nine yesterday chalked up its victory in the Departmental Baseball League. It put on a four-run, ninth-inning rally to beat Western Electric, 8-6, on the Ellipse.

"Lefty" Askenas struck out 15 men in going the route for the Marines.

Bethesda Pin Quintet Beats Lafayette

T. J. Condon, Submarines, was best pinsman in the Research Engineers League at New Recreation with his 118 game and 314 set that helped take a pair from the Rockets. The Machine Gunners rolled 438 for high game and 1238 for set. The Jeeps also won two games to go into a tie for the loop's lead with the Submarines, each having won five and lost one.

The Bethesda Bowling Center girls totaled 1715 in defeating the Lafayette women at Bethesda, the losers scoring 1570. Ruth Rothgeb's 149, 373; Alma Mehler's 138, 357; "Boots" Pettit's 142, 256; Ruth King's 122, 328 and Sydney King's 301 comprised the Bethesda individual totals while 139, 347 by Georgia Hays, Lillian Copeland's 324 and Barbara Clarke's 315 led the Lafayettes. A return match is scheduled for an early date.

The Pennettes of Penn Recreation scored a close victory on their home alleys over the Clarendon girls, the final score being 1535 to 1517. Madge Lewis' 132-333, and Capt. Mildred Brockdorff's 126-325 were best for the winners, while a 324 set by Aline Fairchild and a 314 by Helen Roberts led the losers.

Kelly, Hurlaways, had 141-352 to top the men in the Chief of Engineers-War Department Mixed League at Penn, with Ilene Harriman's 110-307 leading the women. The USO and Dreadnaught teams rolled highs with 519 and 1445, respectively.

Army and Navy In I.C. 4-A Meet

New York, May 18 (AP).—For the first time Army and Navy this year will be represented in the I. C.-4-A outdoor track and field championships, to be held at Triborough Stadium here May 29-30.

Meet Director Asa Bushenell said today the Middies have nominated 13 men for the event, and the Cadets two. The two service schools set ahead the date of their own dual meet from May 30 to May 27 to be free for the larger event.

Gymkhana Date Changed to May 31

Because of a mixup in dates, the Washington Saddle Club has advanced the date for its Gymkhana Horse Show to May 31, while the Bridle Trails Association's similar event will be held May 24. Horsemen from the two organizations are expected to compete on both events.

Capital Store Sales Up 35% In Four Months

With an upturn of 35 per cent, Washington department stores showed the second best sales gain in the area during the first four months this year. The local increase for April alone was 21 per cent.

Norfolk stores led the Fifth Federal Reserve Bank District in sales gains this year, the bank's statistical department reported yesterday.

Five stores reporting in Norfolk said that their sales were up 41 per cent from January 1 through April, as compared with the same period a year ago. The increase for April alone was 30 per cent.

Richmond department stores showed a gain of 20 per cent for the year so far and Lynchburg sales were up 21 per cent. Baltimore's gain was 31 per cent. The District as a whole showed an increase in sales of 29 per cent fo rthe four-month period. The April gain was 13 per cent.

Business Briefs Of D. C. Interest

Blanz on New Board

Wilfred H. Blanz, secretary of the American Building Association, Washington, received word yesterday from Fermor S. Cannon, president of the United States Savings and Loan League, of his appointment to the league's newly created committee on war policies and activities. Directors of the league created the new committee to be composed of representatives of 21 States, to cope with the challenge of total war to the savings and loan business.

Simultaneous with the notification came announcement of the first meeting of the committee to be held in Chicago, May 20-21, to consider immediate contributions which the business can make to the Nation's victory drive, both in expanding their sales of war savings bonds and their activity in financing housing in war industrial areas and in adding new patriotic services.

A. G. & E. Issue Opposed

Edward F. Colladay of Washington, member of the general protective committee for security holders of Associated Gas and Electric Co., announced yesterday that the committee had filed objections to the issuance of $65,000,000 of miscellaneous 'junior securities.' The committee represents fixed interest obligation holders of the utility holding company, which now is in the process of reorganization.

Gas Sales Records Set

Washington Gas Light Co. yesterday reported new sales records for April and the first four months this year.

April sales totaled 1,534,614 m.c.f. (thousand cubic feet), a gain of 133,859 or 9.56 per cent over the same month last year.

Plant to Triple Armor Output

Pittsburgh, May 18 (AP).—Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation's production of tank armor will be tripled by the end of the year with the completion of new facilities, corporation President J. L. Perry reported today.

The facilities, costing five million dollars, will be installed in a former tin mill which was converted to production of tank armor early in 1941, after 40 years operation as a tin mill.

Each tank armor set produced by the plant consists of more than 30 individual pieces of heat-treated prefabricated armor plate which are shipped to tank arsenals for assembly.

The expansion pdogram includes installation of 10 heat treating furnaces, three plate quenching tanks, 18 flame shape cutting machines and 31 flame softening machines.

Anaconda Reports Net Dip in Period

New York, May 18 (AP).—The report of Anaconda Copper Mining Co. and subsidiaries for the March quarter today showed consolidated net income of $9,960,516, equal to $1.15 a share on the capital stock.

For the March quarter last year consolidated net income was $11,631,722 or $1.34 a share.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, May 18 (AP).—Wheat prices retreated again today, losing more than a cent a bushel for the second consecutive session and reaching or nearing lows unequaled here in about six months.

Other grains sagged, with wheat, oats and rye selling at or near lows since last December.

Selling was inspired largely by the same factors that have been disturbing the market recently—the favorable new crop, scarcity of storage space and uncertainty about Government plans for disposal of surplus grain. Most wheat contracts have sagged more than 4 cents from the highs of last week.

Despite frequent rallies after the early decline, with short covering lifting prices at times near the previous close, wheat finished ⅞-1⅛ lower than Saturday; May, 1.18¾; July, 1.20⅝. Corn ⅛-⅜ down; May, 85⅝; July, 87⅞@88. Oats ¼-⅜ off. Soybeans 1¼-1⅞ down. Rye 1½-1¾ lower. Corn prices were the lowest since May 2.

Transportation Network Faces Crucial Test This Fall; Eastman Tackles Complex Job

The world's greatest network of waterways, railways and highways faces a supreme test next fall. The sinews of water and steel which carried pioneers bent on winning the West, and the ribbons of cement which helped to knit a continent into a united Nation face a crucial task in this Nation's war for survival.

The fall will bring the first big hump in the war job of America's railroads, trucks, buses, streetcars, barges, boats and autos.

Even in peacetime, October brings the "peak load" for the men whose job is getting goods and people from place to place.

This fall the job will be increased by "a terrific burden" of war work. War production plants will be hitting total production then, and the United States Army will be on the move as never before. The farmers' "food for victory" crops will be crying for movement to market.

Seeing that the goods and people of war keep moving to their posts across the country is the tough job of Joseph B. Eastman, veteran railroad expert of the Federal Government.

Like most experts on the production front, Eastman faces a complex job, made worse by scarce materials, scarce manpower and an increasing wartime load of work.

The effectiveness of enemy submarines in sinking ships along the coast has thrown even more goods and people onto the land-locked railroads, trucks and buses.

Eastman already has made it clear that "travel as usual" is out for the duration, and has called for "self-imposed restrictions on nonessntial travel" connected with such things as conventions, pleasure trips and vacations.

By forceful action he also has made it clear that priority on boats and boxcars may be assigned to the most necessary war goods.

What can be done by squeezing full loads into every vehicle was indicated recently when Eastman ordered a minimum pack for all cars carrying less-than-carload shipments. Through the heartening cooperation of the railroads a 31 per cent saving in closed freight cars loaded with such shipments (some 50,000 boxcars) showed up within two days after the order took effect.

The course of Eastman's policy can be gauged by a quick look at the eight orders he has issued so far. Here they are:

Order 1—Every boxcar loaded with less-than-carload merchandise must carry at least six tons of goods; after September 1, it must carry at least 10 tons. A carrier who fails to get a full carload within 36 hours must divert the merchandise to another carrier. Use of closed freight cars for shifting freight around within a city is banned where motor trucks can do the job.

Order 2—To conserve buses for troop movements and necessary civilian needs, streetcar companies are forbidden to substitute bus service for street car or train lines.

Orders 3, 4 and 5—Truckers are directed to cut out all trips with trucks not filled to capacity, and to conserve tires and equipment. While full loads are demanded, trucks must not be loaded beyond the capacity of tires to carry the load without excess wear. Roundabout routes of hauling must be avoided. Every truck must carry a load of goods on its return trip.

Order 6—Stores and others making local deliveries must cut their mileage at least 25 per cent a month, compared with 1941; in addition, they must cut out special deliveries and "call backs."

Order 7—To keep gasoline and chemicals needed in war production moving, all tank cars are put under the control of the Office of Defense Transportation. No tank car may be moved (with certain exceptions) without permission of ODT.

Order 8—To insure movement of vital iron ore on the Great Lakes, some 340 cargo ships are put under ODT direction. All grain movement on the Lakes is forbidden, except where special permit is granted. The order covers all ships capable of carrying iron ore.

Upturn Halts 7-Week Slide In Bank Loans

Business loans of banks turned upward last week after a seven-week downward slide.

The Federal Reserve Board said that commercial, industrial and agricultural loans of banks in 101 leading cities increased $20,000,000 to a total of $6,669,000,000 in the week ended May 13.

These loans had been climbing with few interruptions ever since the beginning of the defense boom, but the recent decline was believed due to repayment of some finance company paper and refunding of bank loans by security issues.

The board's 101-city member bank condition statement gave the following summary of assets and liabilities on May 13, together with the increase or decrease since the previous week and the corresponding week last year (in millions of dollars):

U. S. Debt Exceeds 73-Billion Level

By the Associated Press

The Government debt jumped $2,785,505,341 to a new record high of $73,434,700,147 in the first half of May.

One of the largest increases in any similar period in the Treasury's history, the new debt figure reflected speeded up borrowing to pay for war costs.

Principle factors in the debt jump were the sale of $1,250,000,000 of 2 per cent, 7-9-year bonds, approximately $920,000,000 of 2½ per cent, 20-25-year bonds, $317,868,779 of war bonds, about $100,000,000 of short term Treasury bills (in excess of the amount of bills paid off in this period) and $100,000,000 of tax notes.

Milk Output Rise 'Enough To Float Navy'

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 18.—Agricultural "assembly line" production figures of an astronomical character depicted today the gigantic wartime production of food products by America's six million farmers.

Every hour the American farm plant is turning out 6,486,000 quarts of milk, 5,236,000 eggs, 134 carloads of hogs or enough to fill 32 100-car trainloads a day, 88 carloads of beef and veal, 40 tons of peanut oil, 63 tons of soybean oil.

The figures were given by Fred S. Wallace, chief of the Agricultural Adjustment Agency, in an adddress before a meeting of all the State AAA chairmen, assembled to outline the 1943 production program.

Round-the-Clock Shifts

"And I want to emphasize that those hourly production totals are coming off the farm 'assembly line' 24 hours a day and 365 days a year," Wallace said.

Wallace said that the increases, alone, of milk were enough to float the whole United States Navy.

Farmers began the wartime production program April 3, 1941, he said, and last fall set 1942 production goals but revised them after Pearl Harbor, with the result that "we know the 1942 production goals will be met for practically all crops and we will go over them in many crops."

Wallace said this year's production program was "the greatest and the wisest" in the history of the Nation, wisest because agriculture was producing only the things actually needed and curtailing crops less essential to the war effort.

Supplies Emphasized

The Nation has one and a half billion bushels of wheat on hand, enough to last two years without further production, he said, and supplies of corn and other feed crops also are at high levels, despite the fact feeding has been at a record rate in the past year. There are 15,500,000 bales of cotton on hand and the Nation is steadily building up supplies of dairy products and concentrated foods, he added.

"We are able to produce so abundantly because we have a flexible farm program, an adjustment program, ever ready to produce according to need, and because it is a program run by farmers themselves," Wallace said.

Tin Use Limited To Eight Specific Civilian Items

By the Associated Press

The War Production Board yesterday limited the use of tin and terne plate to eight specific civilian items, forbidding all other uses except for Army, Navy and Maritime Commission contracts.

Possessors of the metals were notified that they must file an itemized statement of their holdings "so the material may be purchased from them and channeled into war production."

The permitted uses are:

For cans,* under limitations previously set forth.

For bottle and jar closures, only to the extent authorized by the closure conservation order.

For baking pans for institutions and commercial bakers. This use is limited to 1.25 pounds of tin plate per base box (about 100 pounds) and up to ¼ pound of electrolytic plate per base box.

For dairy equipment, hot dipped tin plate up to 3.30 pounds per base box.

For cheese vats, dipped plate up to 11 pounds per base box.

For gas meters, dipped plate up to 3.30 pounds electrolytic up to 1½ pounds, short ternes up to 1.30 pounds and long ternes up to 4 pounds.

For oil lanterns, short and long ternes with the same limits as for gas meters.

For textile spinning cylinders and card screens, dipped plate up to 1.25 pounds per base box.

Farm Credit Head Urges Extension

By the Associated Press

Albert G. Black, Governor of the Farm Credit Corporation, said yesterday the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation should no longer be considered an emergency set-up, "because its usefulness has been demonstrated for 10 years or more."

Black testified before a Senate banking subcommittee in support of a measure to extend the lending authority of the Farm Mortgage Corporation indefinitely."

"All talk about the land banks or the Mortgage Corporation monopolizing the mortgage lending field or contributing to inflation of land values is obviously nothing more than vicious, self-seeking propaganda," Black said.

The Farm Mortgage Corporation and all Federal Land Banks, Black said, handled less than 12½ per cent of farm mortgage lending in 1941.

Rally Marks 150th Year of N. Y. Exchange

By the Associated Press

New York, May 18.—Felicitated by President Roosevelt and other high Government officials, the New York Stock Exchange today had its sesquicentennial celebration in conjunction with Wall Street's biggest war bond rally.

To promote attendance at the rally—it drew a huge throng—the stock exchange suspended trading from 12 noon (E. W. T.) to 1 p. m. and banking and brokerage firms and other exchanges in the financial district gave employes time off to participate.

Lauded by Roosevelt

In a letter to Emil Schram, president of the stock exchange, President Roosevelt referred to some of the institution's historic highlights and said:

"It has been gratifying to me that the hysteria of the first World War has not been repeated and that our marketplaces this time have remained open.

"The members of the exchange, like millions of their fellow citizens, find their normal business life affected by stresses and strains of world-wide character. Yet it is important that we do not permit these difficulties to disrupt our security markets unduly.

"The continuation of an orderly market will be of vital importance both during the war and during the period of readjustment that will follow.

"You have an opportunity for great service and I am confident that in this you will not fail."

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., telegraphed good wishes and told Schram "in all its long and crowded past the exchange has never been of greater public service than it is today."

Secretary of Commerce Jesse H. Jones and Gov. Herbert H. Lehman were among others who sent congratulatory messages.

Postmaster General Frank C. Walker, the principal Government spokesman at the rally, said:

"We can all be proud of the fact that in the last 12 months the people bought more than six billion dollars of war bonds, but with the war costing 125 million dollars every day even this impressive total is not nearly enough.

"We have got to swing into all-out action on the home front to subscribe at least a billion dollars a month by July. Most of that must come from current income rather than accumulated savings if we are to avoid a rising cost of living.

"The Treasury has set its goal at 10 percent of each person's income for every working day. That is a most reasonable price to pay for the freedom that we shall preserve and the security that we shall obtain.'

Bond Support Pledged

Presiding at the rally, Schram said that "although you are honoring us by your presence, the real purpose of theis assembly is not to commemorate the anniversary of the New York Stock Exchange but to express devotion to our country in the most practical way possible—by pledging utmost support of the Government's victory finance program."

Asserting that the financial industry has become a part of the securities distribution organization of the United States Treasury, he declared "we have a double-barreled privilege—to invest in war bonds and sell them as well."

Other speakers included Winthrop Aldrich, chairman of the Chase National Bank, and Newbold Morris, president of the city council.

Lakes' Ore Transport Sets All-Time Peak

By the Associated Press

Iron ore shipments on the Great Lakes attained a new all-time peak of 8,581,740 gross tons up to May 1, the War Production Board announced yesterday, an increase of 23.9 per cent over the same period last year.

The spring shipment represented a substantial start toward WPB's 1942 goal of 89,500,000 tons, as compared to a normal movement of 50 million tons.

Maximum ore shipments from Lake Superior this year are of "vital importance," WPB said, to the continued high-level output of iron and steel.

Month's Tank Output Exceeds Previous War

New York, May 18 (AP).—W. H. Harrison, production director of the War Production Board, said today that more tanks were produced in the Nation last month than in the entire period of the World War. He did not give the comparable figures.

"Production is reasonably abreast of schedules," he told a war production clinic sponsored by the Brooklyn Chamber of Commerce. "I can think of no greater crime which any war plant could commit than the crime of consciously or unconsciously not doing their level best with the tools and machinery available, simply because some supplies, some priority preference on critical demand elsewhere, created some uncertainty to the future."

Stock Market Holds Part of Early Advance; Trading Curtailed by Anniversary Fete

New York, May 18.—Prices turned spotty in today's stock market after early rising tendencies generally failed to follow through but the list on balance managed to finish a shade ahead.

There were a half-dozen strong and weak issues at the close although minor fractional variations were the rule in most sections.

Dealings, sluggish from the start, were further curtailed by the suspension of trading from noon to 1 p. m. in order to permit members to celebrate the 150th anniversary of the stock exchange by participating in a big Wall Street war bond rally.

Transfers for the four hours totaled 216,620 shares compared with Friday's 5-hour aggregate of 257,120. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks retained a net advance of .1 of a point at 34.1 of 541 issues appearing on the ticker tape, 217 were up, 150 down and 174 unchanged.

Further cheering was news from Russia again served to prop speculative and investment sentiment but the question of taxes, earnings and dividends helped restrain many potential purchasers.

In the matter of dividends, du Pont fell 2 points on a total of 1000 shares when directors shaved the interim disbursement to $1 a share from $1.25 paid in March and $1.75 decalred in the four quarters of 1941.

United States Rubber preferred was up 3½ and Eastman Kodak 2¼, both on scanty volume. J. C. Penney gained 1½.

Clinging to minor advances were United States Steel, Youngstown Sheet, Union Pacific, Southern Railway, Texas Co., Pepsi-Cola, American Can, Goodrich, Woolworth, International Harvester, Sperry, Douglas Aircraft, Western Union, International Nickel, Allied Chemical, Johns-Manville, Caterpillar Tractor, Owens-Illinois and United States Gypsum.

Union carbide backed down 1¼ and lesser recession were shown for Bethlehem Steel, Chrysler, American Telephone, Pennsylvania, Chesapeake & Ohio, Montgomery Ward, United Aircraft, Oliver Farm, Standard Oil (N. J.), General Electric, Westinghouse, Anaconda and Phelps Dodge.

Bonds were mixed and commodities on the offside. At Chicago wheat gave up ⅞ to 1⅛ cents a bushel, corn was down ⅛ to ⅝ and hogs 10 to 15 cents in arrears. Cotton lost 80 cents to $1.05 a bale.

In the Curb, Chicago Flexible Shaft was up 2⅝, Humble Oil 1⅝, And N. J. Zinc 1½. A trifle in front were American Cyanamid, Phoenix Securities and St. Regis Paper. Sales amounted to 32,395 shares versus 46,525 last Friday.

C. & S. Expansion Cost Estimated At $43,700,000

New York, May 18 (AP).—Justin R. Whiting, president, said in the annual report to stockholders today that operating subsidiaries of the Commonwealth & Southern Corp. performed a vital service to the Nation in 1941 by expanding and utilizing their every power resource to the limit.

About $43,700,000 was sepnt on additions and improvements to properties of which $38,600,000 was for electric facilities, he said. A record electric output of 10,800,000,000 kilowatt-hours was thus achieved.

Whiting said this production of the 10 subsidiaries of the system was equal to about one quarter of all the electric power produced in Japan in that year.

As previously reported, the parent company earned $7,149,989, equal to $4.77 a share on the preferred stock, against $7,377,073, or $4.92 a preferred share, in 1940.

Whiting said the company's consolidated gross income in 1941 showed the widest gains over the preceding year ever recorded but the tax bill rose out of proportion to the increase in earnings. He warned that any further increase in the tax burden would reduce the company's income still further.

Freight Forwarding Put Under ICC Regulation

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt signed yesterday legislaion bringing freight forwarding companies under regulation of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Freight forwarding companies combine small shipments into carload lots to obtain lower freight rates, thereby effecting savings for small shippers. The companies will be regulated in a manner similar to other forms of transportation now under ICC jurisdiction.

G. M. Deliveries In April Show 17-Million Gain

New York, May 18 (AP).—General Motors Corporation estimated today it had delivered 112 million dollars worth of war materials to the United States and Canada during April, 17 million dollars more than in March.

The April deliveries brought the 1942 total to $369,479,371, or an aggregate approaching the total for the whole of 1941, which was $406,149,273.

Hourly rated factory employes, working on war materials, trucks, diesel locomotives and other essentials to the war program, totaled 185,446 in the week ended May 2.

The average number of both salaried and hourly employes on General Motors' payroll in April was 235,000.

Week's Steel Rate To Drop Slightly

New York, May 18 (AP).—The steel industry will turn out this week 1,685,000 tons at operations averaging 99.2 per cent of capacity, the American Iron & Steel Institutee estimated today.

Last week's production was 1,691,800 tons with the mills operating at 99.6 per cent and a month ago the tonnage was 1,657,900 tons and the rate 97.6 per cent.

For the corresponding week a year ago, with the steel industry's capacity less than now, operations were 99.9 per cent and output 1,612,300 tons.

Socony Paints Dark Picture To Employes

By the Associated Press

New York, May 18.—The Socony-Vacuum Oil Co. today painted a black picture for the oil industry in a letter to its employes in Eastern marketing areas, explaining the difficulties imposed by transportation shortages.

"Its costs are way up, its civilian market is curtailed and it has had to rearrange its entire business," the letter said of the industry in general. "Since the beginning of the year Socony-Vacuum's earnings have shown an abnormally sharp decline each month."

Giving a specific example of the enormous increase in costs brought on by use of tank cars instead of tankers to bring oil to the East Coast, the letter said:

"In the month of April Socony-Vacuum moved an average of over 70,000 barrels a day by railroad tank car to the East Coast area. It is estimated that these shipments involved an extra transportation cost alone to the company of about $75,000 a day.

"This does not include other extra costs which the company has had to assume in rearranging its barge and pipe line shipments, in readjusting its refinery operations and in buying products wherever available."

New York Cotton

New York, May 18 (AP).—Cotton futures prices fell 80 cents to $1.05 a bale today, on a wave of selling touched off by Washington developments.

Particularly unsettling to speculative quarters was the word that President Roosevelt and Agricultural Secretary Wickard were firm in their position that the Government should have a free hand for disposing of Government-owned surplus commodities.

On the downswing prices approached the May 1 lows and were $2 to more than $3 a bale under the seasonal highs recorded April 6.

New Orleans, commission houses and local operators were on the selling side. The major support came from trade demand on a scale down.

Mrs. Emma Glenn, Poet, Author, Dies; Funeral Today

Mrs. Emma Lee Glenn, well known in literary circles for her poetry, died yesterday at the home of her son, James A. Glenn, 1329 Ingraham Street Northwest.

Mrs. Glenn was a native of Ohio and the widow of James Glenn, State legislator and jurist of Coschocton, Ohio. She was descended from William Paterson of New Jersey, a signer of the Constitution of the United States.

Mrs. Glenn's published poetical works included two books, "Like a Meteor," 1938, and "Graven Beauty," 1941. She was a member of the National League of American Pen Women, the Creative Writing Group of the American Association of University Women, and the League of Republican Women of the District of Columbia.

Funeral services will be held today at the S. H. Hines funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth Street Northwest, at 6 p. m. Burial will be at Coshocton Thursday.

Lloyd Gaines Funeral Services To Be Tomorrow

Gaines, member of the Board of Assessors of the District, who died Sunday after a brief illness at his home, Clifton Terrace Apartments, will be held tomorrow at 1 p. m. at the S. H. Hines funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth Street Northwest. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

A member of the Board of Assessors for the last 13 years, Mr. Gaines also was a member of the Stansbury Lodge, Brightwood Commandery No. 6; Brightwood Chapter, R. A. M. No. 9; Royal Order of Jesters: Almas Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S.; Tall Cedars of Lebanon.

He was in the real estate business before joining the Board of Assessors.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Alma F. Gaines; a daughter, Jeanne Alma Gaines; a son, Lloyd F. Gaines, jr.; a sister, Mrs. J. T. Nussear, all of this city, and his father, W. B. Gaines, of Akron, Ohio.

Dr. Rose, Howard Trustee, Buried

Funeral services for Dr. James E. Rose, pastor of the Mount Olivet Baptist Church of Rochester, N. Y., and a member of the board of trustees at Howard University, were held yesterday in Rochester, N. Y., with Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, president of Howard University, officiating.

Dr. Rose, a graduate of Howard University and the Colgate-Rochester Divinity School, served as pastor of Mount Olivet Baptist Church for 21 years. He was elected a member of the board of trustee at Howard April 8, 1941.

Besides his A.B. and B.D. degrees, received from Howard University and the Rochester Theological Seminary in 1913 and 1916, respectively, Dr. Rose received his D.D. degree from Howard University in 1931.

13.5 Million Barrels Of Fuel Oil Saved By Conversions

By the Associated Press

Petroleum Coordinator Ickes announced yesterday that East Coast fuel oil consumers who have voluntarily converted to coal and other fuels are saving heavy fuel oil at the rate of more than 13,500,000 barrels annually.

Ickes said the total savings was an increase of 2,700,000 barrels since May 4 and that 368 concerns have enlisted in the conservation program. Deputy Coordinator Davies estimated that probably another 15 million barrels a year could ultimately be saved by further conversions.

Deputy coordinator said that war industries that are producing important materials and those that cannot convert "must be provided with the necessary quantities of fuel oil required to maintain the highest rate of production."

He said about 135 million barrels of black oil are used normally each year in East Coast industries, apartment houses, and hotels and other consumers. These oils are not the same as the light fuel oil used in homes.

Food Machinery Orders Banned

By the Associated Press

War Production Board yesterday prohibited manufacturers of dairy, coffee grinding and food slicing and grinding machinery from filling any orders not bearing WPD approval.

Approved orders include those of the Army and Navy, certain other Government agencies, the United Nations, lend-lease, and orders bearing military priority ratings.

Several types of exempted transactions were listed, most of them dealing with transfers of used or reconditioned machinery through repossessions, bankruptcy procedures, mergers, leases of plants, and so on.

No restriction was imposed on deliveries of less than $1000 worth of parts for repair purposes, and deliveries in any amount were permitted in case of an actual breakdown.

A good idea of our hemispheric solidarity can be gained from the fact that tonight, over WJSV and the Columbia network, you'll hear five presidents of nations this side of the world when, from 9:30 to 11 p. m., C. B. S. dedicates its new Latin-American network of 76 stations.

In addition, from Washington, you'll hear Vice President Wallace; Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles; the Mexican Minister Plenipotentiary, Dr. Luis Quintanilla; the Guatemalan Minister Plenipotentiary, Dr. Adrian Recinos; Nelson Rockefeller, director of the Office of Inter-American Relations, and, oh yes, still another president, William S. Paley, president of the Columbia Broadcasting System.

They'll all be telling you, and the world—for this is being sent all over the world—of the benefits to be derived from the linking of the Latin-American network with its North American counterpart, C. B. S.

Noted names from the musical and dramatic words will also take part. Just to give you an idea, here are some of the names:

From Hollywood: Edward G. Robinson, Ronald Colman, Rita Hayworth, Dick Powell, Lauritz Melchior, Rosita Moreno, Jinx Falkenburg, and Leith Stevens Orchestra.

From Washington: Olga Coehlo, El Charro Gil Trio, Eva Garza.

From New York: Melvyn Douglas, Bidu Sayao, Juan Arvizu, Howard Barlow and the Columbia Broadcasting Symphony.

If names make news, this should be about the newsiest thing you've read in a long time!

The Post Radio Highlights

10:30 a. m., WINX—Sylvia Milrod's guest is Mrs. Frank Linzell, who will discuss Child Welfare under our defense set-up.

7:30 p. m., WWDC—Cecil Lane presents Sir Gerja Baj-Pai, Agent-General of India, who discusses "India Today."

7:30 p. m., WRC—Gracie Allen prepares for her concert debut and George Burns prepares to leave. Another session with the riotous pair. Paul Whiteman's Orchestra and songs by Jimmy Cash.

Bridge

When Olive Peterson, Philadelphia, held the South cards of today's hand at a six-spade contract, she managed to take all 13 tricks although an opponent held four trumps including the queen against her. She made the small slam with an overtrick by developing a grand coup against East.

The king of clubs was opened, and South ruffed in her hand. Since five spades were outstanding, declarer realized that a trump finesse should be taken, so she led a small heart to dummy's ten and followed with dummy's lone trump, successfully finessing the jack in the closed hand.

The spade ace was cashed and declarer discovered that 4-1 split.

As Mrs. Peterson still held the king, ten of trumps over East's queen, nine, she saw that she could make seven-odd if she could avoid being forced to lead up to East's trump holding. This meant she had to reduce her trump holding until it equaled East's.

The jack of hearts was led from the closed hand and overtaken with dummy's queen, and a club was ruffed on the way back, reducing declarer's trumps to three. The queen of diamonds was next played and overtaken by the king in the North hand, Mrs. Peterson again ruffing a small club in her hand. She then held only the king, ten of spades; East had the queen, nine.

South played the diamond jack, winning with dummy's ace, and led a good diamond. If East ruffed, declarer would overruff, draw the last trump and claim the balance. If East refused to ruff, South would discard the ace and then the king of hearts on another diamond and eventually force a ruff, taking the trump king and ten for the last two tricks.

Declarer made six spades with an overtrick.

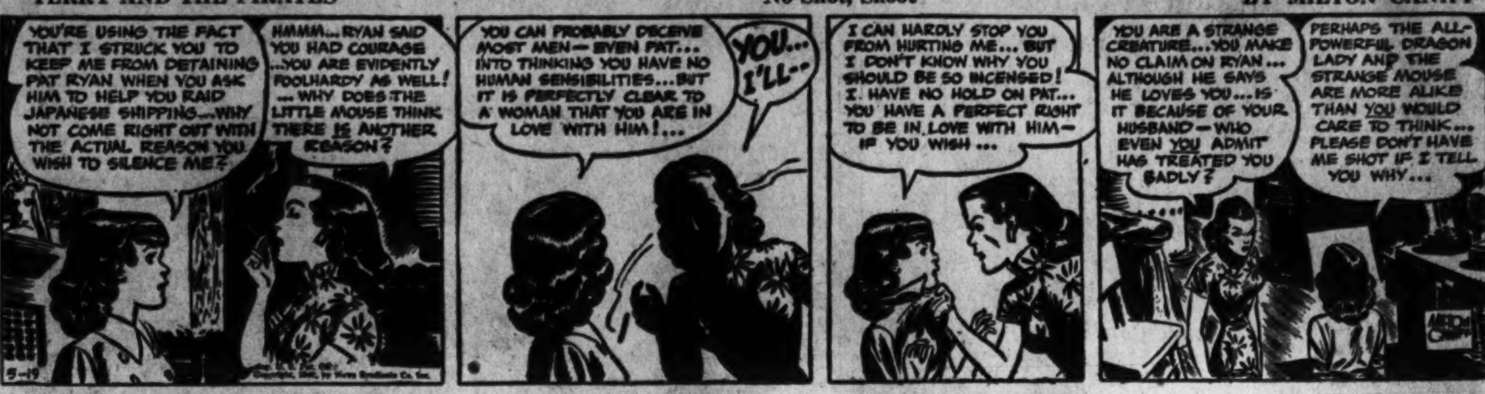
TERRY AND THE PIRATES No Shot, Shoot BY MILTON CANIFF



YOU'RE USING THE FACT THAT I STRUCK YOU TO KEEP ME FROM DETAINING PAT RYAN WHEN YOU ASK HIM TO HELP YOU RAID JAPANESE SHIPPING...WHY NOT COME RIGHT OUT WITH THE ACTUAL REASON YOU WISH TO SILENCE ME?
HMMM...RYAN SAID YOU HAD COURAGE ...YOU ARE EVIDENTLY FOOLHARDY AS WELL! ...WHY DOES THE LITTLE MOUSE THINK THERE IS ANOTHER REASON?
YOU CAN PROBABLY DECEIVE MOST MEN—EVEN PAT... INTO THINKING YOU HAVE NO HUMAN SENSIBILITIES...BUT IT IS PERFECTLY CLEAR TO A WOMAN THAT YOU ARE IN LOVE WITH HIM!...
YOU... I'LL--
I CAN HARDLY STOP YOU FROM HURTING ME... BUT I DON'T KNOW WHY YOU SHOULD BE SO INCENSED! I HAVE NO HOLD ON PAT... YOU HAVE A PERFECT RIGHT TO BE IN LOVE WITH HIM—IF YOU WISH...
YOU ARE A STRANGE CREATURE...YOU MAKE NO CLAIM ON RYAN... ALTHOUGH HE SAYS HE LOVES YOU...IS IT BECAUSE OF YOUR HUSBAND—WHO EVEN YOU ADMIT HAS TREATED YOU BADLY?
PERHAPS THE ALL-POWERFUL DRAGON LADY AND THE STRANGE MOUSE ARE MORE ALIKE THAN YOU WOULD CARE TO THINK... PLEASE DON'T HAVE ME SHOT IF I TELL YOU WHY...

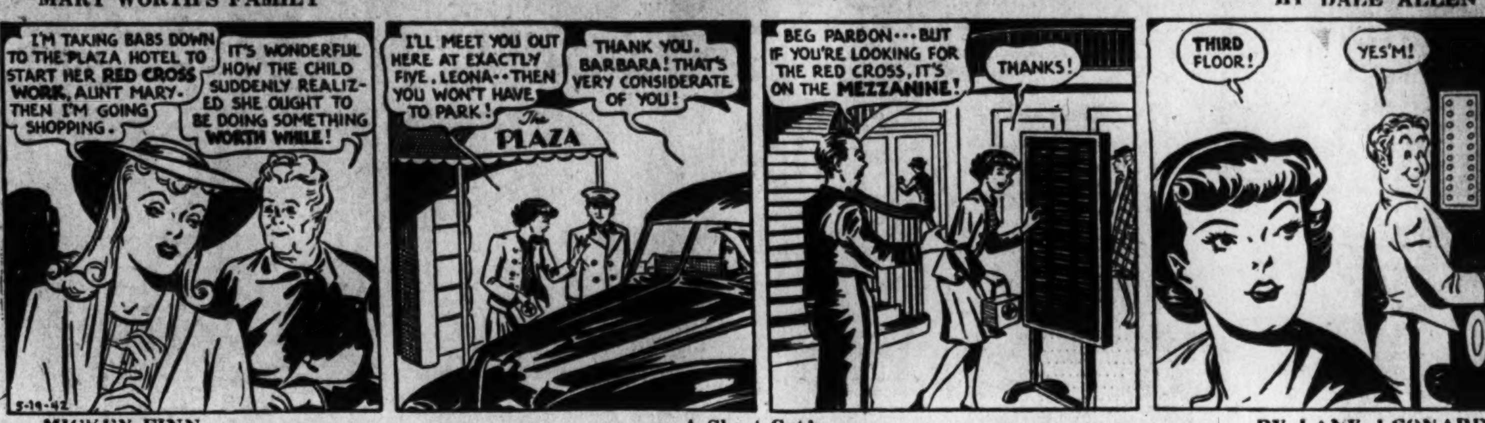
MARY WORTH'S FAMILY BY DALE ALLEN



I'M TAKING BABS DOWN TO THE PLAZA HOTEL TO START HER RED CROSS WORK, AUNT MARY. THEN I'M GOING SHOPPING.
IT'S WONDERFUL HOW THE CHILD SUDDENLY REALIZED SHE OUGHT TO BE DOING SOMETHING WORTH WHILE!
I'LL MEET YOU OUT HERE AT EXACTLY FIVE, LEONA--THEN YOU WON'T HAVE TO PARK!
THANK YOU, BARBARA! THAT'S VERY CONSIDERATE OF YOU!
The PLAZA
BEG PARDON...BUT IF YOU'RE LOOKING FOR THE RED CROSS, IT'S ON THE MEZZANINE!
THANKS!

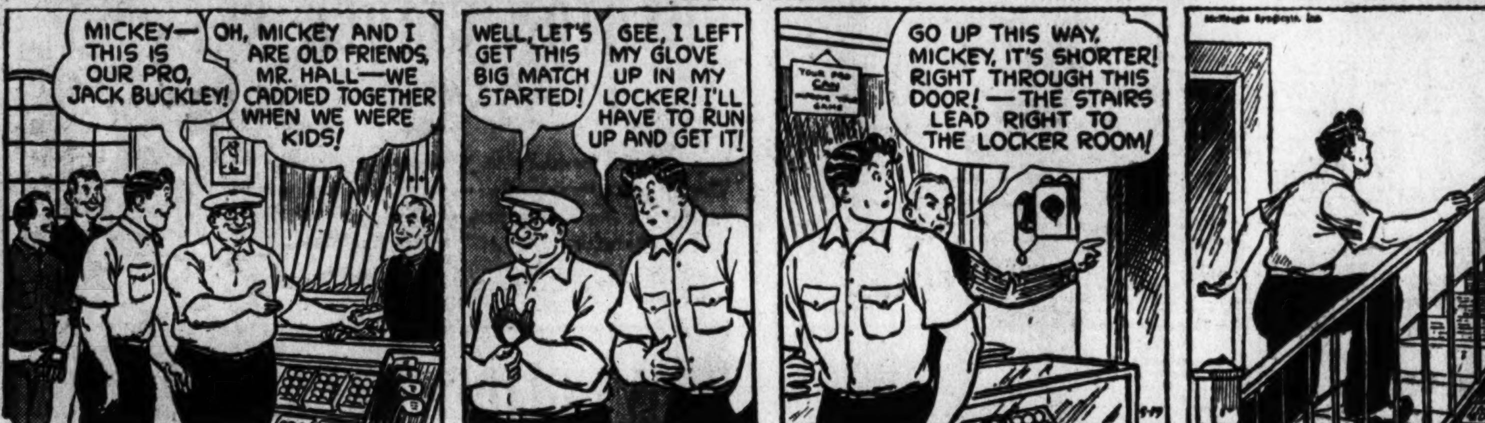
MICKEY FINN A Short Cut! BY LANK LEONARD



MICKEY—THIS IS OUR PRO, JACK BUCKLEY!
OH, MICKEY AND I ARE OLD FRIENDS, MR. HALL—WE CADDIED TOGETHER WHEN WE WERE KIDS!
WELL, LET'S GET THIS BIG MATCH STARTED!
GEE, I LEFT MY GLOVE UP IN MY LOCKER! I'LL HAVE TO RUN UP AND GET IT!
GO UP THIS WAY, MICKEY, IT'S SHORTER! RIGHT THROUGH THIS DOOR!—THE STAIRS LEAD RIGHT TO THE LOCKER ROOM!

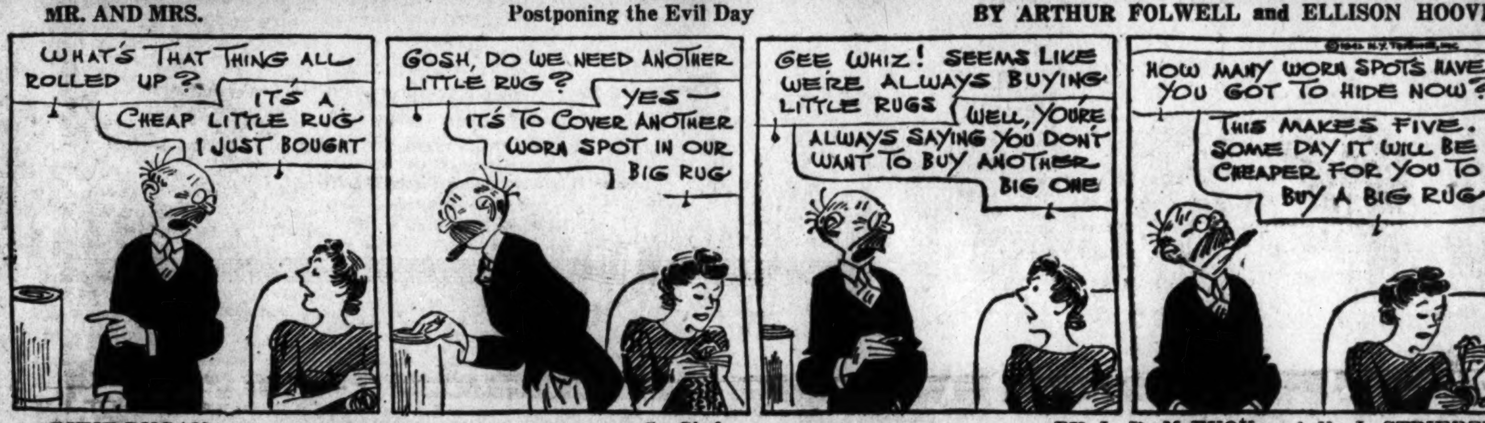
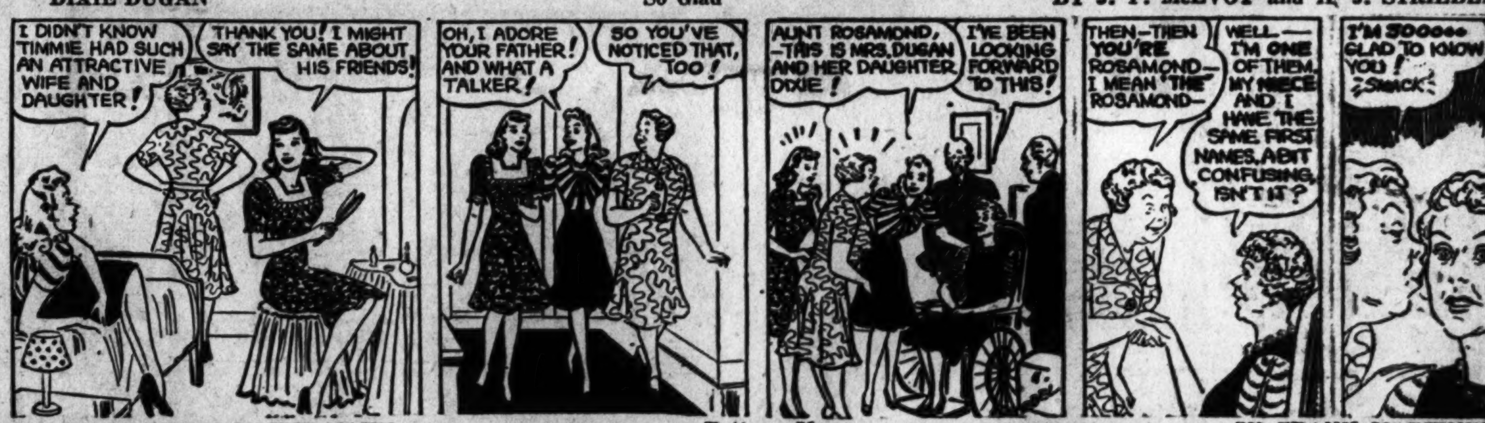
MR. AND MRS. Postponing the Evil Day BY ARTHUR FOLWELL and ELLISON HOOVER



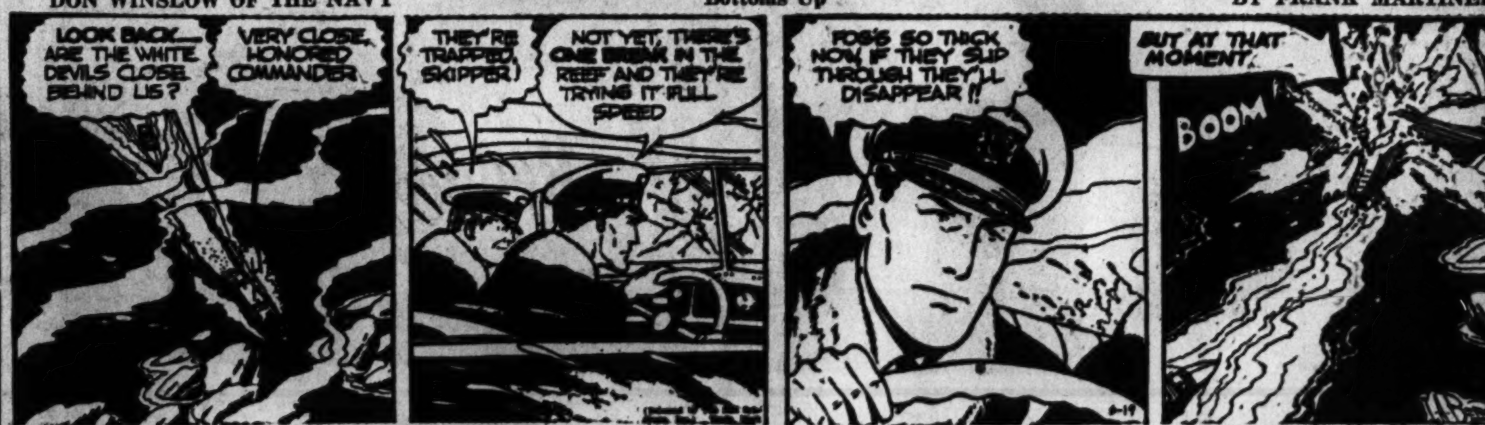
WHAT'S THAT THING ALL ROLLED UP?
IT'S A CHEAP LITTLE RUG I JUST BOUGHT
GOSH, DO WE NEED ANOTHER LITTLE RUG?
YES—IT'S TO COVER ANOTHER WORN SPOT IN OUR BIG RUG
GEE WHIZ! SEEMS LIKE WE'RE ALWAYS BUYING LITTLE RUGS
WELL, YOU'RE ALWAYS SAYING YOU DON'T WANT TO BUY ANOTHER BIG ONE
HOW MANY WORN SPOTS HAVE YOU GOT TO HIDE NOW?
THIS MAKES FIVE. SOME DAY IT WILL BE CHEAPER FOR YOU TO BUY A BIG RUG

DIXIE DUGAN So Glad BY J. P. McEVOY and H. J. STRIEBEL



I DIDN'T KNOW TIMMIE HAD SUCH AN ATTRACTIVE WIFE AND DAUGHTER!
THANK YOU! I MIGHT SAY THE SAME ABOUT HIS FRIENDS!
OH, I ADORE YOUR FATHER! AND WHAT A TALKER!
SO YOU'VE NOTICED THAT, TOO!
AUNT ROSAMOND, —THIS IS MRS. DUGAN AND HER DAUGHTER DIXIE!
I'VE BEEN LOOKING FORWARD TO THIS!
THEN—THEN YOU'RE ROSAMOND—I MEAN "THE" ROSAMOND—
WELL—I'M ONE OF THEM. MY NIECE AND I HAVE THE SAME FIRST NAMES. A BIT CONFUSING, ISN'T IT?
I'M SOOOOO GLAD TO KNOW YOU! SMACK

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY Bottoms Up BY FRANK MARTINEK



LOOK BACK... ARE THE WHITE DEVILS CLOSE BEHIND US?
THEY'RE TRAPPED, SKIPPER!
NOT YET, THERE'S ONE BREAK IN THE REEF AND THEY'RE TRYING IT FULL SPEED
FOG'S SO THICK NOW, IF THEY SLIP THROUGH THEY'LL DISAPPEAR!!
BUT AT THAT MOMENT
BOOM

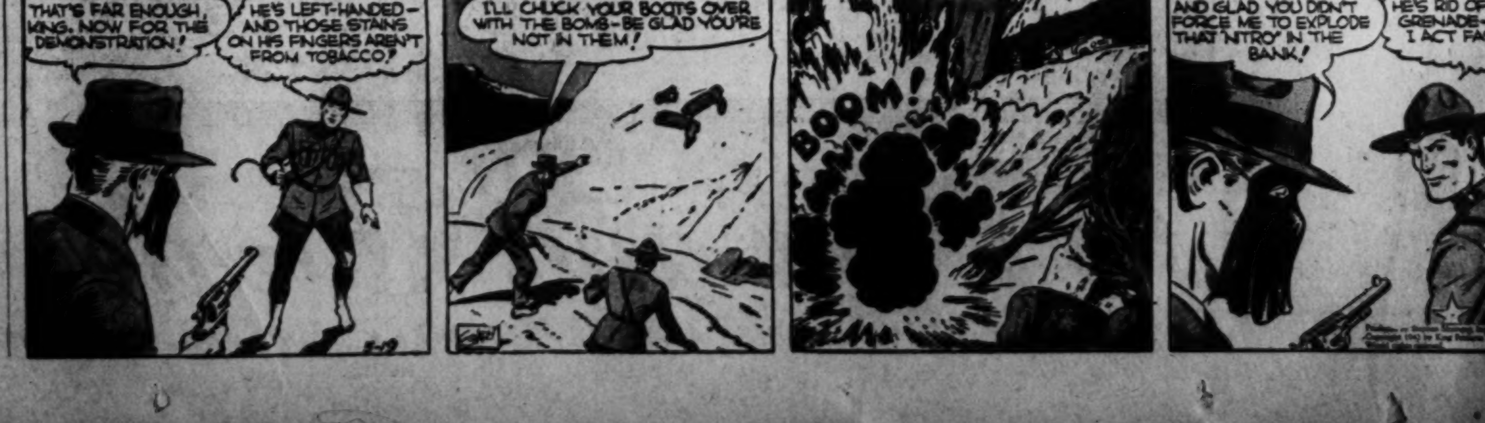
WAHOO NO KETCHUM BIG IDEA, STEVE!--WHY YOU WANTA SWIGGUM TEA WITH SINGER, TOY FAN?
DON'T WORRY, CHIEF--I'M NOT PLAYING FALSE TO MINNIE-HA-CHA!
BUT I FIGURE THIS GAL IS AN AGENT FOR THE ENEMY, AND THAT, SOONER OR LATER, SHE'LL LET SLIP SOME INFORMATION ON THAT SECRET SUBMARINE BASE!
UGH! SOONER MAY BE TOO LATE FOR US!
THERE'S HER HOUSE, OVERLOOKING THE HARBOR!--WAIT A MINUTE ISN'T THAT SNYPE, THE BEACH-COMBER WITH HER?
THEY MAKE BIG TALK--WE SLIP CLOSER, HUH?
I STILL SAYS, TOSS 'EM IN TH' BLEEDIN' BAY, AFTER WE TYKE THEIR MONEY!
NO, NO! THE BODIES WOULD BE SEEN! AFTER THEY DRINK "THE TEA OF FORGETFULNESS" WE MUST PUT THEM ON BOARD A FISHING BOAT--THEN--FAR FROM SHORE--WHERE THE HUNGRY SHARKS WAIT--YESS-SS?

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED



THAT'S FAR ENOUGH, KING. NOW FOR THE DEMONSTRATION!
HE'S LEFT-HANDED—AND THOSE STAINS ON HIS FINGERS AREN'T FROM TOBACCO!
AND GLAD YOU DIDN'T FORCE ME TO EXPLODE THAT "NITRO" IN THE BANK!
HE'S RID OF THE GRENADE—IF I ACT FAST—
